MONDAY, FEBRUARY 2, 1885.

AT one time Representative Poindexter Jones was supposed to be almost certain of promotion to the Arkansas senatorship, but at the end of a protracted contest his colleague James K. Jones has carried off the prize.

THE history of the democratic party in Ohio the past year is but a repetition of its previous record as a governing party elsewhere. It had complete control of all departments of the Ohio state government in 1884, and the net result is a deficiency of $111,616. The same method of financiering in the general government for one year will effectually dispose of the surplus.

THE democratic senator of the Illinois legislature who is confined to his bed by a paralytic shock, is unable to speak or write. His party associates desire his resignation, and recently made the attempt to secure it by means of alphabetical blocks placed before him. He was unable to use them, and until he is in condition to tender his resignation, or his illness proves fatal, there is no opportunity to order a new election. The democracy might get Speaker Haines, of the house, to declare Senator Bridge's seat vacant. Haines appears to be equal to almost any emergency.

THE postoffice appropriation bill, as prepared by the committee on appropriations of the house, makes two important changes in the rate of postage. The rate on letters and other sealed packages is changed from 2 cents for each half ounce or fraction thereof to 2 cents an ounce; while the postage on newspapers and other periodicals mailed from a recognized office of publication is reduced from 2 cents per pound to 1 cent. Both changes will be welcomed by the public, and both are in the interest of the people. Congress should have no hesitation in adopting the report of the committee.

THERE is one bill pending before congress that certainly ought to become a law before the end of the present session. It is the bill introduced by Senator Miller increasing the pension of the widow of Gen. George H. Thomas from the scanty pittance of $30 per month to $2,000 per annum. No congressman upon learning that the widow of the brave and manly soldier who did so much for his country, and who is remembered with such [illegible]ate admiration, is in straitened circumstances, should hesitate for a moment to cheerfully extending to her the [illegible] that has been given to the widow of Admiral Farragut and to others whose husbands served the union well.

THE disaster that befel our neighbor the Star on Friday morning, while deplorable, yet gave its enterprising managers an opportunity to display high qualities of adaptability to circumstances. With their establishment ruined for a time by the fire, the accident was not suffered to interfere for a moment with the comfort or convenience of their patrons, but promptly at the customary hour the Star has been ready for delivery each day since the conflagration. THE NATIONAL REPUBLICAN, while sympathizing with the Star in its loss, extends its congratulations over the exhibition of pluck, ready enterprise, and characteristic good management with which it has favored the people of Washington within the past few days.

IT is understood that Representative Blackburn will ask recognition to-day to move to fix a day for the consideration of the senate bankrupt bill. We hope he will succeed in securing the floor, and that the house will give this measure a chance for consideration. It is the least that that body can do, and once the senate bill is before it the country is reasonably sure of the passage of some bankrupt act, unless the democratic majority has taken leave of its senses. The business interests of the country demand the passage of a bankrupt law, and the Lowell bill, which has been prepared with much care, and which has passed the senate, meets with their approval. We trust that all friends of the measure will be on hand, not only to-day, but on all subsequent days when there is likelihood of this measure being brought to the attention of the house.

THE democratic members of the house committee on civil service reform seem to have been guilty of a contemptible bit of sharp practice in holding a meeting and adopting a report adverse to the bill forbidding the removal of honorably discharged union soldiers from office, except for cause, without notifying the republican members of the committee that the meeting was to be held. The action of the committee and the reason that lies at the bottom of it is entirely characteristic of a party that does not feel that it has any reason to love the union soldier. The democratic position is that such a law would "seriously impede" the executive. This is undoubtedly true. If the union soldier could not be removed, except for cause, the confederate would stand no chance of securing his place. That is the substantial meaning of the "impediment to the president" that would exist in case the bill in question became law.

THE troubles that will beset President Cleveland after his inauguration, over the distribution of the spoils, is well illustrated by the contest now going on in the town of Amherst, Mass., over the appointment of a postmaster for that place. The term of the present incumbent expires March 21, 1885, and the old line democrats concluded that they wanted no assistance from the Cleveland republicans in filling the vacancy. A petition was started for an old democratic war horse upon which only the names of Hunker democrats were solicited. About the time it had been well circulated and signed, Cleveland's civil service letter appeared, and the present postmaster immediately addressed himself to all classes of citizens for support in securing a reappointment on the ground of his efficiency, &c. The independents and business men, irrespective of party, have joined the republicans in indorsing him, and his petition, both in numbers and the character of the signers, is far ahead of his democratic rival. There is now an armed neutrality between opposing forces pending Cleveland's inauguration, when the fight will be brought to this city. The mugwumps will insist upon a literal interpretation of of Cleveland's civil service letter, while the democrats will endeavor to prove that all republicans, and this one in particular, are "offensive partisans."

YESTERDAY'S Herald took occasion to criticise Mr. Murray's very readable articles published in THE REPUBLICAN, giving his personal recollections of the civil war, objecting to their "exasperating variance from the truth." Mr. Murray is able to defend his work, and does so effectively in this issue. The Herald suggests that the editor of THE REPUBLICAN should "edit" the historic papers which he prints. That depends. An editor cannot be held responsible for the accuracy of statements made in articles which simply claim to give descriptions of matters coming under the personal observations of the writer, and which expressly disclaim any pretentions to absolute historical accuracy. The article in question was over the author's signature, and he was alone responsible for the correctness of its statements. An editor who could make all articles published in regard to the late war fit the absolute truth of history would surely have a dizzy time of it.

UNDISMAYED by the result of his former visit to his associate on the democratic national ticket, Mr. Hendricks has made another call upon Mr. Cleveland. The modesty of his present mission is in striking contrast with the assurance of his prior trip. Then he proposed to take charge of the next administration. Now his labor of love is to urge McDonald for a cabinet position. As Mr. Hendricks is reported to have gone away satisfied, it is safe to assume that McDonald will not be there when Cleveland makes up his jewels. Hendricks has always had the happy faculty of wrecking all of "Joe" McDonald's hopes.

AMUSEMENTS.

FORD'S OPERA HOUSE.

Miss Carrie Swain opens a week's engagement at Ford's Opera House to-night in a new play, specially written for her, and entitled "The Little Joker." Miss Swain's talents are very diversified, and this play is adapted to afford her every opportunity to display them. Song, dance, and character sketches abound, and in each Miss Swain excels. Her company is said to be a good one, and has been uniformly well received.

NATIONAL THEATER.

The production of "Fedora," in which Miss Fannie Davenport appears to-night at the National Theater, has been looked forward to with no little interest. The question as to the origin of the play provoked a discussion that led fully into an examination of its merits, and the comparison of Sara Bernhardt's interpretation of Fedora with that given by Miss Davenport has excited additional discussion. As a result, the box sheet shows a very gratifying advanced sale of reserved seats. Aside from Miss Davenport's acknowledged talent and ability as an actress she is recognized as being of the most elegantly dressed ladies upon the stage, and "Fedora" affords an exceptional opportunity for rich costuming. Everything has been done by the management of the National to produce this play in the most approved style.

ALBAUGH'S GRAND OPERA HOUSE.

The success of the engagement of Henry Irving and Miss Helen Terry was assured on the opening day of the sale of reserved seats, and it the consciousness of a profitable engagement has any effect upon the spirits of the performers those who are fortunate enough to secure seats will see the distinguished actor at his best. The sale of seats has been very evenly distributed throughout the week, although the preference seems to have been given to the "Merchant of Venice" as affording the widest scope for the dramatic powers of the great actors. The repertoire includes six of the strongest of Irving's plays, and they will be given in the following order: Monday, "The Bells," preceded by the comedietta, "The King and the Miller;" Tuesday, "The Merchant of Venice;" Wednesday, "Charles I;" Thursday, "Eugene Aram;" Friday, "Much Ado About Nothing;" Saturday afternoon, "The Merchant of Venice;" Saturday night, "Louis XI."

A Card from Mr. Murray.

EDITOR NATIONAL REPUBLICAN: My friend Burritt, of the Sunday Herald, yesterday assumed to give some advice to yourself and the writer, as follows:

Our friend, Tom Murray, ought to be more careful of his facts when pretending to write history, and the editor of THE REPUBLICAN ought to edit the historical papers which he prints, and which would be very interesting reading but for their exasperating variance at times from the truth.

Now, I have repeatedly stated that as a rule all the articles I have written about the war have been jotted down from memory, and that my object in writing them was more to make them readable and interesting to the general reader as far as I could than to give dates, numbers, names, &c., with historical accuracy. At the same time, as to outline and incidents that came under my own observation, I claim to have been conscientiously exact as far as my memory served me. I do not write for military professionals, and I have never claimed or pretended that these screeds of mine arrived at the dignity of history.

As to the account of the battle of Five Forks in Saturday's REPUBLICAN, in which I expressly stated I was not present, it was not intended as a description of the battle, but merely as a brief introduction to the momentous events of the succeeding day, and as to whether it is a fact that Sheridan had no infantry on the first day, and that no part of the 2d corps re-enforced Sheridan on the second day of the fight. I will state that the only history accessible to me when I wrote the article was J. T. Headley's "History of the Rebellion," to which I wish to call friend Burritt's attention, vol. 2, pages 589 and 590.

But even if I have made mistakes in statement, and I acknowledge the corn, I have the consolation to know that from Gen. Grant down to such humble scribblers as myself nobody has written and published anything about the war that somebody else did not pop up and exclaim, "Exasperating variance with the truth!"

THOS. J. MURRAY.

The House Saturday.

In the house last Saturday Mr. Willis moved that the house go into committee of the whole on the river and harbor bill; and a discussion of three-quarters of an hour ensued on a proposition made by Mr. Willis to limit general debate to four hours.

Finally the question of limiting debate was laid upon the table, and the house went into committee on the bill indicated.

The debate upon the bill was participated in by Messrs. Willis, Mills, Thomas, Blanchard, and Bayne. The burden of the discussion was upon the proposed extensive improvement of Galveston harbor, the proposed harbor of refuge at Sandy Hay, Mass., and certain portions of the Mississippi river improvement.

The debate had not concluded when the house adjourned.

ABOUT PEOPLE.

COL. HENRY K. DOUGLAS, of Hagerstown, who was formerly an aid-de-camp on the staff of Gen. "Stonewall" Jackson, is at the Riggs house.

COL. ANDREW DERSON, of Paterson, N. J., writes that he will be at Willard's to-day and to-morrow, and will be glad to see his old friends.

LIEUT. VICTOR H. BERDEMAN, 24 United States artillery, who is military professor at Amherst college, is visiting Hon. Dorman B. Eaton, president of the civil service commission, at Wormley's hotel.

DR. S. P. WEBBER, who served for twenty years on the frontier, has been reappointed an acting assistant surgeon in the army, and is ordered to duty at Prescott, Arizona. His previous service was mostly in Dakota and Montana.

COL. JOHN F. HEAR, U. S. A., who was very recently placed on the retired list, has taken a house at No. 1505 Q street. He has recorded himself as coming here to remain until "1892 or permanent residence," and is looking for a house to purchase.

A Sad Affliction.

Senator Sawyer's family have received many assurances of sympathy in their recent affliction, and the death of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Wh ite's little son has been sad news to all of their friends. He was born at Senator Sa wyer's house here two years ago, and was named for his grandfather. The little Sawyer White was a wonderfully pretty child, with all the beauty of babyhood perfection, and was the idol of that household. He was not ill two days and died on Saturday morning at 8:30 o'clock. Mr. White, who had been telegraphed for from Syracuse, reached his little son but a few minutes before he breathed his last. Mrs. White, whose health has been slowly improving, was able to receive callers for the first time last Thursday, and was about issuing her cards for a large entertainment in honor of her sister, Mrs. Goodman, of Chicago, who, with her husband and little son, reached here a fortnight ago. There will be funeral services at the house this afternoon, and the casket will be placed in the receiving vault at the Congressional Cemetery.
