TUESDAY SEPTEMBER 23, 1884.

GOV. CLEVELAND, conscious of his own weakness, refuses to go out and give the people a chance to look at him.

COMMISSIONER WEST should enact a law requiring citizens to bump their foreheads on the sidewalk when they see him coming.

JOHN C. SHOEMAKER, the slanderer of Mr. Blaine and his family, has constituted himself as one of Mr. Hendricks's body guard, accompanying him on all possible occasions during his campaigning tours.

THE vulgar gossip about the vulgar marriage of a coachman into the vulgar family of an accidental millionaire is dying out, happily. The sensation occasioned by the elopement has shed light on a very common crowd.

IT would be well for all citizens who observe Commissioner West on the street at night to give up their names before he draws the deadly police whistle. In this benighted city there is no greater power than a combination of district commissioner and a police whistle.

THE Critic thinks that Mr. Hendricks could explain why Hon. Joseph McDonald is not taking sufficient interest in the present campaign to lend his garments in any way. It is popularly believed by those who know all the parties that Mrs. Joseph McDonald could explain the case better.

MR. HENDRICKS is traveling through three states denouncing sumptuary laws and upholding the right of every free American citizen to get drunk and make a beast of himself at his own sweet will. Mr. Hendricks's views have undergone a radical change since he stood up on the floor of the United States senate early in March, 1867, and said: "I am perfectly willing to vote for this or any other bill short of putting to death a man who shall take a drink of liquor."

THE Chinese are acknowledged to be the wiliest diplomates in the world. They can outmaneuver any other people when it comes to a contest of cunning. Their diplomatists are trained to their business. They are students of international laws from boyhood, and in their dealings with representatives of other nations they prove themselves masters. Knowing well the skill of the agents of the Chinese government in the art of fencing with the tongue and pen, the French are not anxious to prolong the windy phase of the controversy which they engaged in without the lay.

Hendricks Stampeded.

The New York Times and Herald, our neighbor the Post, and several other democratic papers have been in nine kinds of convulsions for some days past over an alleged examination of the records in the land commissioner's office covering the period when Mr. Thomas A. Hendricks was commissioner. Whole columns of the heaviest kind of editorial have been devoted to the condemnation of this reckless diversion of clerical talent to campaign purposes; to denunciation of this stupendous fraud on the government in thus employing live labor to hunt up dead rottenness, and in other ways to the preparation of the public mind to receive the expected disclosures. Now, behold how great a matter a little fire kindleth—how big a bear a burnt log seems to be to a coward candidate. One day last week a gentleman who sometimes writes for the newspapers went to the land office and asked for a piece of information. It was given him. It in no way concerned the administration of Mr. Hendricks as land commissioner. In the interest of the exact truth of history it may be said that it did concern one Carl Schurz, who is now enjoying his off year in politics. It did not and will not concern him deeply, but it concerned him only, and the person who inquired for it.

Now, why this small matter should have caused this immense destruction of democratic editorial ink and white paper it is hard to say. Mr. Hendricks's record as land commissioner is not suspected to have been worse than those of his democratic predecessors. It is known that he spent some time in recommending land grants to railroads, and much to the levying and collecting of assessments on his subordinates for political purposes. But this was presumably done in the interest of "reform," and as there was much need of it at that time this sort of thing which is so vigorously condemned at the present day may perhaps be forgiven him.

If Mr. Hendricks and his friends will please refrain from getting stampeded until about the time of the Ohio election they will then find themselves in much better condition for what is in store for them.

Another Certificate from Mr. Beecher.

Rev. Henry Ward Beecher has emerged from his shell long enough to write to a young friend that he does not believe the stories of Grover Cleveland's dissipations and immoral practices, because they have been traced in every instance to the grogshop and brothel. Where would the reverend upholder of the doctrine of the purity of vice naturally expect such stories to originate if traced to their source? Would he expect virtuous women and good men to have personal knowledge of the disgusting details in the life of a libertine? Did he suppose that the trail of the serpent would lead to the home of purity and innocence? Did Mr. Beecher think that the accused would have chosen a church or a Sunday school for the theater of his debaucheries, or that because he did not indulge in his vicious practices on the public streets in broad daylight he is therefore innocent? The reverend gentleman has permitted his heart to run away with his head.

When detectives are put on the track of a criminal they naturally look for him where they expect he is to be found. If they believe him to be in a brothel they go to that brothel. It does not occur to them, nor would it occur to anybody of sense, to look for him in a convent under such circumstances. We are not arguing as to the guilt or innocence of Grover Cleveland. We are simply showing the absurdity of the argument advanced by Mr. Beecher in support of the theory of his client's innocence, and proving the worthlessness of a certificate of good character based on such fallacious premises.

Just because the Plymouth pastor was once accused of adulterous practices and acquitted by twelve jurors, who were charitably disposed to accept the writer's strained construction of certain compromising letters, he should not feel constrained to rush to the defense of every other man who may be similarly accused. The verdict in the Beecher-Tilton case did not reach out and take in Grover Cleveland.

Mr. Beecher is as hasty in assuming Grover Cleveland to be innocent of the vices attributed to him as he was in adjudging Mr. Blaine guilty of official corruption on the strength of letters which are now admitted to bear a construction entirely consistent with the strictest business and official integrity. He is quite as apt to be wrong in the other case as he was in his judgment of Mr. Blaine. He should be the last man in the world to accept a warped construction of letters as conclusive evidence of the writer's guilt. Where would he be if judged by the same standard?

Mr. Beecher had better stick to his calling. By attending strictly to his business of preaching the gospel of Christ he will stand higher in the estimation, not only of his church but of the world as well, and possibly of the Master.

AMUSEMENTS.

"PECK'S BAD BOY."

An absurd melange, ostensibly a dramatization of some clever humorous sketches, but with little that is dramatic in the whole performance, is "Peck's Bad Boy and His Pa," the attraction of the week at the National. A fairly full house—but a rather top-heavy one—laughed itself hoarse at the pranks of the Bad Boy, who with the girl, Minnie Clay, were admirably made up, considering that they are man and wife of some years' standing. The scenes gave some good openings to Dan Mason and Tony Williams, as Max Schultz and Patrick Duffy respectively, in very fair German and Irish dialogue business. The opening scene is a fine special set, the life-like picture of a grocery, eliciting applause.

THE "ORANGE GIRL" AT FORD'S.

A handsomely renovated interior, well filled with an apparently well-satisfied audience, was the situation at Ford's opera house last night. Charles E. Ford's comic opera company, with now blood and a new opera, but with all the old-time favorites, presented Planquette's "Nell Gwynne," under the thin disguise of the "Orange Girl." The sole defect was in the orchestration, though the musicians acquitted themselves ably with the score at their command. Mrs. Zelda Seguin sustained the title role with an ability and verve that is usual with her interpretations, while the other voices were of a high average. George Denham has a character that fits him almost as well as any he has appeared in, and as the Beadle he is the life of the opera. The costumes and general setting are pleasingly generous, the whole presentation doing the veteran impresario credit. The improvements in the house are marked, and appeared to be well appreciated, by the raising of the box office floor the flight of stairs leading to the upper floors is considerably shortened, while the grade of the main floor has been reset so as to make a most advantageous slope toward the stage. Minor additions to comfort and elegance are numerous, and the whole effect is very satisfactory.

ABOUT PEOPLE.

FIRST ASSISTANT POSTMASTER GENERAL HATCH arrived here yesterday from Dayton, Ohio.

ENGINEER COMMISSIONER LUDECKER has returned to the city, after a two weeks' vacation.

LIEUT. COL. DUNCAN STEWART, of the British army, arrived in New York Sunday from Liverpool.

ABBE LISZT has promised the musical world a new work from his pen next year. He is not blind, as was reported.

GENERAL SUPERINTENDENT THOMPSON, of the railway mail service, has returned from a tour of inspection in the west.

CAPT. JAMES B. EADS, of St. Louis, the Mississippi jetties engineer, has returned from Europe, and is now in New York.

MRS. MACKEY is commonly called the Duchess of Colorado by the other visitors at Trouville, the French watering place.

CAPT. GEORGE M. WHEELER, corps of engineers, U. S. A., is in New York, and will return to his home here some time this week.

MR. GEORGE W. CHILDS intends placing a memorial window in memory of Bishop Simpson in the Asbury M. E. church, of Philadelphia.

GEN. ROSECRANS has recovered from his recent illness, and expects within a few days to leave for Ohio to participate in the democratic canvass of that state.

MANAGER S. S. MERRILL, of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad company, is pronounced very poorly, but there are no fears of his immediate death.

ROBERT T. BALL, LL. D., F. R. S., the astronomer royal from Dublin university, will arrive in Boston about the last of this month. He will be the first royal astronomer to visit this country.

THE daughters of the poet Longfellow, who have been making an extended visit in England, have now gone to Bergen, the great military seaport of Norway, to visit the widow of Ole Bull.

MR. DAVID C. ANDERSON, the veteran actor, who has been on the stage for fifty years, and whose impersonation as Quilp will be long remembered by the present generation, is dangerously ill. He is 72 years of age.

GEN. NOAH L. JEFFRIES, ex-register of the treasury, arrived here yesterday from his home at Ridley Park, Pa., accompanied by Mrs. Jeffries and their daughter, Mrs. W. H. Browne and her children, and all are at their old quarters at Willard's hotel.

COL. CLEMENT L. BEST, fourth U. S. artillery, who is commanding Fort Adams at Newport, is announced to be engaged to Miss Mary Tooker, of New York. The announcement states that the wedding will take place before the end of this season.

LIEUT. FREDERICK SCHWATKA, who recently resigned from the 3d United States cavalry, has arrived in New York from the Pacific coast. He proposes to devote himself to literary pursuits, and is anxious to make another expedition to the Arctic.

MR. ROBERT BONNER says: "I do not think Mr. Bergh understands what he is talking about when he states that clipping horses is a cruel and senseless practice—the device of lazy grooms. There is not a horseman who does not know directly to the contrary."

MAJ. JOHN S. BILLINGS, surgeon, U. S. A., who has been abroad for several months as delegate to the international medical congress and on other special army duty, arrived in New York Sunday, with Mrs. Billings, on the Servia, from Liverpool, and will be here today.

REAR ADMIRAL STEPHEN B. LUCE, who turned over the command of the North Atlantic squadron last Saturday to Commodore James E. Jewett, gave a grand farewell reception the day before on board the flagship Tennessee, at Newport, to a number of distinguished officials. Among the guests were Gov. Bourne, of Rhode Island, and his staff, and Attorney General and Mrs. Brewster.

JAMES GORDON BENNETT, accompanied by Charles Nordhoff, of the New York Herald, arrived in San Francisco yesterday. He was met by John W. Mackey, who later in the day pointed out to him the prominent features of the city. The train on which Mr. Bennett arrived narrowly escaped serious disaster. As it pulled out of the Port Costa station it ran into a train of wheat cars. Messrs. Mackey and Bay, who were in Mr. Bennett's private car, were thrown to the floor, and Mr. Bennett himself was badly shaken, but managed to keep his seat.

POLITICS AND POLITICIANS.

The New York Tribune says that the opinion is gaining ground that the various democratic organizations of New York city will unite upon a county ticket in which Tammany will receive the lion's share. It will be conceded the mayoralty, probably the comptrollership, and two of the three common pleas judges. The county democracy will be given the district attorney, one common pleas judge, and a coroner. A strong effort was made to induce John Kelly to stand for the mayoralty, but he has refused to allow his name to be used for any public position whatever. Mayor Edson is a candidate for renomination, and Alderman Hugh J. Grant has many friends who are pushing him, with his record in opposition to the Broadway Surface railroad steal, as their trump card. Hon. S. S. Cox was urged to become a candidate, but refused on the ground that he preferred to stay in congress. Joseph J. O'Donohue and ex-Congressman Dugro are also put forward as available candidates.

Whoever is put forward for the nomination must pledge himself to reappoint Hubert O. Thompson commissioner of public works in order to receive the support of the County Democracy. Thompson's present term expires during Mayor Edson's incumbency, and if the latter refuses to reappoint him an effort will be made to have the present board of aldermen lay the nomination on the table until the new mayor comes into office.

Peter B. Olney wants to be his own successor in the office of district attorney, but the County Democracy will insist that Col. John R. Fellows shall have the nomination, though he is obnoxious to Tammany. If the County Democracy is obstinate in its demands, the amicable division of the spoils may not come off. Tammany is not noted for any very tender regard to its rivall organizations, and has already declared in favor of putting forth a full ticket of its own.

The republican campaign in Ohio is growing very warm and enthusiastic. The Indianapolis Sentinel's brutal queries, and Mr. Blaine's manly reply thereto, have stirred up the people in the most marked manner and very much in Blaine's favor. The visit of Blaine and Logan to the state is expected to very materially increase the republican majority. Gen. Logan was welcomed by 50,000 people at Youngstown on Saturday in one of the most magnificent demonstrations on record. The business men of Columbus crowded Comstock's opera house to hear Senator Sherman Wednesday night, and on Saturday 5,000 people gathered at the same point to hear Gen. Beaver, of Pennsylvania, and A. M. Hardy, of Kentucky. Judge Foraker, at Dayton, and Hon. Wm. Lawrence, at Urbana, spoke to very large audiences on the same night.

A novel feature in the campaign is the introduction of monster tent meetings, which have been originated by Charles E. Bolton, manager of the Cleveland bureau of education. He has a huge tent with accommodation for 10,000 people, and flies capable of sheltering 10,000 more. The first test of its usefulness will be made at Akron to-day. Senator Sherman is attracting unprecedented audiences wherever he goes.

***

At rousing meetings of German republicans held in Utica and Buffalo, N. Y., last week, Carl Schurz's support of Cleveland was vigorously denounced. The Buffalo meeting was quite remarkable for numbers and enthusiastic republican feeling.

***

Four joint debates have been arranged between Messrs. Calkins and Gray, the republican and democratic nominees for governor of Indiana. It has always been the custom to have thirteen meetings of this kind in that state between gubernatorial candidates—one in each congressional district. Maj. Calkins challenged for the usual number this year, but Gray could with difficulty only be induced to meet his eloquent opponent at four points. His failure to come to the scratch after the usual fashion will be interpreted unfavorably to his pretensions. The Hoosiers do not have much faith in a candidate who will dodge a joint debate.

The Chicago News' Cincinnati correspondent has been conducting an investigation to determine the extent to which Irishmen in Ohio, who have heretofore been democrats, will go, voters will give their suffrage to Blaine, and fortifies his statement by interviews with Irishmen prominent in the movement whose position for observation gives them good opportunities for correctly estimating the magnitude of the defection. In Hamilton county alone the number of Irish who will for the first time vote for a republican nominee for president is put at over a thousand. The president of one of the Cincinnati Blaine and Logan clubs in an interview said:

> I am one of the few Irishmen in this city who have always voted the republican ticket. When we commenced enrolling members for a club a couple of months ago, I was surprised at the number of Irishmen whom I had previously known as democrats who came forward and asked permission to join. Sometimes a dozen would come in one day, at others less. At the present time we have a membership of 580. Of this number about twenty are Irish republicans, probably twenty German republicans, and the remainder, nearly 300, are democrats who have signified their intention of voting for Blaine.

***

The Macon Telegraph is not disposed to conceal its contempt for the civil service law, and touches up the New York World upon the subject in fine old southern style after this fashion:

> We know nothing of the plans and purposes of Mr. Cleveland touching the federal appointments in case he is elected. Many of them have been settled by so-called civil service reform. For this it stands, like all other reforms that exist only as cheap catch phrases for small political demagogues, we cherish profound contempt. The World may as well understand this. Mr. Cleveland cannot disregard the universal demand of the southern people that democrats who vote for him shall fill all federal positions in the south. We ask no pledges of him in reference to this matter, but if this is denied us we will have lost all we expected to gain from his election, and it can then be written that there will be no more "solid south" forever.

Julian and the Traitors.

To the Editor.

Apropos to the course pursued by Carl Schurz and others in the present campaign I give this extract from one of George W. Julian's speeches of a few years ago. He said: "It will not be forgotten that the red-handed murderers and traitors who set the rebellion on foot went out of the union yelping for the constitution which they had conspired to overthrow by the blackest perjury and treason that ever confronted the Almighty." While he is stumping Indiana to-day for the same party he so ably characterized in these words have he or his hearers so soon forgotten what he was so diligently striving to impress upon them? When one becomes so thoroughly steeped in free trade as is Mr. Julian he is liable to forget all about "red-handed traitors," and also everything that will conduce to the welfare of American industry and protection to home interests. ANTI-TURNCOAT.

Alice Oates at the Comique.

Alice Oates did her reputation as a successful interpreter of light opera credit in the presentation of "La Jolie Parfumeuse" at the Comique last night, and the house was packed with an audience containing a very large element of highly respectable people. The prima donna was well supported vocally, the company being taken from opera people of acknowledged ability, little, if any, of the variety element being perceptible. The Bavolet of Stuart Harold was an exceptionally fine piece of both acting and vocalization, and there was really not a "stick" in the whole cast.

Mrs. Belva Lockwood, attorney-at-law and candidate for the presidency, is anxious to introduce the royal Nights of the Garter into the United States. Therefore the lady maketh a huge bustle.—Louisville Post.

When Gov. Cleveland said, "Tell the truth," it was noble Roman virtue. When Mr. Blaine requests the republican newspapers to publish the Mulligan-Fisher letters, it is Brazen effrontery. Thus it is that independent consistency is preserved amid the conflict of the eternal verities of politics.—Providence Journal.

Old Gen. Marmaduke has been nominated for governor of Missouri by the democrats of that state. If he can run as well as he used to when the 1st Wisconsin cavalry used to chase him, twenty-one or two years ago, he will doubtless be elected.—Whitewater (Wis.) Gazette.

SPECIAL NOTICES.
