HOUSEBREAKERS SENTENCED.

Mr. Mackey Makes an Explanation and an Examination of Records.

George R. Burroughs and Frederick King, convicted in the criminal court last Wednesday of housebreaking, were put at the bar yesterday morning to stand trial on an indictment charging them with the larceny of umbrellas and canes from Samuel A. Kennedy. Judge T. J. Mackey, their attorney, said that he had advised them to plead guilty. He at the same time wished to make a statement in connection with the witness Fannie Harrover. He denied knowing the young lady until introduced to her in the office of Magistrate O'Neil, where she wrung her hands in an hysterical way and said she could not swear to anything which was not the truth, and that she did not see the defendant (Burroughs) at the theater. He told her that she should only testify to what was true, and he came into court and made the statement, based on these facts. Justice O'Neil, by a proper writing, indorsed the statement of Mr. Mackey as correct.

The defendants were then arraigned, and each pleaded guilty of the charge of petit larceny and were sentenced to six months in jail. For the crime of housebreaking, Judge Wylie gave each of them three years in the Albany penitentiary. Subsequently Mr. Mackey scoured the marriage book to see if George McNeir took out a license to marry Carrie Stewart a little over a year since. He failed to find the man's name, but discovered that on June 26, 1883, George Willard, of Baltimore, Md., and Carrie Stewart, of Richmond, Va., obtained a license to wed, but the record lacks the certificate of the officiating minister, if there was one, to show that a marriage actually took place.

THE BURNSIDE DEFALCATION.

Fixing the Responsibility for His Deficiencies—An Account to Be Stated.

First Comptroller Lawrence has written an opinion in which he decides that the sixth auditor is the proper officer to state the account against J. O. P. Burnside for the $29,000 or so of his deficiency in his waste material sales while disbursing officer of the postoffice department. But, he says, it will be necessary for the auditor to have something upon which to make up this account, and no responsibility attaches to him for not having audited accounts when none were apparently kept, or at least presented to him. The approximate amount has been ascertained from the statements and books of five of the parties to which it was ascertained sales had been made, but there may have been double that amount received by Burnside, who may have kept an account, but if so it is not accessible. It is stated at the treasury department that no responsibility for Burnside's defalcation rests there for the reason that requisitions from the postoffice department for money come directly from its head, and are presumed to be made only after inquiry as to their propriety. In other departments, where the requisitions come from the disbursing officers, they are referred to the auditor of the treasury having the accounts of the department in question in charge, who ascertains the amount of money the officer is shown to have on hand. These figures are submitted to the first comptroller, who may refuse to honor the requisition if he finds the disbursing officer has not duly accounted for his last draft.

Death of Capt. T. W. Miller.

Capt. T. W. Miller, late of the pension office, died at his residence, 1008 F street northwest, at 8 a. m. yesterday, after an illness of some six months' duration. Capt. Miller was a native of Newark-upon-Trent, England, but when he was about three years old his father emigrated to this country and settled in Wisconsin, in which state the son received his education and studied for the law.

He was admitted to the bar in Milwaukee in 1860, but immediately after the attack on Fort Sumter, in 1861, he gave up his profession to enlist as a private in the 2d Wisconsin regiment, in which he participated in the first battle of Bull Run. He afterward served for somewhat more than a year in the adjutant general's office at the headquarters of Gen. Pope and the headquarters of the 1st division, 1st army corps. Subsequently he served for a year and a half as a volunteer aide on the staff of Gen. Cutter, of the 2d brigade, 1st division, 1st army corps, beginning in May, 1863.

In this capacity he participated in the battle of Gettysburg, where he won high commendations from his superior and associate officers by conspicuous gallantry. He also served with high credit through the remainder of the Virginia campaign of 1863 and through the arduous campaign of 1864 from the battle of the Wilderness to that of the Weldon railroad. On the expiration of his term of service he reenlisted and served to the end of the war, when he was promoted to the position of assistant adjutant general, with the rank of captain, in recognition of his meritorious services.

In 1865 he entered the civil service at Washington, and from that time until 1872 was employed chiefly in the internal revenue service, partly in this city and partly in New York. In the year last named he resigned to re-enter the profession of the law in this city and subsequently went to the west, but returned in 1882 to take a position in the pension office.

Capt. Miller was a man of fine intellectual abilities, and of a kindly and generous character, which endeared him to a large circle of friends, by whom his death will be sincerely mourned, and from whom his bereaved wife will receive sincere sympathy.

MR. WILLIAM G. CASSELL, South Oregon street, Baltimore, Md., says he suffered for months with severe sciatica, and a few applications of St. Jacobs Oil, the great pain reliever, cured him.

Funeral of Mrs. Holabird.

The funeral of Mrs. Mary T. Holabird, wife of Gen. Samuel B. Holabird, quartermaster general, United States army, took place quietly yesterday afternoon from Gen. Holabird's residence, No. 1311 P street, under direction of Mr. Richard W. Barker, the undertaker. The ceremonies at the house, which were brief, were conducted by Rev. Dr. John H. Elliott, rector of the Church of the Ascension, after which the remains were removed to the beautiful cemetery at the Soldiers' home and laid to rest. The casket was covered with fine black cloth, trimmed with silver bar handles, and with a silver plate appropriately engraved.

The pallbearers were Gen. W. B. Rochester, paymaster general; Gen. Absalom Baird, Col. John G. Chandler, Gen. Charles G. Sawtelle, Gen. C. McKeever, Gen. Oliver D. Greene, Col. Jeremiah H. Gilman, and Capt. John F. Rodgers, all of the army. Very many friends of Gen. Holabird and the deceased were present, among whom were Rear Admiral C. R. P. Rodgers, U. S. N.; Lieut. Gen. Sheridan, Gen. M. C. Meigs, Gen. Daniel H. Rucker, Gen. Rufus Ingalls, Gen. Swaim, Gen. R. N. Batchelder, Gen. B. C. Card, Gen. George D. Ruggles, Col. J. M. Whittemore, Col. Robert N. Scott, Lieut. William Baird, and Col. M. V. Sheridan, U. S. A.; Gen. W. W. Averill and Mr. George K. Pinckel, chief clerk of the quartermaster general's office. In respect to the memory of Mrs. Holabird, the quartermaster general's office was closed at noon yesterday, and most of the employes attended the funeral.

Too Early for Flags.

Col. Perry Carson and other local republicans applied to the commissioners several days ago for permission to stretch ropes across Pennsylvania avenue, between Third and Four-and-a-half streets, and suspend a large Blaine and Logan flag from them on July 15. Arrangements had been made to celebrate the flag raising with music and speeches, and 2,000 republicans from Baltimore and the neighboring counties had promised to participate. Yesterday Col. Carson received a letter of refusal from Dr. Tindall, the commissioner's secretary, who stated that it was too early in the campaign.

Col. Carson declared last night that the flag would be raised on the 15th notwithstanding the refusal. Some colored people claim that the democratic commissioner's idea is to compel them to wait until after the democratic nomination is made for campaign effect. Commissioner West said he had no objection to the flag being raised at once.

THE month of roses, with its soft breezes, its budding blossoms and its delicious perfumes, is sometimes apt to lull your prudence into forgetfulness. Sudden changes of temperature, especially at night, necessitate some care and caution, from which you can hardly depart without experiencing some indisposition and often serious illness. In such cases Pond's Extract is invaluable. Dr. Preston, of Brooklyn, writes, "I know of no remedy so generally useful in a family." Taken internally and externally, it cools, soothes, and cures inflammations of every sort, and controls and subdues all kinds of hemorrhages.

Georgetown Medical College.

The thirty-sixth annual announcement of the medical department of the university of Georgetown for 1884-5 was issued yesterday by the faculty. The next course will begin Sept. 22, 1884. It has been decided to award a gold medal of the value of $75 to the graduate who shall have attained the best general average in the final examination. The graduates of the present year will be from the third class, viz: C. R. Luse, J. Dudley Morgan, John J. Stafford, R. E. Henning, Henry Wagner, John C. Beasley, Frank T. Chamberlin, T. Archibald Taylor, Edwin Buchanan, and S. B. Muncaster.

Death of Dr. W. F. Harvey.

The sad news was received at the mint bureau to-day of the death at his home in Vermont, on the 8th instant, of Dr. William F. Harvey, so well and favorably known in this city, where he resided for over sixteen years. Dr. Harvey has been ill for several years, but it was not thought that his illness would prove fatal. This is the second death in this bureau among the old employes within the last three months, both being physicians, and both comparatively young men.

HARDSHIPS OF COLLECTORS.

How the Internal Revenue Bureau Is Embarrassed by Small Legislation.

The internal revenue bureau was pretty badly treated by congress according to the statements of officials. Besides refusing to pass several deficiency clauses for amounts expended in previous years by the collectors in good faith, but disallowed by the accounting officers of the treasury, the house cut down the $15,000 deficiency for the fiscal year ended June 30 last to $8,000, leaving $7,000 to be included in a subsequent bill, the men who have performed the services for which that sum was asked being meanwhile compelled to wait or sell their claims at a large discount.

One of the old deficiency clauses struck out in the house was for $5,758 expended a year or two since for a more efficient collection of the tax on fruit brandy. In order to make a thorough inspection of these distilleries, subject to no supervision by storekeepers, the collectors in the districts where they existed were directed to employ sufficient men to visit each once a week during the season. The appropriation for collectors being exhausted, that for the detection of fraud was drawn upon to the amount named, but Judge Lawrence disallowed the accounts, holding that any work performed under the collector's office must be paid for out of the regular fund. Suit will now be brought by one of the collector's affected in the court of claims for the amount he expended.

THE WRONG OX IS GORED.

The West Virginia Judicial Investigation Will Not Suit Mr. Springer.

Special Agent Nightingale was detailed from the department of justice some time since, at the request of the Springer committee, to investigate and report in regard to the alleged misconduct in the office of the United States marshal for West Virginia. He made careful inquiries and reported what he found, the report being sent to Mr. Springer by the attorney general. It was not the kind of report that was in demand for campaign purposes, however, and will probably not see the light of day until after November at least. The marshal's office is understood to be completely exonerated, but a pretty bad condition of things is said to have been developed relecting upon the administration of the state court, and for which Judge Jackson, a democrat, is responsible. So Mr. Springer is not likely to consider this report as worth printing.
