A COLORED PEOPLE'S COUNTRY.

Government Lands in the Indian Territory Asked For.

A memorial of the colored people of Kansas has been presented to Congress asking that the lands owned by the United States, lying in the Indian Territory and not occupied by Indians, shall be open to settlement by such of the freedmen of the United States as may wish to go there to obtain a home. They claim that none of the treaties made by the United States with the Indians prohibit the government from allowing its freedmen to be located there; that the United States is annually paying interest on the purchase price of the lands asked for, and which by the treaties was purchased for the purpose of locating freedmen and Indians thereon, and that said land is now idle and bringing no revenue to the government.

WHEN IT IS REMEMBERED that there is about fifty or sixty thousand colored people in Kansas, and that there is a constant stream of refugees pouring into that and other Western States, and that in many localities they have congregated in large numbers, thereby occasioning a surplus of labor, it is but right that steps should be taken to provide a place for them. It is true, as is claimed by them, that no race of people situated as they were at the close of the war has made such rapid progress in all the walks of life; they are, as a whole, an industrious race, peaceable and quiet, and by their actions have disappointed even the most sanguine of their friends, and opposition of a great mass of their former owners, the persecution and bloodshed, the deprivation of their civil and political rights in many of the States, they have pursued the even tenor of their way. Many of them have accumulated property. Now, as these people are leaving the South because of oppression and the failure of the government to protect them in all of their rights it is but just that some provision should be made for them, and as far as known the territory named is well suited to their wants. It is in a latitude where cotton will grow, as well as all the grain grown elsewhere in the West. Its climate is nearly as warm as that of Northern Louisiana and Mississippi; hence it would be the most favorable place for them that could be selected.

NOTWITHSTANDING THE PREJUDICE

IT MAY BE URGED BY SOME

that the government, by freeing the slave and making him a citizen, has done enough for the negro. It does not require a negro worshipper—as some call them—to see that they have merited all they have received, and more too; but the worst feature of the whole is that they are not permitted to enjoy what they have. The action of a portion of the people of these United States precludes the enjoyment of the only right that makes a man a freeman—that is his franchise; hence this continued exodus of that people from the South. In all of its wars the negro has been loyal to the government. In the last war, before he knew that he was to be a citizen, or even that the abolishment of slavery was to be a part of our Constitution, he

RALLIED TO THE DEFENSE

of our government, and shed blood on more than one battle-field. Since the colored people have by their votes assisted in keeping out of power the men who had fought for years to destroy the government, and for this they have been forced to fly from their homes. It has been said that they would starve if they went out there. This theory has no founda ion in fact. It is very well known that over 200,000 have left the various States of the South, yet they have settled down in the Western, Middle, and Northern States, and not 1 per cent. of them has become paupers on public expense. The exodus of 1878 has had a salutary effect on the colored people. They no longer gather in large numbers and migrate without knowing where they go, or trusting to fortune to PROVIDE FOR THEIR WANTS.

Those who are leaving now generally know where they are going, and are provided to support themselves, so there is not the least probability of such an industrious people coming to a starvation. By specific stipulations the white man is prohibited from entering the Territory, and in view of the fact that the government ought to do something for those unfortunate people it is but just that their memorial should be favorably considered. Mrs. General Augustus Wilson, of Kansas, a philanthropic lady, is here urging the adoption of some measure that will give these homeless people a home. The delegation of colored men consists of Messrs. A. Fairfax, W. A. Price, J. B. Wallace, W. B. Avery, and T. J. Merritt. They have made a very favorable impression on those they have met, enlisting many able persons in their cause.

ROANOKE COLLEGE.

Commencement Exercises—Full Details of the Occurrence.

The commencement exercises of the twenty-ninth session of Roanoke College took place Wednesday at Salem Va., according to the following programme: C. J. Grasselone, Virginia (third honor), Latin salutatory; W. D. Boyle, Louisville, Ky. (second honor), Greek oration; A. E. Peery, Virginia, subject, "Antidotes of Communism;" H. A. Trexler, North Carolina, subject, "Some Sow, Others Reap;" W. P. Nelson, Virginia, subject, "Problems of the Day;" R. G. Rosenbaum, Virginia, subject, "England and Ireland;" J. N. Allison, Texas, subject, "Spring Succeeds Winter;" J. W. Carter, Virginia, subject, "Modern Alchemy;" W. P. Huddle, Virginia, subject, "Partial Truths;" J. T. Lupton, Virginia (first honor), valedictory.

The degree of bachelor of arts was conferred upon the class of '82, with the exception of two, who received the degree of bachelor of science. The following members of former classes received the degree of master of arts, which is not conferred in the course, but only upon those engaging in literary or professional work. Of the class of '77: Rev. J. F. Kizer, Orangeburg, S. C.; J. W. Ownby, Paris, Texas; E. I. Renick, Atlanta, Ga.; Rev. L. L. Smith, Middlebrook, Va.; Prof. G. V. Yonce, Lutherville Female Seminary, Md.; L. F. Smith, Atlanta, Ga.; Dr. J. S. St. Clair, Bonsacks, Va. Of class of '76, J. W. Grasselone, Kingsport, Tenn.

The trustees of Roanoke College, always careful in bestowing honorary degrees, conferred none at all this year. Hereafter the degrees of doctor of philosophy and doctor of science will not be conferred as honorary degrees.

The faculty gold medal in Greek was awarded to Perry Remsen Nugent, of New Orleans; the trustees' medal in mathematics to William Porter Nelson, Culpeper, Va., and the literary societies' medal in oratory to C. A. Miller, of Staunton, Va.

Hon. William H. Ruffner, LL. D., late State superintendent of public instruction, has accepted a position as lecturer on field geology and commercial mineralogy. Rev. L. A. Fox, D. D., who entered upon his duties last February as professor of moral and intellectual philosophy, has fully justified the expectations of the trustees. H. S. Trout, of Roanoke, Va., was elected a trustee of the college.

The session just closed has been a pleasant and prosperous one. The attendance of students includes representatives from fifteen States and Territories. The number is steadily increasing, the gain in two years being 20 per cent. The graduates are laboring in twenty-one States and Territories and two foreign countries. Roanoke has accomplished a great work on slender resources through the devotion of the faculty and the interest of the students and friends. The financial condition of the institution is improving, and the prospect of considerable endowment is hopeful.

Garibaldi and the Union.

A prominent clergyman of this State, who was in Italy at the time of Garibaldi's first great triumphs in Naples, sought an interview with the patriot at Turin, where was sitting the Parliament to which he had just been elected. "To my joy," he says, "I was granted an interview on the ground of being an American. He was in an upper room, before the door of which and on the stairway leading to it were red-shirted soldiers, some of his faithful body-guard. Conducted into the room by his son Menotti, my eye at once fell upon the hero lying in bed, who slowly raised himself upon one arm and extended the hand of the other to me. The red shirt and the red handkerchief, binding back the long brown hair from his broad, high forehead, recalled the familiar pictures of him exhibited at nearly every where in Italy. But what a noble face! Every line and curve and expression revealing the character of the great, unselfish soul behind it. The conversation was brief and chiefly upon the greatly disturbed state of our country and the threatening civil war. He said: 'I love the Union. I do hope there will be no war; but if there is, were I a few years younger I would join the Union Army.'"

English Race-Horses.

The naming of English race-horses is said to have got down as low as this: Among other singular names are such as "I Am Little, Pity My Condition;" "Peggy Grieves Me," "Jenny, Come Tie Me;" "Whee Do You Slight Me;" "Sweeter When Clothed," "Sweetest When Stripped," "Jack, Come Tickle Me;" "Briton, Strike Home;" "Watch Them and Catch Them;" "Turn About, Tommy;" "Kiss in a Corner;" "I Will If I Can;" "Hop, Step, and Jump;" "Tickle Me Quickly;" "Jack-in-a-Box;" "Kick Him, Jenny;" "Lord George Bentinck had "Here I Go With My Eye Out" and "All Round My Hat;" General Peel had "I Am Not Aware," and Lord Glasgow owned "He Has a Name" and "Give Him a Name."—Gath.

The Kickers.

That intrepid Republican, the Boston Traveller, says: "Most of the men in the 'Independent' movement in Pennsylvania were supporters of Horace Greeley in 1872. They left the Republican party then because in the making of appointments to office they had been left out. The Greeley movement failed, and with it the chance for the offices they were seeking. They came back into the Republican party, and again began a clamor for offices. Again they are disappointed, and again they assume the role of 'Independents,' seeking to destroy the party they could not rule. Perhaps this time they will drop into the embrace of the Democrats, there to remain.—Philadelphia City Item.

Was He Absent-Minded?

A gentleman walking upon the beach at Atlantic City the other day met another gentleman coming from the opposite direction, who advanced toward him, bowed very low, and, with a wave of the hand toward the sea, said: "Excuse me, sir; but can you tell me what water that is? It seems to be quite a large body. Where does it come from?" The person addressed looked at him for a moment with a suspicious eye, but, finding he was in dead earnest, politely replied: "That, sir, is the Atlantic Ocean. It is rather a large body of water."

An Outrageous Falsehood.

The Republican Representatives in Congress from Pennsylvania, with three exceptions, are reported in a Washington dispatch to the Philadelphia Press to admit the probable defeat of the regular Republican State ticket. The three exceptions are Congressmen Birrett, Barr, and Scranton. The same dispatch says that it has been suggested that all the members of the delegation sign an appeal to Chairman Cooper in favor of taking some means to harmonize the differences in the party in Pennsylvania.—New York Tribune.

A JOKE ON MAGGIE MITCHELL.

Her Visit to Guiteau and What Came of It—An Autograph.

I have a good joke to tell on our charming little friend, Maggie Mitchell. When she was here last winter curiosity took her to the jail, and her popularity among distinguished persons readily obtained her admission to Guiteau's cell. She had a long talk with him, and bought some of his pictures. As she was about taking her leave, Guiteau said: "Miss Maggie, you must buy my book when it is out. It will interest you. You will find in it all my reasons for removing Garfield, and you will think better of me after you read it." Maggie promised to buy the book as soon as it was issued, and got out of the beast's presence as soon as she could. The same evening between the acts at the theater she went into a box where was a high official, with whom she was well acquainted. She told the distinguished official that she wanted a favor of him. Greatly flattered, he promised to grant anything she might ask. Then she told him that she wanted the first copy of Guiteau's book that she could get. He gave his word and she skipped on to the stage in all her Lorie finery. The high official bought the book some time ago, and sent it to the binders and had it dressed in morocco and gilded. Then he thought it would be a pleasing surprise to the charming Maggie if he obtained Guiteau's autograph on the fly-leaf. So he sent it to the jail with the word to Guiteau that his autograph was wanted for Maggie Mitchell. That was quite enough for the most colossal egotist that ever was shut up. This is what he wrote on the first leaf:

"To my Friend,
Miss MAGGIE MITCHELL:
Love God and do right,
And we will meet in Heaven.
Yours, sincerely,
CHARLES GUITEAU.

U. S. Jail, Washington, D. C., June 1, 1882."

One fact, however, cannot be denied, and that is, that the most popular actress on the American stage, and whom everybody loves, has the most original autograph of the greatest criminal that ever lived; but I imagine that she will have to stand a good deal of guying therefor. For instance, on the 1st of July, how pleasant it will be for fifty or a hundred persons to approach Mrs. Paddock and say, "Well, Maggie, I see your particular friend was hung yesterday," &c.—H. J. R., in the Philadelphia Press.

Magazines.

The July number of Balios's Monthly Magazine has reached us and is fully up to the high standard of this celebrated journal. The bill of fare which the publishers offer for the delectation of their readers is a most varied one and contains meat for every palate. The full table of contents are as follows: "Fiji and the Fijians;" "The Cimchera Hand;" "Wu;" "The Lake Harvest;" "A Remarkable Plant;" "Seaward;" "Francis;" "Social Life Among the Esquimaux;" "An Idea;" An Ugly Girl's Story;" "Toujours a Vous;" "His Brother's Wife;" "Views Among the Wonders of Nature;" "Life's All;" Aunt Hannah's Ghost;" "At the Right Time;" "After Their Own Hearts;" "The Length of Human Life;" "In June;" "Chris;" "Move in Your Own Orbit;" "A Word About Lichens;" "The Algerian Inland Sea;" "Servants in the Last Century;" "Quatrain from the French;" Young People's Story-Teller—"Kidnapped in the Dark Continent;" "Was George Washington Profane?" "A Church Over Two Hundred Years Old;" "Ruthven's Puzzle Page;" "The Ladies' Own Page;" "Editorial Notes;" "The Housekeeper;" "Curious Matters;" "Things Pleasant and Otherwise;" "Our Picture Gallery." Readers will be gratified to hear that Mr. William H. Thorne's brilliant Australian story will commence in the January number, and that each part will be handsomely illustrated.

The June number of the Magazine of American History, which is rapidly gaining in popularity, and is justly regarded as one of the most useful magazines published, has the following interesting table of contents: "The Annexation of Texas: a Vindication of President Tyler" (with a steel portrait), by Lyon Gardiner Tyler; "Joshua Foreman, the Founder of Syracuse," by Ellen E. Dickinson; "The Great Northwest: the Nature of the Titles by which It has been Held, and When, How, and by Whom they were Acquired," by Isaac Sinucker; "The Picturesque in the American Revolution," by Davis Brodhead; "French Spoliation Claims;" "Discrimination against American Prisoners in England during the Revolution;" "The Track of the Norseman," by Joseph Story Fay. Besides these, numerous notes and queries upon historical subjects. Published by Messrs. A. S. Barnes & Co., New York.

The Princeton Review for July still maintains the high standard which its literary excellence has enjoyed for over half a century. Perhaps the most scholarly article in this number is that on "Rationality, Activity, and Faith," by Prof. William James, of Harvard College. This essay is characterized by a depth of thought and analytical philosophy rarely found, and, perfectly free from any sectarian bias, treats the subject with the calmness and deliberation which it demands. The other articles are as follows: "Wages, Prices and Profits," Hon. Carroll D. Wright; "The Personality of God and of Man," George P. Fisher, D. D., LL. D.; "Polygamy in New England," Leonard Woolsey Bacon; "The New Irish Land Law," Professor King, Lafayette College; "Proposed Reforms in Collegiate Education," Lyman H. Atwater, Princeton College.

The Musical Herald for June opens with an interesting article on the "New England Conservatory of Music," in which the growth of that excellent institution is shown and some of its advantages clearly set forth. Rev. W. L. Gage contributes a carefully written essay on "John Sebastian Bach" and Louis C. Elson shows the result of much thought and study in an editorial on "Martin Luther as a Musical Reformer." The fourth part of the lecture on "Church Choirs and the Relative Place of the Clergy Thereto," by General H. K. Oliver, is given, and will be read with interest. The musical selections in this number are a "Jubilate," by A. N. Johnson; "Oh, Mother, Take the Wheel Away," a song by Claribel; "Sea Shore Dreams," by Bernhard Wolff, Op. 58, and "Little Rider," by Paul Biller, Op. 60, No. 4.

The April number of the Edinburgh Review is a most interesting one. The review of Charles Elton's "Origins of English History," and John Richard Green's "The Making of England," is probably the best article in the number, and gives one a clear insight into the earlier history of England. The other essays are: "The Fall of the House of Stuart," "Rossetti's Poems," "The Empire of the Chalifs," "The Comedies of Terence," "The Panama Canal," "The Life and Writings of Edoardo Fusco," "The Late Lord Tweedale's Ornithological Essays," "Sir Thomas Brassey on the British Navy," "The Haigs of Bemerayde," "Lord Beaconsfield's Speeches and Literary Works."

The June number of Southern Industries is filled with interesting reading matter in reference to the industries of the Southern States, and under the various heads of live stock, horticultural, forestry, fish-culture, agriculture, and miscellaneous will be found articles showing the improvement in that section of the country, and of decided value. Under the head of industrial are statements relative to the mineral products and the manufactories in the South showing the progress in that direction. The magazine is ably and carefully edited, and is becoming justly and deservedly popular.

Harper's Magazine for July is a brilliant number, full of variety and of unusual interest. "Lying in State in Cairo" is the title of a weird and curious article on the royal mummies lately discovered in Egypt. It leaves the impression that in the light of recent archæological research we get very near—indeed, almost uncomfortably and uncanonly near—to the actual personalities of those ancient rulers. The article is very finely illustrated.

The July Century will contain a frontispiece portrait of Ralph Waldo Emerson, accompanying a paper by Emma Lazarus on "Emerson's Personality;" also an engraving of the last portrait of Henry D. Thoreau, from a tintype presented to J. H. Treadwell by Mr. Emerson. John Burroughs writes the sketch of Thoreau, which is said to be one of his most delightful out-of-door papers.

Complimentary to Hon. O. Hubbs.

To the Editor of THE REPUBLICAN:

WARRENTON, WARREN COUNTY, N. C., June 12.—At a convention held in the town of Warrenton, on June 10 instant, the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That by his zeal and patriotism the Hon. Orlando Hubbs, our Representative in Congress, has won the admiration of his entire constituency, both Republican and Democratic; that we have the fullest faith in his integrity, and believe him to be a Stalwart Republican of the democratic type, laboring no less for the good of his people than for that of his party; therefore we cordially and cheerfully indorse him and the course pursued by him in the Forty-seventh Congress, and instruct all our delegates to cast their votes for his return to Congress, and that the people of the second congressional district will give him their support when nominated.

Half-Breed Injustice.

The Cincinnati Commercial remarks: "The appointments by Arthur thus far in Ohio have been upon the whole well considered, and no one of whom we have information believes that a big sweeping out of the friends of Hayes and Garfield is to be made." If the President meant to make a "big sweeping out," he would have done it months ago. The number of "Hayes and Garfield officeholders," who have been removed all over the country will not probably exceed fifty, and in each case the best of causes existed for a change; but whenever the President does appoint one of his own friends the cry is immediately raised, "Arthur is trying to Stalwartize the party!" What rank injustice!—Troy Times.

Ex-Senator Harlan.

The Honorable James Harlan, of Iowa, who the Washington dispatches state will be appointed a member of the Alabama Claims Commission, is the father-in-law of Secretary Lincoln. Mr. Harlan for many years was a prominent leader in the Republican party. He represented Iowa for three terms in the United States Senate, and was for a short time Secretary of the Interior under Mr. Johnson. Since the expiration of his last Senatorial term, in 1873, Mr. Harlan has not been conspicuous in political life, but has devoted himself to his private interests. The long experience of Mr. Harlan in public affairs would make him a very useful and efficient member of the Alabama Commission.

"Take Wrapper and All."

The late Dr. John F. Gray, America's pioneer homœopathist, once gave to a poor sewing girl, who came to him for advice, a vial of medicine, and told her to go home, take the dose and go to bed. She replied that she could not do so, as she was dependent on her daily earning for a living. "Then," said he, "I'll have to change the medicine a little." Taking back the vial, he wrapped it in a ten-dollar bill, and returning it to her repeated the order: "Go home and go to bed, and take the medicine, wrapper and all."

Address NATIONAL REPUBLICAN,
HALLET KILBOURN, MANAGER. Washington, D. C.

UNITED STATES HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
WASHINGTON, D. C., January 4, 1882.

To the Anti-Bourbon Voters of the Southern States:

The undersigned, Members of Congress from Southern States, desirous of promoting the union and cordial co-operation of all the anti-Bourbon elements in our section, in the good work of breaking up what has been a solid Bourbon South, heartily recommend that our constituents and friends do all in their power to extend the circulation of The Weekly National Republican.

Its political Editor, GEORGE C. GORHAM, has shown such power and judgment in his advocacy of liberalism in Virginia, that we want the benefit of his work in other Southern States. He has the true idea of the political situation at the South, and we are confident that his liberal counsels will do great good in producing good understandings between the Northern and Southern people, and friends of the Administration.

We hope to see The National Republican widely circulated throughout the entire South.

PETERSBURGH, VA., January 4, 1882.

DEAR MR. KILBOURN:

It gives me pleasure to commend The National Republican—so well and ably edited—to the earnest friendship of those who would uphold the Constitution and the laws, discourage sectional lines and class legislation, foster public education, and respect the rights and care for the proper interests of all the people of a common country.

Yours truly,
WILLIAM MAHONE.

The Weekly National Republican is just what is needed in the South. Independent Democrats who refuse to act with the Bourbon organization will find it, as the Virginia Readjusters have, a fearless, outspoken, and judicious promoter of harmony and co-operation of all the anti-Bourbon elements at the South. I wish it success.
