THE MARKETS.

A Better Feeling on the Street—Stocks Stronger on Small Trading—The Coalers Buoyant—Reports from Chicago Indicate Higher Prices for Grain.

Special Dispatch.

NEW YORK, July 11.—The market opened stronger to-day for all active stocks, with gains extending from ¾ to 1¼, the latter for Chicago, Burlington, and Quincy. The coal stocks were strong, Lackawanna especially, on a rumored squeeze in loaning rates, but the stocks loaned at 3 3-32. After the first hour very little was done, the Chicago convention absorbing the general attention of traders.

Prices sagged ½ to ¾ on very light trading up to 2:30, when the market improved on more active business, and the best prices of the day were maintained right up to closing time.

The closing tone was very good at the advances.

Bonds are active and higher. Sterling exchange firm, ½ higher. Money very easy, flat to 1 per cent.

A Chicago dispatch says: "The market is very strong. A better class of buyers than have been seen for a long time have put in an appearance, and we think now the market is going to be better."

Some of the long corn which was bought yesterday is being sold to-day, and September and October bought instead.

The position of cotton has not changed. The market is now in the hands of a few strong manipulators, who are likely to advance it whenever we have had a Liverpool market.

The Denver Tribune says: A railroad man said if that Denver road should win its suit, it must necessarily follow that the rental money would have to be paid out of the $2,000,000 that the Denver and Rio Grande Western owed the Denver and Rio Grande. The fact is, the western road does not, as far as can be ascertained, owe the Denver anything like $2,000,000.

Reported last evening that leading room traders had changed positions, and operating for higher prices.

The Pennsylvania railroad officials deny the report that the Pennsylvania road is anxious to control Reading.

The leading editorial in to-day's Herald is a savage attack on Jay Gould. It points out that he is fast following in the footsteps of Villard and hastening toward the same termination—namely, a grand collapse. Further, he was forced to resort to sterling loans some months ago and continues it. He has betrayed his need also by giving to brokers, who bought stocks for him, other shares as margin, instead of the usual cash, and the brokers have thus been forced to rehypothecate together the shares bought and those given as margin.

In Lake Shore the dealings were equally divided between London houses and specialists. The selling was scattering. The shorts were the best buyers of Delaware and Lackawanna, a thousand shares being bought for Philadelphia account.

NEW YORK, July 11.—Sales of stocks to-day aggregate 221,290 shares, included the following: Central Pacific, 5,805; Delaware, Lackawanna and Western, 16,900; Erie, 4,200; Lake Shore, 9,254; Louisville and Nashville, 4,500; Missouri Pacific, 4,000; Northwest, 19,335; New York Central, 13,505; Pacific Mail, 15,850; St. Paul, 65,200; Union Pacific, 23,100; Western Union, 16,671.

THE month of roses, with its soft breezes, its budding blossoms and its delicious perfumes, is sometimes apt to lull your prudence into forgetfulness. Sudden changes of temperature, especially at night, necessitate some care and caution, from which you can hardly depart without experiencing some indisposition and often serious illness. In such cases Pond's Extract is invaluable. Dr. Preston, of Brooklyn, writes, "I know of no remedy so generally useful in a family." Taken internally and externally, it cools, soothes, and cures inflammations of every sort, and controls and subdues all kinds of hemorrhages.

SUPPER FOR TWENTY-TWO.

How a Prima Donna's Husband Feasted the Rest of the Company.

Philadelphia Call.

Some years ago, said the old impressario, I was traveling with a German opera company, the principal attraction being a very well-known prima donna who is a noted oratorio singer. Like a majority of primas, this lady had a husband who traveled with her, and was principally noted for his excessively cranky temper.

On Christmas eve we were playing in Chicago and before the lady left the hotel the husband went to the desk and had the following conversation with the man with the diamond pin:

"To-night is Christmas eve?"

"Yes."

"Well, I want a good supper for twenty-two when we return from the opera. The very best you can give, with good wines and plenty of them. I want this extra nice, and don't mind your spreading yourself."

"All right, sir; you shall have the best the house affords."

When the performance was over the lady and gentleman hurried to their rooms, and in a few moments the indicator showed that something was wanted in room 22. A porter was sent to the room, and he found the singer's husband pacing the room, and as soon as he saw the messenger he asked angrily why the supper he ordered had not been served. The porter replied that he would inquire of the clerk. He did so, and that worthy hastened up stairs and informed the irate German that the supper was served and that the company were now in the dining room devouring it.

"What has the company to do with it?" shrieked the astounded husband.

"Why, you ordered supper for twenty-two, and when they came in I sent them to the dining room, and they have been at it ever since."

A light began to dawn upon the disappointed feasters. The clerk had misunderstood his order, and instead of serving a supper for two in room 22 he had ordered a supper for twenty-two in the dining room.

Hastily arraying themselves, for they were in neglige, the singer and her husband rushed down stairs, but, alas, arrived just as the company were drinking their healths in the last bottle of wine, and to be thanked for the very enjoyable time which they owed to the prima donna and her husband. They were forced to be contented with a sandwich and a glass of beer, and to go to bed without the Christmas feast they had promised themselves.

It was only after a long and heated argument with the landlord, and with a very bad grace, that Mr. Prima Donna settled the very long and large bill presented. He thanked his stars that his room wasn't 122, and he was very careful during the rest of the trip to order only for "two."
