IN civil service reform an inch of performance is worth a square league of professions.

IS SUBORNATION of perjury justified by the code of ethics established for the guidance of the bar of Baltimore?

THE friends of reform hope to see the very best available material used to replace Commissioner Eaton.

MR. PARNELL finds the British political situation eminently satisfactory. His cause is steadily gaining strength where it is most needed—in England.

If the state of New York cannot convict and punish Ferdinand Ward it should ask to be relegated to a territorial condition and let the federal courts have a whack at him.

SNOW storms in Pennsylvania and other indications of a very cold autumn are welcomed by the Democrats of that state as affording them a good excuse for getting left in November.

THE Baltimore American points without pride to the fact that protests received in Washington from New York receive greater consideration, and that more speedily, than those coming from Maryland.

In referring to Aquilla Jones with pronounced disrespect the New York Republicans made a mistake. THE REPUBLICAN knows Mr. Jones to be an honorable man and a good citizen, although he is not an entire success in the role of civil service reformer.

THE Maryland Republicans held their state convention yesterday. They made a good start for a campaign that is not by any means a forlorn hope. The Democrats of Maryland are fearfully tired of the rule of their bosses.

IMMIGRATION from the north has been becoming Florida right along for some years past. In 1880 the value of real and personal property in that state was $30,938,959. Now it is estimated to be $60,598,619, having nearly doubled in the five years, while the population in the same time is said to have increased by 64,653.

THE grand jury of the District of Columbia will probably be reminded by the prosecuting attorney that, in the Belt divorce case, an infamous conspiracy has been unearthed, and that a number of persons have confessed to perjury. If the facts of this case do not call for action, criminal courts and grand juries are of little use.

Republican Political Carpentry.

As a rule state platforms are clumsy specimens of political carpentry. They are often made up of odd bits contributed from various sources, and making an incongruous combination. Not unfrequently they proclaim absurd theories, and when they enunciate axiomatic propositions as old as the hills they are apt to put them out as if they were new and startling discoveries. So many blunders have been made in these formulations of political creeds that it is doubtful if it would not be better to forego such rhetorical efforts and let each party trust to its record and its candidates rather than to professions and promises.

The platform adopted by the New York Republicans at Saratoga on the 23d is happily exceptional, in that it is a carefully elaborated work, each part consistent with every other part, and all producing a harmonious effect.

Inasmuch as the question of civil service reform is the one on which the New York Democrats are extremely liable to get by the ears at any time, and is the main question in the minds of a great many Republicans in that state, it was fitting that the convention should give it first place in the platform, and should speak with such precision and emphasis as to leave no doubt of its meaning. Not even the most exacting of the Independents can find fault with the declaration "that the provisions of the existing civil service laws of the state and nation should be strengthened and extended to all grades of the public service to which they may be applicable, so that the selection of administrative officers in the civil service shall, so far as possible, be governed solely by capacity and fitness." There may be some of the Independents who will object to the assertion that "honorably discharged soldiers and sailors, who are shown by competitive examination to possess the necessary requirements, should be given the preference in certification and in appointment," but it is right, and the Republican party in New York and elsewhere will stand up to it. If a soldier can pass examination, even though he be twenty points behind the young man fresh from college, he should have the preference. The men who saved this nation have some peculiar rights.

There is no trimming, no evasion, or dodging on the tariff question. New York gave to the national Democratic party the shibboleth "tariff for revenue only." Against this Democratic declaration of deadly hostility to American labor the New York Republicans thunder their indignant protest in the words of the last Republican national platform. They demand that, in raising the requisite revenues for the government, duties on imports shall be so levied as to afford security to our diversified industries, and protection to the rights and wages of the laborer, to the end that active and intelligent labor as well as capital may have its just reward, and the laboring man his full share in the national prosperity.

Equally in the interest of labor is the declaration against subjecting the free, honest workingmen of the state to competition with the solid labor of convicts. The national administration, "having in view the greatest economy," has committed the Democratic party to the fatal policy of letting out public work to be performed by convicts. But the most important and far-reaching of all the enunciations of this document is its declaration against the suppression of Republican votes in the south. The New York Republicans—stepping firmly on to the platform which THE NATIONAL REPUBLICAN constructed six months ago—declare that while they cordially indorse the dying sentiments of the great soldier and citizen, Ulysses S. Grant, in favor of harmony and good feeling between the north and the south, they insist that an end shall be put to the criminal evasion of the guarantees of equal civil and political rights promised by the constitution to every freeman. The right of suffrage, they add, must be maintained free and untrammeled, and if that right is unlawfully denied to any part of the people of any state, its representation in Congress and the electoral college should be reduced. This is the true Republican gospel. It must be preached until the government is brought back to its only legitimate foundation—a free, honest ballot.

As to Reform.

It is fitting that a majority of the civil service commissioners should be in political accord with the administration. Mr. Eaton might properly have placed his resignation at the disposal of the President immediately after the inauguration, for the retirement of one of the Republican commissioners was a logical sequence of Mr. Cleveland's election. If a Republican President shall be inaugurated on the 4th of March, 1888, it will be proper to so readjust the personnel of the commission that two of its three members shall be Republicans. In order to save the President from embarrassment it would be well in future for all the commissioners to hand in their resignations whenever there is a political change of administration. This would leave the President free to accept or decline, as he might deem expedient, and would be a good example of correct civil service methods.

THE NATIONAL REPUBLICAN is unable to share, to any considerable extent, the regret with which the President accepts Mr. Eaton's resignation. Even if the political proprieties did not demand that a Democrat should take the place of one of the Republican members of the board, we should still be able to contemplate the retirement of Mr. Eaton with a good degree of composure. In the formulation of fine theories Mr. Eaton is calculated to achieve far greater success than in the practical duties of official life. Had he been less of a theorist and more of a practical worker the reform to which he has given so much thought would have made greater progress under the commission before the advent of the new administration. Had he been made of stuff as stern as the new and peculiar situation demanded, he would have stood up and battled for the law when it was openly violated and cunningly evaded, as it has been, in repeated instances, under his very eyes since last March. Mr. Eaton retires with the consent of both parties, for the President's regret is not echoed by either the politicians or the masses in either of the two great political organizations.

The country welcomes the President's renewed declaration of devotion to the great and good cause of civil service reform. The people desire to believe in the President's sincerity. They do not forget that he was a civil service reformer in Buffalo and in Albany, and they hope that it is not yet too late for him to be a civil service reformer in the great office which he now holds. They give him credit for resisting the pressure of the hungry hordes who would trample the civil service law under their feet. They know that he has stood up manfully in many instances when potentates of his party have sought to do violence to the letter of the law and fill the clerical positions of the various departments with inexperience, ignorance, and incapacity.

It is believed that the President has not consented to any direct violation or artful evasion of the text of the law. But it is not apparent that the promise of his Christmas letter to apply the principles of the law to the public service generally has been kept.

If the President would convince the country that he is sincere in his professions, he will forthwith dismiss the first assistant postmaster general, who has for months past been making a mockery and a sham of these professions.

It is not needful to go into the details of this man's work. It gives the lie direct, a hundred times a day, to the pledges made by the head of the administration. If those pledges were made to be kept this man will go out of office at once.

And when he is out THE REPUBLICAN will call the names of others who, for like offenses, should be sent after him or with him into retirement.

It is proper to add that the political sagacity of the President has been made apparent by the skillful timing of his reply to Mr. Eaton's letter of resignation, with a view to its effect on the Democratic convention of the state of New York. It was a frank confession of the President's fear that the action of that convention on the civil service question might be out of harmony with his views and wishes. The fear was well founded, as ninety per cent. of the Democracy, however fervidly they may make favorable declarations on this issue, are earnestly opposed to any step in the direction of practical reform.

In conclusion, we have to say to the President that in all he may do toward carrying out the civil service law or in a broader application of its principles he may depend on the honest and hearty support of THE NATIONAL REPUBLICAN.

"The Winning Ticket."

The great national importance of the campaign in New York lifts it into such exceptional prominence that our readers will be interested in knowing how the Republican ticket is received by the leading journals of the metropolis.

The Sun says: "This is a pretty strong ticket."

The World says: "The Republicans have nominated a state ticket which possesses elements of considerable strength."

The Herald, referring to the Republican candidates, says that "every one has distinguished himself in some branch of the state administration, executive or legislative."

The Tribune says: "We have named this the winning ticket. It will win because it deserves to win. The convention responded to the highest requirements and the voters will ratify its action at the polls."

The Times, whose opinion is of some importance at this time, says the ticket "invites and deserves not merely the strict party indorsement, but the support in the caucuses and at the polls of all citizens who put the right of private judgment above party fealty, and are accustomed to measure a candidate's deserts solely by the standards of character and fitness."

The Star, organ of the administration, edited by Mr. Dorsheimer, says: "The ticket is made to catch the Mugwump vote, and is strong enough to make it necessary for the Democracy to nominate men who will receive the undivided support of the party."

Taking one consideration with another this will pass for a good send-off.

OUR Democratic friends will learn in the course of time that what they foolishly call "the bloody shirt" is the one great force of American politics. An appeal for manifest justice ought not to provoke sectional bitterness. Should it produce that effect the blame will lie at the doors of those who have made such an appeal necessary by virtual denial of the right of the majority to rule.

THE Washington man who is going about begging money to bury his wife while she is yet in the flesh and able to do full duty at table three times a day is a mean rascal, but his conduct is chivalry itself compared with that of a rich man in Baltimore whose money hired snoodrels to perjure themselves in order to blast the fair fame of his wife.

FITZHUGH LEE, at the head of his campaign cavalry, succeeds in burlesquing war scenes admirably. He is almost as funny as Maj. Gen. Stanley in "The Pirates of Penzance." But he has one great advantage over Gilbert's hero. Lee has ancestors in the regular way, while Maj. Gen. Stanley had to buy a graveyard full of ancestors, thus acquiring them by purchase.

PASSENGERS' BAGGAGE.

Secretary Manning Directs a Strict Examination and Denounces Tips to Inspectors.

Secretary Manning has addressed a letter to District Attorney Dorsheimer in relation to the alleged practice of the customs inspectors at the port of New York receiving fees of from $5 to $100 or more from passengers for the exemption of their baggage from examination.

"The baggage," he says, "must be as faithfully and reasonably examined by the customs officers as the packages entered by importers are examined in order to verify their contents, as declared by the person making an entry. * * * I wish the utmost energy and vigilance used to prevent the scandal of money payments by passengers to customs inspectors. * * * I am sure you will agree with me, that such scandal and such violation of law should be stopped. If it cannot be arrested in any other way the department will consider the necessity of sending the luggage of passengers to the appraiser's stores to be examined like merchandise regularly imported and entered. These gifts of money cannot be without the guilty co-operation of those who are not customs officers, who are among our most law-respecting citizens, and who really are the employers. No merchant or corporation would permit its agents to be thus tampered with by outsiders. A casual passenger cannot be permitted to pay money to a customs officer who examines his luggage any more than a regular importer can be permitted to 'tip' an appraiser."

"If," Mr. Manning says, in conclusion, "the existing law shall be found by you to be inadequate, I shall be glad to receive your views thereon at an early day. But meanwhile my desire and hope are that you will, so far as it may be within your sphere of official influence and control, take efficient steps to cause the arrest and punishment, criminally, of any and every passenger, without regard to social or political influence, who offers to pay, or of any customs official who receives any money or thing of value in connection with the customs examination, under the statutes, of arriving baggage."

DR. HAMILTON TO REMAIN.

The Tribulations of the Candidates for His Place End in Failure.

It is said that the President will not accept the resignation of Dr. Hamilton, as surgeon general of the marine hospital service, having decided not to make a change.

Dr. Willoughby Walling, of Indianapolis, who was Senator McDonald's candidate for the surgeon generalship of the marine hospital service, arrived at the Riggs House on Wednesday. He called upon Vice President Hendricks in the evening, but did not find him at home. Dr. Walling was not less fortunate in his failure to meet the Vice President than have been Drs. J. M. Matthews and D. H. H. Grant, of Louisville, Ky., Mr. Hendricks's candidates for the place. These gentlemen came to this city twice, both times stopping at Willard's, and remaining several days each time, but always missed the Vice President. The last time they left the city the Vice President arrived the next morning, but they have not been back since. Dr. Walling, although principally backed by Senator McDonald, by no means scorned the influence of Mr. Hendricks, and it was greatly to his disappointment that he failed to see his rivals to get in a word with that gentleman.

Dr. Walling called upon the President yesterday and had quite an interview. The President is reported to have informed him that there was only one objection to his appointment, and that was that no change was contemplated by the administration in the position Dr. Walling was after. Half a dozen Indianapolis men arrived yesterday to see the wall of anger that went up. Vice President Hendricks was around the hotels adding his consoling chirp, and it was decided that in view of the fact that nothing could be got to hold off for a time.

The Potomac's Regatta To-Day.

The Potomac Boat Club will hold its annual and closing regatta of the season at 3:30 o'clock to-day. There will be an eight-oared race between the married and single men; a race between four four-oared shells, with picked crews; an eight-oared race between light and heavy weight crews; a race in single shells, and a race between pleasure boats will close. The winners will be presented with handsome badges. After the regatta the closing hop will take place. The boat house during the regatta will be open to the friends of the club. The hop will be, as usual, by invitation.

ABOUT PEOPLE.

MR. GILES, United States minister to Bolivia, arrived at Lima, Peru, yesterday.

H. H. SMITH, journal clerk of the House of Representatives, has returned from a trip to the Pacific coast.

SURGEON ROBERT A. MARMION, U. S. N., will be married to Miss Beatrice, daughter of Gen. G. H. Paul, on Wednesday evening, Oct. 7, at the residence of her parents, 1801 F street. A reception will be held from 8 to 10 o'clock.

THE death of Commodore Semines and the retirement of Commodore Badger have caused the following promotions from the 23d: Capt. D. B. Harmony, to be commodore; Commander A. T. Mahan, to be captain; Lieut. Commander F. W. Dickins, to be commander, and Lieut. Wm. Y. Burwell, to be lieutenant commander.

AQUILLA JONES, postmaster at Indianapolis, is in the city, to maintain his conviction that under a Democratic administration Democrats should hold the offices in preference to Republicans and who were appointed as such. Mr. Jones is a native of North Carolina, though long a resident of Indianapolis. He says the President's letter to Mr. Eaton struck him like a wet blanket.
