GEORGETOWN NEWS.

Collected by Republican Reporters.

Two mechanics working on the slate roof of the new Georgetown College building had a narrow escape from death last Friday. The scaffolding which supported them gave way and they slid down the steep roof. One of them went over the eaves, but luckily fell on the projection of an abutment ten feet below, without injury. The escape of the other was even more miraculous. There was a hook at the edge of the roof, intended for holding a snow-board, and his clothing caught in this hook holding him just as he reached the verge. The men were rescued from their perilous positions.

Saturday afternoon, while Robert Williams, a colored man, was carelessly driving on Bridge street, between Congress and Jefferson streets, his wagon ran into Mr. George Offutt's buggy, breaking its wheels and otherwise injuring the buggy. Williams, in attempting to escape, jumped from the wagon, and falling to the ground, severely injured his right knee. After receiving attention at the hands of Dr. Suter, he was removed to his home in Montgomery County, Md.
