THE GLORY OF THE CHURCH.

Eloquent Sermon of Mgr. Capel at St. Aloysius'.

The 11 o'clock mass at St. Aloysius' yesterday morning was largely attended by devotees, and among the congregation were many distinguished persons in official and social life. The Hon. Sackville West occupied a pew near the altar. The decorations of the altar were very beautiful. Hundreds of candles were burning, and the floral display blended harmoniously with the rich coverings of cloth upon the altar. The vestments of the priests were of rich and elaborate design and texture. Within the sanctuary were seated on the right side the celebrant, Father Murphy; deacon, Father Denny; subdeacon, Mr. Gillespie; master of ceremonies, Mr. Mattson. Opposite was Mgr. Capel, and on his left was Father Noonan. Ranged in front were the thirty sanctuary boys, dressed in white surplices and red cassocks. During the celebration of the mass the scene presented by the many colored vestments was superb. The music was Haydn's mass, No. 4, and was well rendered by the choir under the direction of Mr. Sherman, the organist. Before the sermon, "Veni Creator," by Weigand, was sung by Miss Byrne, Mrs. Sherman, Messrs. Pugh and Boller. At the offertory, "O Salutaris," by Bassini, was rendered by Miss Byrne. The impressiveness of the occasion being in honor of the Feast of the Epiphany and the commencement of the Forty Hours' Devotion, was felt by the faithful. The quiet which pervaded throughout the sacred edifice, at times broken only by the low and solemn tones of the organ, lent an effect which brought the faithful to a due recognition of the solemnity of the hour and caused a sense of deep religious reverence to pervade the vast congregation. After the singing of the "Veni Creator," Mgr. Capel ascended the pulpit. He was dressed in a bishop's robe of purple. All eyes were turned upon him as he announced his text, Isaiah ix, 1-5, inclusive, beginning, "Arise, shine; for thy light is come, and the glory of the Lord is risen upon thee." The gospel of the day, said the reverend speaker, mentions the journey of the magi to Bethlehem, guided there by the star, and the alacrity which they manifested in following the mysterious star and the interior promptings of grace afforded a lesson fit for the day and its teachings. The point made was the reasonableness and the necessity of searching after truth. In the affairs of every day life no man of unbiased mind rejects a question under discussion without examining both sides. How much more reasonable is it to examine well all that concerns our eternal salvation, and put ourselves upon the path that leads to salvation. How necessary it is, for if we make a mistake and accept falsehood for truth the truth is irreparable. The maji also give us the reasonableness and necessity of perseverance in this search after truth. The midnight hour, the cold, the length of the journey deterred them not. The disappearance of the star as they reached Jerusalem turned them not back. They boldly made inquiries of the tyrant Herod, as to the birthplace of the King of the Jews. In the doctors of the synagogue pointing out as the birthplace Bethlehem of Judea, and not profiting enough by the knowledge themselves to go to that town, which was but a short distance off, and convince themselves of the verification of the words of the prophets, we have an example of many of the men of our own day, who have near at hand the means of finding out the truth, but who fail to avail themselves of the opportunity. These wise men give an example, too, of the reasonableness and necessity of embracing the truth wherever found. Instance that notwithstanding the poor surroundings of the infant, they adored him as the true King of the Jews. Thus they show the reasonableness and the necessity of embracing the truth wherever found."

The reverend gentleman said that he would on next Sunday continue this point. During the sermon of some fifty minutes length the congregation sat in rapt attention. The bright thoughts couched in vigor and beauty of expression fell with wondrous effect. Throughout his entire discourse there were bursts of intellectual splendor that affected the audience with great power. His allusions to the church and her ministers as the conservators of her teachings were masterly in detail and beautiful in description. After the sermon the mass was continued, followed by the commencement of the Forty Devotion.

Jefferson's Granddaughter.

Mrs. Septimia Randolph Meikleham, Jefferson's sole surviving granddaughter, was 79 years of age last Thursday. She is suffering from ill health and from want. One of her devoted daughters, on whom she relied for support, is sick, and their friends are anxiously waiting to see what congress will do with the bill for her relief now before it. Last year the nation erected a $10,000 monument to Jefferson's memory at Monticello. Hon. Orlando B. Potter, member of congress from New York, on hearing of her situation through a letter of Hon. W. E. Robinson, in last Friday's New York Sun, sent her, through that gentleman, a check for $250 as a birthday present to provide for her more immediate necessities, and he says if congress refuses to take care of her he will see that the granddaughter of the author of our declaration of independence shall not want while he has the ability to relieve her, though, he thinks, congress should see to it immediately that the country shall not see the patriot's favorite grandchild die for want beneath the shadow of the capitol.

At the Seamen's Retreat.

A session of the Seamen's Retreat Sunday school was held yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock at that institution. Over 100 children were in attendance. Mr. H. O. Emmons is the superintendent and Miss Lizzie Alcorn organist. Immediately after the adjournment of the school an enthusiastic gospel temperance meeting was held. Chaplain Kramer opened the exercises by reading the Scriptures and delivering prayer. Maj. Thomas Turner was then introduced, and delivered an address in favor of national prohibition, dwelling especially on the lack of energy in the church in the direction of the temperance cause. He was followed by Chaplain Kramer and Messrs. H. O. Emmons and Wilkerson. Another meeting was held at the retreat at 7:30 o'clock, which was largely attended.

Ezra and the Returning Exiles.

At the E Street Baptist church last night, Rev. Dr. Faunce, the pastor, delivered an interesting lecture on "Ezra and the Return of the Exiles." He took for his text, "Ezra and his Returning Exiles," from the book of Ezra. The text, he said, relates to the present inasmuch as exiles are received into the church and converted after an exile, in some instances, of many years. "The people who have been received from exile generally make the most devout Christians, and the best workers. The influence that these exiles exercise over their weaker brethren has a purifying effect, and tends to bind those redeemed to Christianity with redoubled force." He sketched, in an eloquent manner, the history of the exile and return from Babylon, and the lessons taught therefrom.

A Quarter of a Century Old.

Mr. Fred. Shafer celebrated his 25th birthday Saturday evening at the residence of Mr. Naecker, 635 Pennsylvania avenue east. Mr. Shafer had prepared an expread for his friends, which was enjoyed by them. An orchestra was dance, and dancing was indulged in late hour. Many handsome presents sented, among which was a gold sented by the members of the Eastern club, to which he is attached. Among the guests were Misses Simons, Guthrie, Edwards, Smith, Johnson, Wellers, and Snook, and Messrs. Naecker, Georges, Keisler, Gray, Williams, Ellington, Loyd, Snook, Prof. Ed. Smith, and Weller.

Another Old Resident Dead.

The funeral of Mrs. Mary Anne Dean took place yesterday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, from her late residence, 723 Tenth street southeast. Rev. J. W. Gray, of the First Methodist Protestant church, officiated. The pallbearers were Messrs. W. W. Scharff, B. A. Turner, Henry Berry, Joseph Thompson, William Kemp, and William Padgett. A large number of relatives and friends attended. Interment was had at the Congressional burial ground. Mrs. Dean was 59 years of age at her death, and had resided in East Washington all her life.

Dr. Pyncheon's Sermon.

Rev. Dr. G. P. Pyncheon, D. D., LL. D., late president of Trinity college, Hartford, preached last evening at the church of the Holy Cross, Massachusetts avenue northwest, near Eighteenth street. His text was, "This thing was not done in the corner." The sermon was a very fine and scholarly treatment of the mystery of the Incarnation on manifestation of Christ to the Gentile world. He reviewed with conciseness and force the historical facts of the great mysteries of Christianity. Christianity is not speculation, not superstition, but a system of religion and morals, based upon facts as well attested as any facts in the history of the world. It is not a hidden thing, though involving great mysteries, but an open fact, now heard before all the world. Its history was not worked out in the obscurity in which pretense and untruth seek to hide; not done in a corner, but before all the world. It was necessary to lead such blameless lives in this world as would realize the practical benefits of the manifestation of our Lord in this world.

Mrs. Bowen's Funeral.

The funeral of Mrs. Mary A. Bowen, the oldest public school teacher in Washington, and wife of the late Leonidas Bowen, took place at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon from the Tabernacle. The church was crowded to overflowing, and a large number of friends and acquaintances were unable to gain admission. Rev. Dr. Hicks officiated, and preached an affecting sermon, in which he dwelt on the many virtues of deceased. The remains were inclosed in a black cloth casket, with a silver plate attached, bearing name, age, and the dates of birth and death. The flower contributions were very handsome. Among them was a large floral chair from the pupils of her school, with the words in purple immortelles, "Our Teacher." A number of public school teachers assembled at the Jefferson building and attended the funeral in a body. The pallbearers were Messrs. Champlin, White, Sharpe, Stevenson, Baum, Murtagh, and Henry Yeatman. Interment was made at Congression cemetery.

Mrs. W. R. Riley's Practical Christianity.

The car drivers on the Ninth street railway line were not forgotten by a charitable lady during the cold weather yesterday. The lady is Mrs. W. R. Riley, living on Ninth, between L and M streets. As each car passed her house a boy would hurry out to it, carrying a pail of steaming hot coffee. The boy would board the car and the driver would hurriedly drain the contents of the pail and return it to the boy. This was continued until a late hour last night to the satisfaction and comfort of the drivers. After their first trip, when coffee was served, the drivers were anxious to get around again. One of their number told a REPUBLICAN reporter that Mrs. Riley was always helping the men, and was very popular. Her action yesterday commands admiration and deserves imitation.

The Ice for Skaters.

Babcock lake presented a beautiful scene on Saturday. There were about 300 skaters of both sexes on the ice, as well as a large number of spectators. The ice is strong and the surface smooth, and the skating would be very good only for a covering of snow, which fell early Saturday morning. This lake has become a favorite resort for skaters from all parts of this city during the skating season, and if those in charge would flood it once or twice a week (at night) during the season it would add greatly to the pleasure of the young people who go there to enjoy this sport.

Yesterday, while a number of youths were skating on the Alexandria canal on their way to Alexandria, one of the number, a son of Attorney General Brewster, broke through the ice, but was rescued without being injured.

Chase on "The Upper World."

Hon. Warren Chase delivered two lectures at Masonic temple yesterday. One was delivered at 11 a. m. and the other last night at 8 p. m. The attendance was small at both lectures, on account of the intense cold. Mr. Chase lectured on spiritualism: "What We Know and How We Know It." The subject was treated in a skillful manner. He defined the principles of spiritualism and discussed the different stages in a thorough manner, giving evidence of careful study of the subject.

The Dashaways.

The Dashaway Reform Temperance organization held a meeting at Masonic Temple last night. Despite the inclemency of the weather there was a large audience in attendance. The services were opened with prayer by the Rev. Dr. Burkhart, after which several hymns were sung. Addresses were made by Mr. S. T. Coe, of Georgetown; Mr. Charles Nye, and Mr. Bowen, of Rhode Island. Pledges were handed around and several parties signed them.

The Bachelors' German.

A meeting of the Bachelors' German club was held Saturday night at Wormley's. It was determed to hold only two ser mans. The first will take place either on the fifteenth or seventeenth instant, probably at Wormley's.

Leaving the Concrete.

On account of the slippery condition of the concrete roadways in the capitol parks the hearses and other vehicles are compelled to use E street on the north and the Washington and Georgetown car tracks on the south.

CAPITOL HILL IMPROVEMENTS.

An Enthusiastic Meeting of the Association on Saturday Night.

The East Washington Improvement association held its second meeting Saturday evening at McCauley's hall, 703 Pennsylvania avenue southeast, with Mr. W. C. Dodge, the president of the association, in the chair. The executive committee presented a constitution, which they had been instructed to prepare at the last meeting. It was adopted by the association. The improvements already made, and those proposed to be made were discussed, and great satisfaction was generally expressed as to the estimates of the commissioners for the coming year; also, at the employment of the inmates of the workhouse. The estimate for the coming year for the eastern section is $101,000. The executive committee was directed to ask the commissioners to prepare an estimate for a bridge across the Eastern branch at or near the terminus of Pennsylvania avenue southeast and present it in company for an appropriation. They were also directed to ask the commissioners to open Pennsylvania avenue from Twelfth street to Oak point, which now, during warm weather, is overgrown with grass and weeds. Several persons living in the county opposite that point attended the meeting and offered to contribute the right of way through their lands for a roadway to connect with the Marlboro' turnpike. The association has now a membership of 250 property owners of East Washington.
