PUNISH THE FRAUD.

There is nearly a ton of contraband mail matter lying in the Washington postoffice awaiting payment of postage that the democratic congressional committee attempted to smuggle through the mails fraudulently. The committee have been duly notified of the withholding of this matter, and the reply made by Secretary WALKER to that notice is clothed in about the same nonchalance that attended an arrested shirt thief when overtaken by a detective. Some friend asked him, "What did you say when "arrested?" "Say?" he replied; "Great "heavens! what could I say? I had the "shirt on." The hungry colored man who steals a chicken to appease his hunger is arrested and dragged to prison, while the secretary of the democratic committee, when reminded of his great attempted fraud, replies complacently, "I do not think "this matter worth replying to." The law, when violated, is no respecter of persons, and certainly no public officials should be. Arrests in this case should be made and let the law have a chance of vindication at the proper tribunal. The law has no power to assert itself except through its ministers, and of course it will sleep so long as they sleep. The guardians of right cannot afford to wink at this great fraud, which no doubt has been practiced for months, to the robbing of the postal revenues of thousands of dollars, and now that detection has come let punishment follow.

THE SIXTH VIRGINIA DISTRICT.

While we have no disposition to interfere with the primary action of the republicans of the sixth congressional district of Virginia, or any other district in that state, but, on the contrary, holding it to be the part of duty to sustain republican nominations there and elsewhere, we may be pardoned, perhaps, if we make a suggestion or two in the absence of any movement in the sixth district looking to a republican nomination. That district was largely democratic in 1878. The majority of TUCKER, who has again been placed in nomination, was at that time 3,373 as against an independent, no republican running. Since then the readjuster party has been organized, and has developed sufficient strength to warrant the nomination of Mr. FRAZER by that faction. The republicans, regarding their chances for carrying the district quite hopeless, have thus far taken no action toward a nomination. In this connection, therefore, we will venture the suggestion that a republican nomination will render Mr. TUCKER's election certain, while to abstain from a nomination on the part of the republicans renders the chances of the election of Mr. FRAZER very encouraging. As a choice between these two candidates we regard FRAZER's election very desirable, for the reason that while TUCKER is a bourbon free-trader, Mr. FRAZER is a pronounced high-tariff advocate, and rates his views on that question above all others in his creed of political sentiments. This renders his candidacy far more attractive to republicans than that of Mr. TUCKER, and will afford abundant reason why they can support his election in the absence of a regular republican nomination; and under the alternative that one or the other of these two candidates will be elected, if we were a citizen of that district we should not hesitate in declaring for the readjuster candidate.

THE HANCOCK CABINET.

Should TILDEN chance to get his hands into the national exchequer as its chancellor the shades of unpaid internal revenue taxes and railroad wrecks defend the country! Then, should General MCCLELLAN be placed at the head of the war portfolio, the government could sell its armament and invest in pick-axes and spades for earth-works which would encircle the realm. He is not a Digger Indian, but he is the most remarkable digger general known to history. He would sooner dig than fight at any time. Then General B. F. BUTLER is suggested for the position of attorney-general. In view of this sudden turning to that source for the law officer of an ex-confederate cabinet, it may not be amiss to call attention to a school book that is furnished for the study of all the youth of the southern section of our common country. It is entitled "New School "History of the United States of America, "from Earliest Discoveries to the Present "Time, by J. S. BLACKBURN, Principal of "'Potomac Academy,' Alexandria, Va.," etc. On page 428 is found the following precious morsel of history that in 1880 is being taught the children of American citizens by the same party which proposes BENJAMIN F. BUTLER as attorney-general of the United States:

ATROCIOUS CONDUCT OF GENERAL BUTLER.

New Orleans experienced an unhappy fate in the hands of the federals. General B. F. BUTLER of Massachusetts, to whom the command of the city was given, used his power to push the iron point of oppression into the very souls of the people.

He had been an enthusiastic democrat, and at the beginning of the sectional struggle had indorsed the action of the seceding states. At the first manifestation of the war feeling at the north he faced about and became an unrelenting enemy of the south. As military commandant at New Orleans his conduct was almost without parallel. The most studied modes of tyranny and torture were used to bow the heads and break the hearts of the defenseless citizens. He and his officers unblushingly plundered the city, robbing the elegant mansions of its princely merchants and shipping their stolen wares to points in the north. Women were torn from their homes and cast into prison for laughing at federal soldiers.

A young man by the name of MUNFORD was hanged for pulling down the American flag before the city had surrendered.

The city was informed by a general order that all females who in any way manifested sympathy for the south would be exposed to the insolence of BUTLER's soldiers. It was there that he received the name of "Beast," and by the common consent of Europe and America that name has become historical.

This is democratic history, which is now taught the youth of the south to overcome and placate the prejudices and hates that were generated by the war. This is the democratic photograph of the character of the man that party now presents as attorney-general of the United States. Great SCOTT! This, no doubt, is what LEE and JACKSON would do if living.

DEMOCRATIC DISCONTENT.

The democrat has a weary pilgrimage through the present presidential campaign. His victories are won by the greenbackers at the north and by the shotgun, rifle, tissue ballots and false courts in the south. He prides himself on victories he has never won, and accepts advantages that come to him through agencies that shame civilization, humanity and common honesty. This is his political estate, and yet he is not happy; and why should he be? Nothing real surrounds him or marks his action. He knows that he subsists upon fraud and thrives in his political enterprises only as dishonorable agencies in his behalf dive deep into the pool of crime and entail upon society atrocities that cause humanity to shudder. Knowing this, he dwells in sour discontent that quarrels with passing events as they transpire.

Senator CONKLING has filled the democratic heart with painful anxiety since the opening of the pending presidential campaign. He was by far too tardy to please their impatience. He did not leave his private affairs to care for themselves, and rush like a horse to battle into the opening fray. He took his own time to prepare his business affairs for an absence, and to furnish up and put on his armor for the conflict. When he was ready he went forth to battle, and the first blast of his soul-stirring trumpet has carried dismay throughout the entire camp of the democratic Philistines. He smote them hip and thigh, and since the meeting at the academy of music last week there has been a wail of disappointment, discontent and unhappiness coming up from the centre to the circumference of the democratic camping ground. They are more unhappy over his having broken silence than they were during the weary months of his quietude, when they were stirring him up with their sharp sticks to take the field. They thought they would like to see him active without any just appreciation of the power they were arousing against themselves. They have at last found "That cruel something unpossessed," which "corrodes and "leavens all the rest," and now they are sadly bewailing the consequences of their own eager impatience to arouse the lion from his lair. They now feel the power that they long have sought, and flee from the contest torn and mangled by its relentless grasp. Senator CONKLING has spoken, and it was a sad occasion for the democratic party when he broke silence and tore the covering from their real character and laid it bare.

LIGHT IN TENNESSEE.

The regular democrats in Tennessee have become thoroughly alarmed at the prospect of the probable election of the republican candidate for governor. Up to this time they have been busy in fighting the bolting democratic candidate for governor and have only now awakened to the fact that Judge HAWKINS, the republican candidate, has been making an active and prosperous canvass, everywhere reviving and organizing his party. The democratic executive committee have therefore requested their candidate for governor, Judge WRIGHT, to cancel his appointments and insist upon joint meetings with the republicans. The letter of the committee says:

The defection in the democratic ranks, occasioned by the bolt of a few assumed party leaders, greatly imperils democratic success in the gubernatorial election. We cannot disguise the impending danger. The republicans, not blind to this fact, are not only using every effort to make assurance doubly sure in the race for governor, they are also exercising their cunning and exerting their utmost energy to run in between opposing democratic tickets for the legislature, and thus secure a majority of the general assembly. The committee, deeply impressed with the importance of the crisis, after the maturest consideration, determined to withdraw your present appointments for east and middle Tennessee and to request that, after concluding your appointments in west Tennessee, you will accompany in joint discussion the candidate for governor of the republican party.

The democratic organ, the Nashville American, indorses this determination and shows that the alarm is general in the democratic camp. It says:

We have urged this course for several days because we have seen that to allow HAWKINS to go unopposed was to clear him by an overwhelming majority, and such was the advice which we received from all quarters.

These signs of democratic uneasiness in a state which gave 47,000 democratic majority in 1878 are peculiarly cheering to republicans everywhere. As the democratic factions will vote for the same electoral ticket we cannot reasonably hope to carry the state for GARFIELD, but we can rely upon electing two republicans to congress, which will be a gain of one. Should Judge HAWKINS be elected governor it is altogether probable that the legislature will also be republican, which would give us a United States senator in place of JAMES E. BAILEY.

THE attack made by the democratic organ yesterday morning upon the integrity of the republican congressional committee, by alleging that the postmaster has stopped matter sent to the postoffice by it for the reason that it was unfrankable and stamped with a frank, instead of being written with a pen, is simply a broad lie, without the slightest foundation in fact. Having been detected in a fraud, these more than frauds attempt now to conceal their own crime by charging a similar one against others. It won't do. There is no alternative now left for the postal authorities but to proceed under the law and secure a full punishment for the offenses known to have been committed. So long as the democratic committee has let its dog loose upon the committee of the other party let justice take its course. "Let no "guilty man escape."

THE Valley Virginian gives another extra twist to WADE HAMPTON'S great "per-"plexity," just by way of letting him know that he is not forgotten:

Senator HAMPTON'S position is really pitiable. He has blundered along from bad to worse, until he now finds himself confronted with two statements over his own signature, which directly and flatly contradict each other. In his letter above he tells Mr. HUTCHINS that "I was not only unaware of these facts when I replied to Mr. YOST, but I did not even know you had written anything on this subject." In Mr. YOST'S letter to Senator HAMPTON the extract from the Post was inclosed, and it was in reference to that extract that Senator HAMPTON replied "I have never seen the extract purporting to be taken from it (the Post) until this moment," and yet he now confesses to have written that extract himself. The most charitable judgment that can be passed upon Senator HAMPTON'S extraordinary conduct is that he is not only "perplexed" and "discouraged," but entirely demented.

THE Charlotte (N. C.) Observer, in view of the probable success of GARFIELD, asks:

Whither are we drifting?
Into CENTRALIZATION.
What does that import?
The destruction of state and local government.
Then what?
Despotism.

Now let us transpose the case. Suppose HANCOCK succeeds in placing the southern brigadiers in control of the government, where will we be drifting then?

Into a state rights interpretation of the constitution.
What does that import?
The destruction of the national feeling.
Then what?
Secession and rebellion.

CONGRESSMAN AIKEN of South Carolina is promising the voters of his district that in case HANCOCK is elected they will be relieved of the tax on whisky and tobacco. At the same time he assures them a tariff on imports is a robbery of the farmer for the benefit of manufacturers. Where the revenue of the government is to come from he does not inform his hearers, but as he denounces the bonded debt as the work of radical robbers and camp-followers, he leaves the inference it is to be disposed of as has the "radical" debt of his own state. It is one of the things to be "wiped out."

THE articles we have published under the head of "The Solid South and How it "was Made Solid" are from the pen of Mr. O. D. BRAGDON of Louisiana. They are but the summary of a series of tables prepared by him which exhibit in the very strongest light the systematic suppression of the colored vote in the southern states, which tables were too elaborate for reproduction entire in our columns.

FROM the democratic means elicited by Senator CONKLING'S speech it is easy to see who is hurt.

POLITICAL NOTES.

GENERAL MAHONE is very unpopular with the bulldozers and ballot-box stuffers of South Carolina. They think he is playing a dangerous game, and one likely to be learned by liberals further south.

THE southern press may writhe under Senator Conkling's exposure of that section, and may howl themselves hoarse in denouncing him as a liar, but they cannot rail the truth from his statements. That stands unimpaired, for it cannot be impeached.

THE New Orleans Democrat has the state and city printing, amounting to $30,000 a year. Such public printing is usually thought to be a "fat take." The Democrat, however, is very anxious to get some one else to take it. Both state and city are bankrupt, the printers are on a strike for wages, and the Democrat is unhappy.

THE Knoxville Republican has the following upon certain democratic relations: "State Rights has heretofore borne two children—Nullification and Rebellion. Jackson choked Nullification to death in his giant grip. Lincoln transfixed Rebellion with three millions of loyal bayonets. But State Rights, whose Husband is the Democratic Party, still lives, and the next child she bears—what will be its name?"

A TELEGRAM from Pittsburg, Penn., to the Philadelphia Press says: "The democrats made a great boast of 'floppers' as officers of their meeting on Saturday night. To day many of the alleged floppers are hastening as fast as possible to indignantly repudiate the claim that they have flopped. Others of the list have been democrats all their lives. In all the list there is not one who has a straight republican record who has not already repudiated the democratic claim of a flop."

THE democrats of Pittsburg recently placed the names of 150 republicans in the list of vice-presidents of a democratic meeting to convey the idea that changes to that extent had occurred. Since the publication of the names the papers have been filled with repudiations. Every name thus presented who has voted the republican ticket within five years has promptly vindicated its republicanism by promptly repudiating its use. The democrats are masquerading now, but it's "love's labor lost."

THE school board of Monroe county, Miss., requires that every applicant for a teacher's position in the public schools shall sign this declaration: "I certify that I have been a democrat, and I will hereafter support the candidates of the democratic party and work with that party." To this is appended: "The above contract is required before I approve and contract, ———, superintendent." As this is published in the Charleston News and Courier, its authenticity needs no further support.

THE democratic papers of Indiana are laboring to fix Mr. De Pauw out of his position as a supporter of Garfield and Porter, by publishing cards to the contrary, purporting to have been signed by himself. His attention being called to this attempt to misrepresent his real position, he says: "There is not one word of truth in the statement. I never wrote any card or other statement of the kind. I am for Garfield and Arthur and Porter and the republican state ticket." Mr. De Pauw certainly ought to know.

THE democrats are teaching sectionalism in all the common schools in the south through the aid of rebel histories of the war, and their presses at the north continue to cry aloud—"there are many republicans, and they are among the best men in the party, who are heartily sick of sectionalism." What hypocrisy! Let these hypocrites burn their own sectional school books before they charge upon the republicans "an unalterable determination to keep alive and in full vigor all the passions of the war."

A CORRESPONDENT warns the republicans through the columns of the New York Commercial Advertiser that Mr. W. H. Barnum is in Indiana doing all that is possible to obtain a fusion between the democrats and greenbackers. There are more difficulties in the way of this now than previous to the Maine election, as the greenbackers have stiffened up in their demands. They claim not less than 50,000 votes in a total of 425,000. Whether there is fusion or not the republicans have a hard row to hoe. They are full of fight, however, and well deserve success in any event.

THE St. Nicholas for October has made its appearance, laden with a rich table of contents for the discussion of the young people. It is like old wine—it grows better and better with age.

THE International Review for October has come to our table. Among its interesting and valuable contents is a labored paper on "The Census: Its Methods and Aims," and another entitled "A Bird's-eye View of Our Railroad System," which is full of information and interest. It is an excellent number.

His success was so great that he has resolved to make Washington his PERMANENT RESIDENCE. Among TESTIMONIALS of successful treatment already published he will name the following: TO THE VETERANS EMPLOYED AT BOHLER'S REPRESENTATIVE LAUGHAM, C. H. DAVIDGE, Esq., T.
