The old Armory building, which is being fitted up by the United States Fish Commission as a place for the propagation of fishes, will be ready for use in a few weeks and in time to receive the shad eggs. The entire building will be devoted to this purpose, and all the improved methods and appliances will be put in use. The propagation will be carried on principally in glass jars, and the little fish will make a rather public entree into the world.

"The value of a wart" was the subject of A. M. Gangewer's lecture to young men at Association Chapel last evening. After referring to some of the myths and fables regarding man, his value was considered from a physical, mental, and spiritual standpoint. The topic was forcibly presented and proved an interesting one. The chapel was well-filled at this, the last lecture of the course given to young mer by the Young Men's Christian Association this winter and spring.

MLLE. RHEA.

A Talk With the Great French Actress—"Adrienne Lecouvreur."

"Would you like to meet Mlle. Rhea?" said the gentlemanly Stone, who is the usual courier of the famous tragedienne, yesterday afternoon as he dropped into THE REPUBLICAN office, where the young man who works the dramatic column—he never gets a column, though—was engaged in reading John Freund's Muse. Of course the answer was in the affirmative, and putting on his ulster THE REPUBLICAN young man proceeded to Willard's, and was soon ushered into the presence of the great actress. A woman rather above the medium height, with black hair and eyes, a Grecian face, with nose straight and well-formed, with gracefully curved chin, and a well-rounded form, rose to greet him. She was attired in a garnet velvet wrapper, trimmed with rare lace. Her face, in repose, wears an expression of thoughtful determination, but when in conversation her features light up with enthusiasm, and she gesticulates most animatedly. Her manner is easy and pleasant, and, though she speaks English with a very pleasant, and, though she at a loss for a word. In speaking of the manner in which she learned English she said that she went to London during a vacation at St. Petersburg and had just one month. She went to Mr. Ryder and asked if she could learn to play Bootsie in "Much Ado About Nothing" in one month. He laughed at the idea, but she told him she had a great deal of determination, and after the fourth lesson he believed that her energy would accomplish her intent and she did. The assassination of the Czar rendered it inadvisable to return to Russia, and she accepted the proposition of Mr. H. J. Sargent to visit America. "Well, how do you like the land of the free and the home of the brave?" asked THE REPUBLICAN.

"Oh, I like it very much. I have met with the kindest treatment and generous courtesy."

"Do you think you shall remain in America?"

"I want to return to Paris in June, and then come back here in August." I shall play here next year for Mr. Chase. My manager has nearly all the time taken up already."

Conversation then turned upon the great exponents of the drama—Rachel (whom, by the way, Mlle. Rhea resembles in form and feature), Ristori, Modjeska, Bernhardt, and others, during which Mlle. Rhea told a pleasant little story of Rachel, who upon being once complimented for the effect of a single gesture said: "Then it must have been bad, for you would not have noticed it had it been in harmony with the whole character." Satisfied that Mlle. Rhea was certainly an intelligent and agreeable woman THE REPUBLICAN bowed himself out and waited until night, when he hied himself to Ford's Opera-House to witness

"ADRIENNE LECOUVREUR."

The audience which assembled to greet the debut in Washington of Mlle. Rhea was notable for its size, filling the Opera-House completely, and conspicuous for the number of our best people that were present. The performance of Mlle. Rhea was wonderfully strong and effective. From the time when she makes her first appearance dressed for the part of Roxanna to the fall of the curtain on the fifth act she held her audience spell-bound whenever she was on the stage. In all the different phases of the character of Adrienne she proved herself fully equal to the requirements, and her reception by the audience was enthusiastic. She was recalled once after the second act, thrice after the third, the same number at the termination of the fourth, and when the curtain finally fell she was compelled to again appear to receive the homage of her delighted auditors. To-night she will appear in "Much Ado About Nothing."

Eva Henderson.

This evening the complimentary benefit tendered to Eva Henderson will take place in the Congregational church. A well-selected programme has been arranged, including the names of Miss Nellie Grew, Mrs. Dr. Winter, Miss Bertie Crawford, Little May Carrigan, Professor Bischoff, Mr. Charles E. Kearney, Mr. John Tweedale, Dr. S. Frank White, the Mount Vernon Quartette, and the Arion Septet Clubs. There is every reason to believe the church will be filled, as the young songstress has for several winters given her services in connection with nearly all the Sabbath schools in this city.

National Theatre.

Barlow, Wilson, Primrose, & West opened to a good house last night at the National. When this troupe was here early this season they won golden opinions, and it was earnestly hoped that they would return later. Each member of the company is a regular artist, and their singing is of a refined and high order. A more extended notice of the various members of the troupe will be given in to-morrow's issue.

The Inspector of Buildings has examined the buildings to be temporarily occupied by the Post-Office Department as a money-order office, and reported that they were adequately strong for the purpose.

The specifications for the restoration of the Jefferson building are being written, and will probably be completed to-day. Bids will be advertised for to-morrow and opened about Tuesday week.

Justin S. Morrill, to build addition corner of Vermont avenue and Fourteenth street northwest, to cost $2,200; C. S. Schneider, to make repairs at 415 I street northwest, to cost $1,000; —— Poul on, to make repairs at 328 Eighth street northwest, to cost $100; C. Perry Brown, to make repairs at 1127 Eighth street northwest, to cost $50, and Fred Stutz, to make repairs at 225 Seventh st eet southeast, to cost $300.

Lulu Bowman, a patient at the smallpox hospital, died there on Sunday night. She was removed to the hospital from 33 E street southwest two weeks ago.

WEST WASHINGTON.

About noon yesterday a little colored boy between four and five years of age was found wandering about on Water street, having lost his way. He was taken to the station, where he gave his name as Johnny Dent, and stated that he had been sent to Cochran's store for some soap, which he had obtained and was holding on to like a little major. It was soon learned that his father—James Dent—lived at 1144 Nineteenth street, and he was notified of his son's whereabouts. The little fellow looked upon the affair in a very philosophical manner, and evinced far more intelligence than one would expect to see in a child of his age.

The Transparent Ice Company have purchased the property known as Eads' Mill, some two and a half miles up the river, for $10,000.

It is expected that the water will be on the entire length of the canal by the 24 or 34 proximo. Navigation will then open in earnest.

There could hardly have been a more unfavorable evening for the polo game than last night, murky and warm as it was. Nevertheless the devotees of the game turned out in full force, the rink being crowded. The game was a very good one, though rather one-sided in its issue. The teams playing were: Baltimore—Adams and Huggins, goals; Penning on, cover; Hay, back; House, centre; Waltemeyer, forward, and Hume, point. Washington—Boyd, captain and point; George Hellen, cover; Hobbs, second cover; McFalls, forward field; Mair and Ben Hellen, goals. Frank Hillyer acted as referee. There were but two goals played, the first rather a short one, which was played very largely by Gittings, who was here, there, and everywhere, and finally made the goal for the Washingtons. The second goal was much longer in playing. The ball was kept nearly all the time in front of the Baltimore goal, from which it was several times gallantly extricated by little House, of the Baltimores, and sent spinning the length of the Rink, only to be sent back again, however. During this heat House and Pennington did some capital playing for the Baltimores, and Gittings and Boyd for the Washingtons. Main, who is a new man this season, is playing an excellent goal, and distinguished himself during this goal by some beautiful stops. The goal was finally scored for Washington by Gittings. The time expired before another goal was made. Summary—Washingtons, 2; Baltimores, 0.

LOCAL MENTION.

S. P. Rounds, of Chicago, Nominated for Public Printer.

Was the news flashed over the wires last night from one end of the country to the other, and we venture the assertion that no appointment yet made by President Arthur will give greater satisfaction to a large majority of the people than this one. "Steve" Rounds is certainly "in luck," and we are glad of it. You, reader, while you can't be Public Printer, may possibly find the can that contains the $500 if you step in to-day and "try your luck." Stranger things have happened. The can is on our shelves all the time, and if you pick it out you can have it for the trifling sum of one dollar. Other cans will contain large sums of money, and not one less than 10 cents. Our tea is of excellent quality—can't be beat; and our coffee—a pure Mocha and Java mixed—is the best in America. Come in and buy a can of each. We know after a trial you will use our goods in preference to any other brands in the market. While we claim to sell the best, we also claim to sell the CHEAPEST. We will continue to give away a sum of money not less than 10 cents nor more than $500 in each and every can until April 10—the date we close. Orders for out of town customers invariably selected by disinterested parties. We sent a number of cans out of the city yesterday containing $5, $10, $15, or $20, and one can had $90, gold, in it. THE $500 CAN WAS NOT SOLD. Orders by mail promptly forwarded. Address
