KNEW HIM.

Home they brought her sailor lad,
Grown a man across the sea,
Tall and broad and black of beard
And hoarse of voice as he may be.

Hand to shake and mouth to kiss,
Both he offered ere he spoke;
But she said, "What man is this
Comes to play a sorry joke?"

Then they praised him—called him "smart,"
"Tightest lad that ever stept;"
But her sons he did not know,
And she neither smiled nor wept.

Rose a nurse of ninety years,
Set a pigeon-pie in sight;
She saw him eat—"'Tis he! 'tis he!"—
She knew him—by his appetite!

A BAPTIST DIVINE

Tells a Few Plain Truths About ex-Senator Conkling.

Rev. Dr. Justin D. Fulton, D. D., of Brooklyn, one of the most distinguished divines of the Baptist faith, writes a highly interesting letter to the New York Sun relative to the outrageous falsehoods indulged in by a minister of his same faith against ex-Senator Conkling at a Baptist meeting a few evenings since in New York. He says: The charge made by the Rev. Wayland Hoyt in the Baptist ministers' conference concerning the Hon. Roscoe Conkling is so unjust and untrue that I beg permission to correct it. First, it is known that Mr. Conkling does not in any way "incarnate the spoils system." As Mr. Garfield said to him and said about him, Mr. Conkling was the one Senator that did not ask any favors. The night they were together, as Mr. Conkling was going home, Mr. Garfield said:

"Mr. Senator, you have not referred to appointments."

"No, Mr. President, I have not. As you did not ask advice I did not volunteer it; though, to tell you the truth, my pockets are burdened with petitions from the best men in the city of New York, and I should be glad to unload them."

Mr. Garfield said: "Mr. Senator, please keep them two weeks longer. In the meantime nothing will be done concerning the offices in New York. At that time I shall be glad to consult with you relative to the New York appointments to be made. Those already made are believed to be satisfactory to you."

This was at twelve o'clock at night. The next day Mr. Robertson was appointed collector instead of Merritt, made consul to London. Mr. Conkling was surprised. Friends hurried to Mr. Garfield and told him he had made a mistake little short of a crime. The joint letter of protest was written and sent. Mr. Garfield had been influenced to pursue the course taken by considerations which seemed to him wise. He said, however: "I am not infallible. I may have made a mistake. Ask the two Senators and Mr. Arthur to come and talk it over."

It is said that two of the gentlemen were ready to go. The third got on his hat and received a telegram in cipher, read it, took off his hat, and said, "It is too late."

Then came the resignations. Then followed the betrayal of the friends on whom Mr. Conkling had leaned. Then the gong sounded for patronage, and the hungry came leaping and climbing over each other, putting their noses in the trough, pushing in above the eyes and drinking through the ears, and Roscoe Conkling became the object at which all the arrows of disappointed ambition were fired, until now he is called by a Baptist minister the "incarnation of the spoils system," when to those who know about it Roscoe Conkling is the one man who will not meddle with patronage. It is said that when the deluge of mud-throwing began there was not in the custom-house or post-office a man who had secured his place through the influence of the senior Senator from New York.

Secondly—Mr. Conkling is accused of being mute concerning the assassination of the President. This is so untrue and so unjust that I regret, for the sake of the one who uttered it, that it should have been spoken. Think of the facts! Messrs. Conkling and Arthur were on the Albany boat when the President was shot. It had been delayed by the fog. On the landing the telegram was handed them. Mr. Arthur sank into a chair, overcome with emotion. That day Mr. Conkling did his best to support his friend, and saw him in due time on the train for Washington.

The Monday morning after the assassination I passed one or two hours with Mr. Conkling, and a sadder man I never saw. The article, "To whom it may concern" had been printed. New York boiled like a caldron. Mr. Conkling half written a dispatch expressing his sympathy. The paper was handed him charging the crime upon him. He tore up the dispatch and went to Washington, called at the White House with Senator Jones, and left his message of sympathy for the President with Mrs. Garfield. From that moment on all that vituperation, injustice, malice, forgetfulness of favors, and hatred because of disappointments in obtaining them could do to injure the fame and break the heart of Roscoe Conkling has been done.

For myself, I am not in any way moved by favors shown me to write this letter. I have known and loved Roscoe Conkling for years. I have been urged by friends who knew of this friendship to write and ask him for favors. Not one such request was ever granted. But I could not respect my manhood if I did not cry out against the injustice being done a man who to-day must be mute, but who will yet be heard and honored by the American people as before.

THE STALWARTS CONVERTED.

To the Editor of THE REPUBLICAN:

One of the peculiarities of humanity is the natural tendency of every individual of the family bimana to say "I told you so." I have noticed in my peregrinations and meanderings about this City of Magnificent Distances and all that sort of thing that my fellow-men have come to the conclusion that they will prepare themselves to use this stereotyped phrase as soon as the new Cabinet is announced. They have decided, as a matter of course, that the President will choose Mr. Conkling as one of his Cabinet counselors, or that he will choose some one that will stand instead of Mr. Conkling, even as certainly as a pronoun stands instead of a noun.

Even the usually astute Buell, of the Critic, has cried out in a double-leaded squeal that Senator Lapham is to be called to a Cabinet position in order to allow Governor Cornell to appoint the terrible and dreaded Mr. Conkling to fill the vacancy thus created in the Senate.

And why not? What is the objection to such an arrangement if it suits the President? What quid nunc can complain if this or a similar arrangement should be made? Why should any one complain if President Arthur should do something to favor the man "who made his nomination at Chicago possible?" Who is prepared to say that Mr. Arthur would have been mentioned for the Vice-Presidency, much less nominated almost by acclamation, had it not been for Roscoe Conkling? Can the querulous old maid of the Tribune, or Half-Breed widow, complain now of that which they applauded in General Garfield? Which one of the bastard crew which filled space, time, and all patience with plaudits for Garfield because he favored the renegade who made his nomination possible will now come forward and cat his own sentiments without sauce and say that Mr. Arthur should not do the same thing because his name is not Garfield?

Hypocrisy sometimes overleaps itself and becomes hypercritical in the vain endeavor to make wrong things right, and then afterward trying to make right things wrong. This manifestation of the hypocrite is peculiarly palpable at present in the asinine attempt of certain pseudo-journalists to prove that what they said last May and June was right and that their complaints just now are in accord with their renegade actions, speech, and writing of the past.

Give us a rest, gentlemen. Let the President be President; and if he chooses "to reward the man who made his nomination at Chicago possible," let him do so. All we of the Stalwart, true-blue, reliable, 366 crowd will stand by and shout "Amen!" to what you said three months ago. We are converted to your way of thinking. Let us now be baptized and confirmed. Receive us as brothers. DUNBAR.

A Very Proper Belief.

To the Editor of THE REPUBLICAN:

We believe that when a man is elected to office by the votes of the Republican party as a Republican, and in performing the duties of said office he suddenly becomes so extremely meritorious that he receives the entire approbation of the Democratic party, that the aforesaid office-holder is too mean to be a Republican and just mean enough to be a Democrat. We believe that the issues between the two great parties to be of such magnitude that it is utterly impossible to form an honorable coalition of sentiment. In short, we believe that a man cannot consistently belong to both parties at the same time.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

LETTERS OF MADAME DE REMUSAT. FROM THE FRENCH. By Mrs. CASHEL HOEY and Mr. JOHN LILLIE. New York: D. Appleton & Co. Washington: W. H. Morrison.

The letters embraced in this volume are selected from those written by one of the most brilliant women who ever graced the French capital, to her husband and son during the period from 1804 to 1813. These letters give a most excellent picture of the condition of Paris during the frequently recurring periods of the absence of the court, and narrate the incidents of the writer's attendance at different times subsequent to the divorce upon the Empress Josephine. The letters do not deal with the political and military events which followed the proceedings of Napoleon in regard to Spain, but give the reader an insight into the history of the French, showing Paris at home, in low spirits and financial difficulties, pervaded by the dull discontent of a people in a state of constant suspense, and the court, no longer brightened by the presence of the sweet and gentle Josephine, oppressed with gloom and daunted by the morose temper of a harsh master, whose luck had begun to turn.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL.

Stock and Bond Quotations—Baltimore and New York Produce Markets.

The following observations on the transactions in the financial market yesterday, together with opening, highest, lowest, and closing quotations, are furnished by the banking-house of H. D. Cooke, jr., & Co., 1429 F street, Washington, D. C:

W YORK STOCK MARKET.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5, 3:15 p. m.—The market opened weak, and on free sales for both long and short account continued to decline until the close, the last prices being the lowest of the day. There was a rally about noon, but it was short lived, and was due principally to the covering of shorts induced by money being somewhat easier than on the opening of business. The decline ranges from ¼ to 3 per cent. for the general list. The rate for money at the opening was 1-16 to ⅛ in addition to 6 per cent., and continued to demand at that until late in the day, when it declined to 6 per cent. The ease, however, did not check the decline, and the market was weakest when money was loaning at 6 per cent. Near the close the fact that the banks had been called on for their quarterly statement was used to depress prices. This latter is singular inasmuch as the statement is called for up to October 1, and the banks are now more free to loan than when they were expecting the call. Holders of stocks are demoralized, however, and any rumor has great effect on so feverish a market. Governments declined ¼ per cent. for the 4s and extended 5s.

WALL STREET GOSSIP.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5, 10 a. m.—There was a large crowd of the Wall street people at the Windsor Hotel last night discussing the stock market, and while the general sentiment was bearish, the cooler-headed operators thought if the market should open greatly depressed this morning that stocks would be a purchase. Many thought the extreme lowest prices caused by the raid at the close yesterday were manipulated by the same parties who were assisting the stringency in money, and both were for the purpose of buying for another rise. Sage was at the Windsor and said the ½ per cent. rate for funds late in the day yesterday was caused by the negligence of brokers in supplying themselves earlier, and he thought the high rates would terminate in a day or two. He said he bought Lake Shore yesterday afternoon. Henry N. Smith thought the market was going lower, and argued that the cornered grain market in Chicago would prove a very serious matter, even after it had been broken, because it had destroyed the English demand already, and Europe would now draw largely from Russia instead. Mills and Cammack declared the whole list was a good short sale, and Cammack's brokers were said to have been large sellers of Lake Shore yesterday afternoon. A prominent Broadway broker who was in the room all day yesterday said that the principal stocks sold yesterday after eleven o'clock were mainly for short account, and the short interest made was very large. The sales of the day before, on the contrary, were long stocks. There was some good buying late in the day, it was stated, by traders, who expect to make 2 and 4 per cent. within forty-eight hours on the rise. Keene has increased his shorts in Western Union, and was a prominent seller of Lake Shore and Michigan Central yesterday. The meeting of the Southwest pool will be held in Chicago to-day, if not further postponed. A Philadelphia telegram says that there is now no sort of doubt that Mr. Vanderbilt has really secured stocks enough to control the Reading road, and his ultimate plan will be to pay off the floating debt, taking as security preferred stock or deferred bonds. His interest in the property will checkmate the proposed connections with the Baltimore and Ohio, and will also prevent the road from falling into the hands of the Pennsylvania Central. A Hartford special says Mr. Vanderbilt is positively urging for another road between New York and New Haven, to join that being made from Springfield to New Haven for the Boston and Albany Road. The Mobile and Ohio formed a connection with the Wabash system on Saturday.

11:31 a. m.—Money is loaning at ¼ per cent. and interest.

2:20 p. m.—Money is loaning at 1-32 per cent. and interest, which accounts for the rally in the market.

2:45 p. m.—Money is loaning at 6 per cent.

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—Money again stringent and loaned up to 6 per cent. per annum and ¼ per diem, the lowest rate being 5 per cent.; the closing quotation was sharp 6 per cent. Exchange weak at 478¾ to 479 for long and 481½ to 482¼ for short sight. Governments weak and lower, extended 6s selling off ⅛; do 5s ⅛, 4½s ¼, and 4s ⅛ per cent. State bonds moderately active. Railroad bonds weak and lower. The stock market was weak at the opening, and prices were generally lower, Nashville and Chattanooga being 2, Chicago, Burlington and Quincy 1¼, and C. C. & I. C. 1 per cent. off from yesterday's closing quotations. The speculation immediately took a downward course, and during the remainder of the day except at rare intervals, when slight recoveries took place, the tendency was in the direction of lower prices. The pressure to sell was very pronounced and was mainly due to the stringency in money. The lowest figures were touched just before the close, when the decline as compared with last night's quotations ranged from ½ to 7¼ per cent., the latter in Houston and Texas, the other shares prominent in the depression being C. C. C. & I., Reading, St. Louis and San Francisco preferred, Western Union, Chicago, Burlington and Quincy, Canada Southern, Louisville and Nashville, Delaware, Lackawanna and Western, Denver and Rio Grande, Kansas and Texas, New Jersey Central, Lake Shore, Northwestern, Ohio and Mississippi, and Michigan Central. In the final sales Houston and Texas rallied 1½ per cent. and some few other stocks recovered a fraction, but the market closed generally heavy. The sales aggregated 534,792 shares, including Canada Southern, 8,000; Central Pacific, 12,000; Delaware, Lackawanna and Western, 40,400; Denver and Rio Grande, 23,000; Erie, 32,300; Kansas and Texas, 10,600; Lake Shore, 49,100; Louisville and Nashville, 18,000; Michigan Central, 18,800; Manhattan Elevated, 7,300; Memphis and Charleston, 900; Missouri Pacific, 9,700; Northwestern, 17,500; New Jersey Central, 13,200; New York Central, 15,400; Northern Pacific, 17,500; Ohio and Mississippi, 2,900; Ontario and Western, 8,500; Pacific Mail, 6,500; Reading, 12,100; St. Paul, 13,200; St. Paul and Omaha, 9,300; Texas Pacific, 18,400; Union Pacific, 31,100; Wabash Pacific, 13,600; Western Union, 49,000; Chicago, Burlington and Quincy, 5,100; Eastern Tennessee, 3,600; Illinois Central, 3,100.
