Largest Legitimate Morning Circulation in the District.

WASHINGTON, NOVEMBER 15, 1879.

Two weeks from Monday Congress meets. Advertisers should take notice.

It is very doubtful if the murderous Utes can be delivered up to justice until Secretary SCHURZ appears on the ground in person and makes the demand in his native tongue.

THE Democrats still treat New York as a doubtful State. We admit their wisdom in this instance, but are rejoiced to add that intelligent Republicans have no doubts at all in the premises.

INASMUCH as the New York Times cannot do otherwise than recognize the election of Governor CORNELL, it is solacing its spleen by an effort to belittle his plurality. In other words, it is getting even by making mouths at the Governor.

THE story is revived that MONTGOMERY BLAIR—independent of ONGREE WATTARSONG—will soon start a TILDEN organ here in Washington. But it will be a second fiddle to ONGREE'S Courier-Journal and both be fed from the bar'l all the same.

DR. FELTON, who represents the Seventh Georgia district in the House, has "cut loose" from the Democratic party again. He will stay "loose" until the next House Bourbon caucus meets in Washington. That's about the length of his Independent tether.

THE HON. JOHN GOODE, of Virginia, is a Debt-Payer, so-called. At the recent election in that State every county in his Congressional district was carried by the Readjusters. Now it appears that Mr. GOODE will have another kind of a debt to pay—the obligation of being at the outs with a majority of his constituents.

THE Republican members of the Virginia legislature were elected as Republicans. If they inconsistently join the Bourbons under any sort of inducement, they will simply repeat the blunders of the past, by which they have lost so many opportunities to maintain an effective, independent and aggressive political organization in that State.

THE Indianapolis Journal withdraws Senator McDONALD, of Indiana, from the Presidential race, for the reason, as it declares, that any man who would, in the face of the recent elections, get up and spend an hour in discussing the Federal election laws, which he was the first man to avail himself of in Indiana, is too big a noodle to receive our support in even a Democratic convention.

THE Burlington Hawkeye is responsible for the statement that DENNIS KEARNEY is soon to take an editorial position on the Okolona States. The States will then become the organ, not only of BOB TOOMBS, who is willing "to try it again," but of all hoodlums and seditious political carnivora in the land. In fact, that journal, BOB TOOMBS and DENNIS KEARNEY combined would hitch up as the boss tandem team of political hyenas the world over.

IT is quite possible that the revived SEYMOUR boom is being managed without regard to the fact that insanity is a misfortune which is hereditary in Mr. SEYMOUR'S family. When he declared at the New York convention of 1868, "Your candidate "I cannot be," it is said his thoughts were then dwelling upon the admonitions of his physicians. But he was crazy enough, even under those circumstances, to accept the nomination, and may be again.

THE Graphic makes use of Senator CARPENTER'S admonitions regarding the next Electoral count as a basis for a suggestion that 1880 would "be a good time to begin "another era of good feeling," and adds: "Let all parties next year unite upon one "man for the Presidency—each of them "would take him if he knew they would "accept their overtures—and thus avoid "the unpleasant and may-be dangerous "contingencies which Senator CARPENTER "depicts in the near future." Now, who is the "he" referred to here if it is not General GRANT? But the Graphic mistakes its man if it imagines for a moment that General GRANT would accept the overtures of any class of men or section of people, except upon the sound basis of thorough National Republicanism.

No single State in the South has been subjected to such radically revolutionary political influences during the past three years as Florida. We mean by this that a sufficient Northern immigration has intruded itself into its citizenship to change the political aspect of its voting population very materially. In fact, the Democratic managers are wisely alarmed at the prospect of certain defeat in the next National campaign in that State. For this reason they propose, as in Louisiana and Mississippi, to change the law regarding the choice of Presidential Electors so as to provide for their election by the present (Democratic) legislature. As our readers are already informed, an extra session of that body is soon to be called, ostensibly to attend to certain canal affairs, but really to make this revolutionary change in existing laws whereby to deprive the people of their rights and practically to set aside the will of the majority. But we admonish these manipulators to take heed lest they stumble. Their plans are detestable and in violation of the principles of good Government; but the power rests with the Republican party to offset them. We have control to-day of a sufficient number of States in the North in which the same game can be successfully played to elect in January next the requisite number of Presidential Electors to secure the success of the Republican nominee, whoever he may be.

IF the Republican members, or any number of them, of the Virginia legislature go into the MAHONE caucus to co-operate with the Bourbon Readjusters in the organization of that body they will make asses of themselves. The greed of office, whetted by promises of a division of the spoils, may tempt them, but if they are foolish enough to yield to such inducements they will certainly deserve the disappointment they will earn and be subjected to. MAHONE and his gang are Democrats from their boot-heels up to the crowns of their slouch hats, and they have no use for Republicans of any shade or predilection, except so far as they may be available as tools for the time being. Our friends will pursue the part of discretion if they stand aloof and let MAHONE or the other party come to them. They hold the balance of power, and should not throw it away recklessly.

THE history of the Washington correspondent of the Baltimore Sun in regard to New Jersey politics is a little defective. He says of Mr. VOORHIS' district that it "is "usually Democratic by 2,000 majority." A careful examination of the record would have shown the fallacy of such a statement, and would no doubt have suppressed it. In 1872 W. W. PHELPS was elected as a Republican by 2,715 majority, and was unpopular with the stalwart Republicans. In 1874, when the Democratic tidal wave swept over the country, CUTLER, Democrat, was elected by a bare majority of seven. In 1876 CUTLER was elected by a majority of 1,152. In 1878 VOORHIS, Republican, was elected by a majority of 804, with the Republican vote divided between the Nationals. Prior to 1872 the district had been steadily Republican by some 2,000 majority. So this usually Democratic district by 2,000 majority turns out to have never been Democratic but twice in fifteen years, and then by majorities ranging from seven to eleven hundred votes.

SENATOR CHANDLER'S SUCCESSOR.

Hon. FERNANDO C. BEAMAN, the newly appointed Senator from Michigan to fill the unexpired term of the late Senator CHANDLER, was one of the fathers of the Republican party. When the first State mass convention was held in the grove at Jackson, on the 6th of July, 1854, where the new party was baptized the Republican party, Mr. BEAMAN was the first on the list of twelve vice-presidents selected among the permanent officers of that convention, and the name of his townsman, the present Governor of Michigan, C. M. CROSWELL, appears on the list of secretaries of the convention. Senator BEAMAN was a Republican Presidential Elector for Michigan in 1856, casting his vote for FREMONT and DAYTON. During the previous ten years he was prosecuting attorney for six years, and judge of probate the remaining four. In 1860 Senator BEAMAN was elected to represent the First district of Michigan in Congress, and he was re-elected to the Thirty-eighth, Thirty-ninth, Fortieth and Forty-first Congresses, so it will be seen he served in the House of Representatives for ten years—the most important decade in the history of the National legislature and of the country. Mr. BEAMAN is now sixty-five years of age, having been born in Vermont, June 28, 1814. It will be seen from this brief review of his public career that the interests of Michigan and of the Republican party will be safe in the hands of the new Senator from Michigan.

PROSCRIPTIVE INTOLERANCE.

It is gratifying to know that there are laws and tribunals in this country where individual rights can be protected against proscriptive intolerance and organized persecution. It is too often the case that strong organizations, like the labor unions, for instance, when they fail to make individual interests entirely subservient to their own purposes, whether just or unjust, they become vengeful and make war by way of punishment under impulses that are not altogether necessary or justifiable, and against which there should be proper protection under the law. These remarks are incited by a recent circumstance that has fallen under our notice, and which in our judgment was brought to a most righteous judgment under the action of the law. The case to which we refer is that of a Catholic priest at Holyoke, Mass., who ex-communicated a member of his flock, PARKER by name. He went further and forbade his people to patronize the offender. PARKER kept a livery stable, and in consequence of the priest's interdiction his business fell off to a depressing extent. He sued the priest for damages, and the jury has just awarded $3,433 damages, payment of which will be a lesson the priest will be likely to remember. Judge BACON charged the jury that the exact words of intimidation alleged in the complaint must be proven, and if these words were uttered only as threats they were to be considered as malicious in law, and if uttered in fact as malicious in fact, and they entitled the plaintiff in either case to a verdict. The law of this country, said he, does not allow ecclesiastical interference with a man's business, after he had been excommunicated from the church, which is the extent of the punishment which ecclesiastical authority can inflict; nor is ecclesiastical authority allowed to interfere with any one to deter him from giving his patronage to that business. This reads like sound sense, and Judge BACON is doubtless right in giving it as sound law. The venerable prelate is entitled to his religious belief in a free country, and to all the rights and privileges it involves, but judgment is the Lord's, and he should not exercise his religious faith as an engine of vengeance beyond its proper jurisdiction.

THE COINAGE OF THE SILVER DOLLAR.

It is intimated that Secretary SHERMAN will, in his annual report, recommend to Congress that the coinage of silver dollars shall cease. This is all very well now, for the people do not want them and they are only lumbering the vaults of the Treasury. When the silver-dollar bill passed Congress there was a necessity for this coin to ballast gold and keep it under control so that when resumption should come it would not be master of the situation. It was not only an important factor in accomplishing resumption, but it assured that event without difficulty or interruption, and has enabled the Government and the banks to answer every demand made upon them for coin in the redemption of their paper. Gold and silver have reposed in the Treasury vaults waiting for circulation, but the people prefer paper that will command coin when needed, until that necessity arises, and hence they prefer that the means of redemption should sleep quietly in its resting-place rather than to be encumbered with it to any considerable amount.

The people of the United States now have the best currency known to the marts of trade and commerce. Every dollar of our own paper now in circulation bears a coin value anywhere in the United States of one hundred cents. There are no rates of discount, no brokerage fees, no shaving shops for money, and he who receives a dollar is fully assured of its worth, as indicated on its face. The despised "dollar of the "daddies" has borne an important part in securing for the country this satisfactory state of affairs, and having performed its mission, no one objects to a suspension of the coinage and its temporary repose as collateral for the redemption of our paper whenever coin is called for. This is the mission of silver and gold so long as convenience prompts the people to prefer paper in the transaction of business. If we have coin enough, allied to popular confidence, to float our paper circulation under any emergency, then there is no call, perhaps, for a further coinage of either gold or silver, though a suspension of coinage may interfere to some extent with the mining of the precious metals, and depreciate gold and silver mining stocks. Our mining interests will be likely to suffer more largely than the general business interests of the country, from a suspension of the work of coinage. This may, however, be temporarily obviated by the coinage and issue of, say, $50,000,000 more of halves, quarters and dimes, for the accommodation of the people in the ordinary transaction of business. These are popular because they are convenient with those who deal in small sums, and who prefer small coin to paper. The coinage of silver to repose in the vaults of the Treasury to a reasonable and proper extent is no evil, but a necessity to secure the Nation against runs for coin and embarrassment which might ensue, perhaps, if gold was the solitary factor in redemption. So long as there is an abundance of silver there can be no corner or speculation on gold.

UNDER TILDEN and ROBINSON, rings have been smashed, corruptionists kicked out, economy introduced into all departments of the State's vast affairs, and taxation has been cut down one-half.—Post.

This may be believed where ignorance rules, but the people of the State of New York know the above propositions to be untrue. The history of TILDEN and ROBINSON'S administrations is fresh in the minds of the voters of New York, and their verdict in the late election is the best possible evidence that they have lost confidence in TILDEN and ROBINSON and their pretended economies and reforms. They have proved deceptive and delusive, and the people, having tired of being cheated by hollow pretense, have put them aside. That is all there is of that.
