☞ Parties leaving the city during the heated term can have THE DAILY NATIONAL REPUBLICAN mailed to their address, by sending their directions to the Business Office, at the low price of Fifty Cents a month, including postage. By this means they will have daily information of what is transpiring in Washington.

REPUBLICAN postmasters, when weighed in the Hay scales, are invariably found deficient.

THE time has arrived when the mettle of the civil service commission is to be thoroughly tested.

JUDICIAL elections occur in Illinois today. They have been, for good reasons, set apart from political contests and should not be regarded as having any political significance.

THOUSANDS of luminous prodigies are about to be graduated from hundreds of colleges to be lost in the great stream of rushing American life as effectually as the brook is lost in the river.

IF the civil service commission quietly assents to a single clear infraction of the law under which it exists, the entire structure will soon give way before the tremendous onset of hungry spoilsmen.

IF the Paris communists attempt to create disturbance at the funeral of Victor Hugo to-day it is hoped they will be suppressed, even if there has to be a resort to the lurid eloquence of the carbine, or the persuasive ratiocination of the gatling gun.

ONE of the funny things of the day is to see a few hundred American editors who, a few days ago, were "pointing the finger of scorn" at Mr. Gladstone, now prone before the Grand Old Man, as flat as the "twenty lovesick maidens" in "Patience" before the object of their æsthetic idolatry.

PENNSYLVANIA is about to fit herself out with a state board of health and all the appurtenances thereunto belonging. A state that can give a Republican majority of 80,000 when occasion calls for it should not hesitate to make ample provision for the Democrats that are made sick.

CORONERS' juries are getting up courage in accordance with the demands of the times. We notice that two of these inquests have actually gone so far as to "censure" parties responsible for fatal accidents by railway. This is right. The lives and limbs of travelers must be protected no matter how much the feelings of railroad managers may be hurt by "censure."

THOSE who urge that a Michigan man ought not to have the Washington postmastership at the close of Mr. Couger's term should ponder on the significant fact that the only non-Michigander who has held that office for many a year was called away from the varying scenes of this mortal life almost immediately after his appointment. "There's a divinity that shapes our ends rough, hew them how we may."

THE REPUBLICAN is informed that, at the last meeting of the Cabinet, the question of removals was discussed and all the heads of departments except Secretary Endicott favored something in the nature of a "clean sweep." He declared that he would not consent to such a policy, but would run his department on business principles. It is evident that the President is yielding to the tremendous pressure for place.

Water and Health.

It is understood that a number of the officials in charge of District of Columbia affairs will visit Great Falls to-day for the purpose of deciding what measures ought to be taken to put a stop to the flow of polluted water from the canal into the mouth of the conduit, thence to the mouths of 200,000 consumers of Potomac water.

This action is to be taken in compliance with the suggestion of THE REPUBLICAN, which first called attention to the evil existing at that point and demanded its abatement. The spokesmen of the authorities have valuly attempted, by concealment and falsehood, to prevent any remedial measures, but the pressure has been so strong that the negligent officials have been compelled to yield, and pollution of the Potomac water at the source of supply is now to be guarded against.

While the officials are on their way to Great Falls, THE REPUBLICAN hopes they will not neglect to examine the upper end of the receiving reservoir, where the water is polluted while it is supposed to be undergoing a process of purification. It would be desirable also that other citizens, not officially connected with District affairs, but interested in the general welfare of Washington, should visit this reservoir and get the evidence of their own eyesight as to the truth of the exposures made in THE REPUBLICAN. At Brooke Park Hotel visitors will be shown a by-road leading directly to the upper end of the great reservoir, and not much time will be required to see that Falls Branch is continually depositing great masses of filthy sediment in the water which flows through the supply pipes of this city.

That the map which we presented on Saturday conveys but a mild impression of the situation as it actually exists will be readily conceded by any intelligent, disinterested person who will examine the locality mapped out.

In the course of a feeble attempt to shield the authorities, it has been charged that THE REPUBLICAN is doing the city a great damage by getting up a scare about the bad condition of the water. Whatever damage has been done must be laid to the account of those whose negligence made exposure necessary. They would have continued to neglect their duties and would have permitted vaults, stables, hog pens, &c., to be drained into the conduit until the most fatal consequences would have resulted if the exposure had not been made.

All over Europe and America the most thorough sanitary arrangements are being made with a view to checking the spread of cholera. What we have urged and are urging is a part of the same general programme. We urge prevention as preferable to curative processes. The old canal is a thing of the past, our sewers are nearly completed, the Potomac flats improvement is far advanced. Let us have our water supply guarded against pollution, and Washington will be the healthiest city on the globe.

Until Falls Branch can be prevented from flowing into the receiving reservoir the reservoir should not be used. Better take the water with a little mud in it than have it polluted while settling. Filtering is not difficult, and mud is preferable to disease germs.

THE REPUBLICAN did not enter upon this water controversy in order to gratify any personal feeling. It was not and is not our purpose to help or hurt any official. From the 6th ult. to this date we have at no inconsiderable cost carried forward the work of exposing the impurity of the water and the causes thereof. In this we have been ably seconded by the Evening Star and Gen. H. V. Boynton. The authorities having at length shown a disposition to remedy the evils exposed, we can safely give them the necessary time to do so. As we desire only the public good, we shall not be led into personal bickerings.

The New Orleans Exposition and a Permanent International Exhibition at Washington.

The New Orleans Exposition is closed by the operation of law. In one way it has been a great success, in another a failure. Its successful features have been the showing to the people of the south, and to the foreign representatives who attended the exposition, the improved implements and manufactures of the north, and in showing to the people of the north and west the great capacity of the south as a producing country. It has also shown the people of the south how readily the people of the north respond to any effort or proposal from the south to improve its social condition.

The failure of the exposition has been in its financial management, and here has been a terrible failure. Inefficiency and misrepresentation are the causes of this failure, and reflect upon the management.

No cause can succeed that is founded in falsehood. When the first appeal was made to Congress for a loan, the Philadelphia precedent was dwelt on, and the statement was made that seven hundred and fifty thousand dollars had been subscribed and paid by the stockholders. This was not true. The report of the managers showed only three hundred and eighty thousand dollars paid in by stockholders.

When the managers came here to be relieved from debt they asked for five hundred thousand dollars to pay the indebtedness, but could only show two hundred thousand due to foreign and one hundred and fifty thousand to Louisiana creditors. So three hundred and fifty thousand was appropriated. Now it appears that the foreign indebtedness amounts to over three hundred and fifty thousand dollars, and the amount due home creditors is unknown.

The administration, with these facts known, and they are known, could not afford to do any other way than as it has done, nor can it afford to change its decision at the request of any one.

There is one other thing it should do and at once, that is, follow the Philadelphia precedent to the end, and use the proper methods to recover the money loaned as it did from the centennial managers. The New Orleans Exposition closes in debt to Louisiana people. Under the "privilege" laws of that state these creditors can seize everything, buildings, exhibits, and all that are on the exposition grounds, and hold them for the debts due. The administration can legally prevent this scandal, and protect the government in its debt by putting a United States marshal in charge, but it must be done at once, because before this week expires the Louisiana creditors can be in possession under Louisiana laws.

This should be done, and when Congress meets whatever is proper, right, and equitable for all parties can be arranged.

The experiences of the United States government in regard to international exhibits with private corporations should now end, and a different plan for the future be adopted, namely: Let the national government locate a permanent international exhibition in the city of Washington upon its own grounds, erect buildings thereon suitable to exhibit therein every article, with models of working size, and sufficient to hold any foreign exhibits. Grounds should be set apart for each state and territory upon which these states and territories could erect buildings and display their products. The managers should be composed of persons nominated by the President and one from each state nominated by its governor. Thus the national and state governments would be united in a permanent exposition that will give an impulse to commerce, agriculture, manufactures, science, and arts, easily accessible to the great centers of population and trade and the ports of the western hemisphere, and at the capital, where all the representatives of foreign nations reside, and which every traveler from abroad visits.

Eloquent Words at Arlington.

Inasmuch as the eloquent oration of Gen. Burdette, at Arlington, was extensively published on Saturday, we have attempted neither reproduction nor digest of it, but the concluding paragraphs, referring to the burial place of Gen. Grant, must have place in these columns. After having referred to the decision of the Supreme Court giving the title of Arlington to the Lees, and said that the judgment was the voice of law, and the nation obeyed, Gen. Burdette continued:

O, that some divinely cunning hand might catch the vision that on that day floated among these graves! The background of awful battle veil nigh covered with the springing vines and fruits and flowers of peace! Justice, servant of the law, weighing out with even balance into the hand that so lately had smitten her the demanded price, whilst all these dead stood forth to witness that it was paid even to the uttermost farthing!

It stood at all broke in upon that matchless scene it was the last reverberation of those words of patriotic faith uttered by our liberator President as, addressing his "dissatisfied fellow-countrymen," on the perilous this day of March, 1861, he said:

"The mystic chords of memory stretching from every battlefield and patriot grave to every living heart and hearthstone all over this broad land will yet swell the chorus of the Union, when again touched, as surely they will be, by the better angels of our nature."

You shall answer for yourselves whether the feet of those as yet unborn, our countrymen, shall come with the spring time to do their duty here. The sacrifice which has prepared for them the way was perfect; the feast that shall invite them if they be but as faithful to themselves as this generation hath been to its sleeping fathers and to them will be matchless. All as God wills.

Forgive me another word. Here, where all the sanctities born of patriotic self-denial have fit altar, Abraham Lincoln ought to have been buried; this was the place to have laid away our comrade, James A. Garfield, whose voice was the first heard at Arlington on Memorial day. Your hearts have shaped for me the name I next would speak. When at the sound of the bell all men shall mourn (God keep the day a long way off), here, and only here, is there place most fit his sepulture. There lies the capital of the nation he served and saved as soldier and President. This is the Potomac flowing at our feet. Its banks have consecration for uses such as this. Mount Vernon is near by. Here is the guard already set, silent but faithful.

Heaven's restful peace be with him as he joins with all his heart to-day in remembering his comrades gone before.

IF it be true, as stated and believed, that Secretary Lamar has appointed a fourth class clerk without requiring the formality of civil service examination, he has violated the law, directly and intentionally. Any appointment to the classified service, unless made in accordance with the civil service rules, is an unlawful act, and no such appointment can have been made without a clear intent to violate law. If this can be passed over, there is an end to all hope of preserving the civil service law under a Democratic administration.

ANENT the report that President Cleveland has made out a black list of the names of senators and representatives who have deceived him into appointing bad men to office, there is devouring curiosity to know who heads the list—whether it is the indorser of Kelley, Meiere, Blackburn, or Meade. It is our opinion that the highest place is accorded to the Meade sponsor, with the Blackburn indorser a good second.

THE MOUNT VERNON REGENTS.

A Complimentary Testimonial to Col. Hollingsworth Upon His Retirement.

At their supplemental session on Saturday the regents of Mount Vernon awarded the contract for rebuilding the wharf to J. T. Robert, of this city, and the contract for repairing the house to H. K. Bradshaw and W. H. Burgess, of Alexandria. Mr. Burgess was employed in constructing the tomb of Washington, and can tell an interesting story of the removal of the remains to the present resting place. On that occasion the body, before being exposed to the air, retained its form. The contract for repairing the tomb will probably be given him.

A number of flowers were placed in the tomb by the regents on Decoration day, besides the wreath and other offerings which were sent there. Mrs. E. B. Washington was presented by Mr. S. A. Witherspoon with a flag, which has been donated to Mount Vernon. The regents presented Col. Hollingsworth with a highly complimentary testimonial upon his retirement from the position of superintendent.

A RINK FATALITY.

Col. Bowles Dies of Injuries Received While Skating Last Week.

Col. William Bowles, who broke his leg and injured himself internally by a fall while skating at the E street rink, died of his injuries at his residence, 503 E street, Saturday night at 11 o'clock. Col. Bowles was a clerk in the surgeon general's office at the time of his death, and he was in his 62d year. He possessed many rare qualities which won for him a host of friends who are pained to learn of his loss under such lamentable circumstances. Col. Bowles was a prominent member of Meade post, G. A. R., and he will be buried under its auspices at 4 p. m. to-day. The remains will be inter red in the Soldiers' Home cemetery.

AMUSEMENTS.

ALBAUGH'S OPERA HOUSE.

Lecoq's delightful comic opera, "Girofle Girofla," will be given at Albaugh's Grand Opera House this week by the really excellent company that ran the "Merry War" there last week. All of the artists who have made themselves so deservedly popular will appear, the cast including Agnes Snow, Mary Beebe, Bessie Louise King, Rosa Cooke, Louis De Lange, W. H. West, H. M. Imano, George Roseman, F. S. Sanford, Alexander Clark, together with the very pretty and attractive chorus. The past performances of this company warrant the prediction that a good and enjoyable presentation of this bright little opera will be given. One of the features of the opera will be a new topical song, full of local hits, which will be interpolated and sung by Mr. De Lange in the part of Don Bolero. The summer prices will continue.

MANAGER HERZOG'S BENEFIT.

The benefit tendered Manager Herzog, of the Herzog Museum, by the patrons of that popular place of amusement will take place this evening. It will be one of unusual interest as in addition the excellent company now performing there, many well-known theatrical people have volunteered their services to add to the attractiveness of the programme. Their names have already appeared in these columns. This performance closes the season at Herzog's.

THE DIME MUSEUM.

Burton & Logan will present at their Dime Museum on the avenue a novel attraction this week. The great Mexican collection of trained animals will be on exhibition. This show has not with unrivaled success in Mexico, New Orleans, and other cities of the south, and will prove very attractive, especially to the young folks. The collection comprises performing ponies and horses, wonderful trick dogs, laughing monkeys, educated goats, mules, and a host of other odd and curious animals. Admission is only 10 cents.

THE THEATRE COMIQUE.

The Comique Summer Garden opens tonight. The talented artists, Frank Jones and Alice Montague, will appear in their great drama "The Black Hand," and will be supported by an excellent company. They come directly from Koster & Bial's theater in New York, where they scored an almost unprecedented success. In addition to this drama, a variety bill will be presented with eight beautiful and talented young ladies in a sensational tableaux. The summer garden has been newly fitted up and will be an attractive and comfortable place to spend an evening.

THERE never was a perfect liniment offered to the public till Salvation Oil was discovered. 25 cents.
