DR. TALMAGE'S MANY TRAVELS.

THE ELOQUENT DIVINE TELLS OF OTHER LANDS AND PEOPLES.

How He Was Received at the Sandwich Islands—Samoans and Fijis—A Tribute to Australia and Her People.

Over 2,000 Talmage admirers crowded the Fairmount Park auditorium at the Chautauqua yesterday afternoon. The crowd came more near to being a representative Kansas City crowd than has been seen at any of the previous lectures. Fully 500 tickets must have been sold after the seating capacity of the auditorium had been exhausted. People crowded in at the stage entrance and insisted on having standing room in the wings long before Dr. Talmage had made his appearance and while the band concert was in progress. When the musicians left the stage there was a general rush for their chairs, and everyone seated him or herself without the slightest regard for the comfort of anyone less fortunate than they, and an utter disregard for the press representatives, who were wholly shut out and had to hustle around and dig up a park seat, which, after considerable difficulty, they placed at a point of vantage, where they could at least get a glimpse of the lecturer. The park managers should at least have seen to it that the reporters for the various newspapers, which have done a good deal towards making the assembly a financial success, were provided with chairs and a table to write on. Dr. Davidson, the manager of the Chautauqua, as usual, gave the chairman's introductory remarks. He then called for the Chautauqua salute. Thousands of white handkerchiefs immediately responded to the call, and all waving made such a pretty spectacle that Dr. Talmage, who never misses a point, remarked when he started to speak:

The Inspiration of Union.

"Like a snow shower in summer! What can be more inspiring than a union of gracious men and gracious women, women without whose company life would indeed be worthless."

He referred to a bill he once saw announcing a lecture which he was to give. It had been partially covered up with posters of various other interesting events about to come off, and the effect, while artistic, was somewhat heterogeneous. It read: "Rev. Dr. T. De Witt Talmage—will hold the fifth annual firemen's ball—100 consecutive hours without food or sleep—will match his great sorrel trotting stallion against all comers for $500."

This was shouted off in the vigorous Talmage dialect, and called forth a storm of applause. "A curve," continued the reverend doctor, "is a circle which has died young. If it had lived long enough it would have grown to be a circle. My trip around the world might be represented by a curve. We sailed from San Francisco. In about eight days we reached the Sandwich islands. President Sanford B. Dole met our party. He asked me if I would like to take a drive around the island. We stopped at the palace, where kings and queens had reigned for ages.

"Talking of the Hawaiian government Mr. Dole said that it was founded on a rock and would be perpetual. It never would be annexed to the United States on account of the Chinese and Japanese population, which amounted to 25,000. The United States had enough of that population already. Long live the Hawaiian republic."

Dr. Talmage then discoursed on the profile frontage of the islands, which he declared was a wonder to all who had witnessed it. "Eleven days later," continued the lecturer, "we arrived at Samoa."

Samoa and Fiji.

In talking of Samoa and Fiji he told the story of the discovery by a girl of an herb which she noticed a rat making periodical visits to a certain spot to find. "After a while the rat, which was a sickly rodent when it commenced treatment, grew fat-sided and sleek and showed every sign of thriving from the herb. She came to the conclusion that if it was good for the rat it would probably cure human beings, and on her return to Samoa she brought some roots with her. The natives found great virtue in the leaves of the plant. They chew it and spit the juice into pitchers. It takes some courage to taste this fine expectoration, but I did taste it.

"The German drinks beer, the Englishman beer, the Scotchman, whisky, and the American anything he can lay his hands on, but the Samoan drinks his national kava." He gave a fine description of the Southern cross, which he graphically called a horizontal bar of stars.

Another twenty-two days and Dr. Talmage was in Aukland, New Zealand. Three hours after his arrival he was addressing an evening meeting in that city. New Zealand, he thought, should not be considered an island but a continent. There he met the famous war bishop, Colley, and in the course of a dinner conversation with that antipodean church luminary asked his interpretation of Tennyson's lines in the "The Charge of the Six Hundred," at Balaklava—"Some one had blundered." The doctor said that he had never had a satisfactory explanation of the lines. He found the bishop equal to the occasion, however. He placed a number of napkin rings in a line to represent the Russian guns, and it was impossible to take them. Some knives and forks did duty for the English field pieces, which were not well defended. The orders were to keep the English guns at all hazards and take the Russian guns at all hazards. That's what Tennyson meant when he said "Some one had blundered."

Concerning Australia.

Dr. Talmage was captivated with the climate of Australia. "It is a wonderful land," he said. "You can form an idea of its vastness when you travel 3,000 miles in a straight line without touching any shore. It is fourteen times the size of France and thirty-three times the size of Great Britain. The harbor of Sidney is the finest in the world. Another two weeks and the doctor was in Ceylon. This he found more entrancing than any of the lands he had yet visited. It has been called the original paradise of the world. The climate only varies 10 degrees all the year round. He narrated a thrilling experience which he had in the hunting of big game and several elephant stories in this connection.

Dr. Talmage's Indian experience alone occupied the attention of his audience fully thirty minutes. He recorded many of the awful trials of the besieged English in the residency at Lucknow, as told him by Dr. Parrary, now the queen's surgeon, while he was exploring the scenes of this memorable and atrocious massacre of the white population by the 50,000 Sepoys, and its final relief by Havelock and Outram. Reserve, with its revolting revelations, which the doctor described minutely, and Cawnpore, where his very blood tingled at the recollection of the wanton massacre of women and children, and which he visited with Colonel Lessey for his guide, and many other points of tragic interest were also done full justice to by the eminent divine.

The colonel remarked that when he had gone over the same ground in '57, he had walked on his heels to avoid being splashed with human blood. As the doctor reproduced Lee's picture of the many tokens of the butchered women scattered around—a piece of a—air ornament, a handful of hair, a purse containing some message from a martyr friend, a letter from a lover who had given his life that his women folk might be spared from the assassin's knife, many a handkerchief in the audience was seen to wipe away a tear.

He pictured the mausoleum Tajmahul, the most beautiful tomb in the world, built on the site of the well where the bodies of hundreds of women and children had been thrown by the Sepoys, and butchered, when even the native soldiers had been humane enough to disobey the order of their leaders and fired over the heads of the defenseless women.

Memorial to Massacred Women.

This sacred memorial to the massacred women of Cawnpore is a magnificent structure of pure white marble. It is about fifty paces around in the interior. Above the entrance is an inscription to the effect that the monument is a sacred and perpetual memorial to the great women who were cruelly massacred by Nina Sahib, July 15, 1857. "On an arch inside the mausoleum," said Dr. Talmage, "was an inscription that would bring a tear to the eyes of the most blase traveler. It reads: 'These are they who came out of great tribulation.'"

The tomb is built on the banks of the Jumna, and was built by an Indian prince for his queen. It represents the labor of 20,000 men for twenty years.

He then passed to Russia, which he had visited as the representative of the people of the United States when $25,000 worth of provisions was sent to the starving Russians in the famine of 1891. The doctor's account of his mistake in Russian court etiquette was amusing and provoked much laughter. He obtained the autograph of the late czar, Alexander III. He shook hands with him over and over again when making his adieus and said to the great white father, the autocrat of all the Russias, "Good-by and God bless you," and then forgot to walk out backwards out of the royal presence.

Talking of the czarina, the doctor said she was as fair as a June morning. But her chief beauty in the eyes of the eminent divine was her splendid Christian family. He shook hands with her just as an honest American would with an equal, and the tears rolled down her cheeks as she talked of the American munificence in coming to the rescue of her poor starving people in the famine of 1891. He was profoundly impressed with the beauty of this royal Christian home. It struck him that if it should be necessary for a European war to start in Russia there would never be any European war at all. He made a reference to the recent terrible fatality at the czar's feast to his subjects in Moscow, and while talking of that ancient city drew a highly colored picture of the lofty tower, 350 feet high, in which were 800 cannon, left on the steppes by the army of Napoleon, and taken to Moscow when the bones of 50,000 of his picked veterans lay whitening in the spring sunshine. Space will not permit of a further report of Dr. Talmage's trip around the world. His lecture was pointed with anecdote and illustration, and entertained over 2,000 people for about two hours and a half. At 4 o'clock Dr. Parkhurst addressed the Ministers' Alliance on "Eternal Life."

The Evening Programme.

At 8 o'clock the Arion quartette entertained the crowd which had assembled to hear Dr. Jahu De Witt Miller with several nicely rendered selections.

Dr. Miller's subject was "The Uses of Ugliness." Dr. Miller is one of the ablest lecturers of the Lyceum bureau. His style is finished and his eloquence places him in a high rank among the platform lecturers of the country. The doctor gave a remarkably clever imitation of the delivery of Dr. DeWitt Talmage. It was so perfect that if one closed one's eyes he would have thought that it was Dr. Talmage who was talking. At the conclusion of his caricature of Talmage, Dr. Miller paid a high tribute to his eminent brother. He said that withal he was to be considered one of the greatest as a saver of souls and in helping sinners to lead a better life.

He also paid tribute to the memory of Henry Ward Beecher, who he said was not to be considered as a theologian, but as a reformer. The place to look for Beecher's theological opinions had always been in the afternoon paper—his real views in the last edition, but to be sure of knowing Beecher's views up to date, it was necessary for Lee as his guide, and the extra. He told an incident in the life of Beecher. His father, Rev. Lyman Beecher, was as set in his religious views as his son was changeable. Upon one occasion the elder Beecher, when making a visit to his parishioner, saw a calf which had escaped from the cattle pen. He drove it in and when his back was turned the son let it out. The father, noticing that the calf had got out again, once more drove it into the pen, and the son again liberated it. This went on for some time until the old man discovered how he had been worked by his son. The story came up in the later life of Henry Ward Beecher. It was said that he was all his life letting out what his father had been penning up. Dr. Miller also spoke on the modern dude, giving many amusing dialect and character illustrations. Every effort will be made tonight to render Fairmount park as attractive as possible. All the boats on the lake will be decorated with Chinese lanterns, and the effect of fairy land will be a realistic illusion for the little ones. A stereopticon lecture in the auditorium will also be given for the benefit of the children.

The Greatest of All June Sales

BEGINS THIS MORNING

And it begins right here. In all the history of the United States, including the periods of panic covered by 1873 and 1893, there was never such an overproduction as at the present time. Manufacturers looked for the most active movement of goods that had been known and failed to realize their anticipations. The goods were made up and had to be disposed of, and the man who was in the market had things all his own way. That's why we ask you to expect more in the value-giving line during this present sale than you have ever encountered before—ask it meaning that you shall act upon the suggestion thereby conveyed. And always bear in mind the one thing that

If It's a Good Thing We Have It.

A Superb Line of

Men's Suits

Since the first of May we have done little else in the buying line than look at goods offered at bargain prices by overstocked manufacturers. Among those offered many were poor, plenty were indifferent and some were of the highest possible grade. Our purchases were confined entirely to the latter class. Whatever is here is good, and it is to be judged solely by its merit, not by selling price. On trash and doubtful qualities prices low enough to make us buy could not be quoted, and you have our assurance, backed by a strong guarantee, that whatever you find here is of superior make, material, fit and finish. At $10, $12 and $15

There never was gathered together so vast a line of really desirable and strikingly low priced garments. There's saving in every one of them, far beyond your greatest expectation; there's satisfaction surer than ever existed before; there's style and merit in weave and woof seldom found outside the high priced tailor establishments, and there's the greatest variety of patterns and styles—every one of them up-to-date—that was ever gathered under one roof west of the Mississippi. In justice to yourself you must see our offerings before purchasing. The window partly tells the story, but you must come inside to know it in its entirety. All sizes and shapes, with especial attention paid to the needs of the man who is "hard to fit."

A Special Sale in the Children's Dept.

That will interest every mother in Kansas City, more especially those who are desirous of having the boy look fine and pay no more than ordinary clothing usually costs. It's a rare chance to buy novelties—a chance that will be largely improved, and you are invited to come and inspect the goods and learn what the meaning of a special sale at The Model really is.

The Finest, Most Exclusive Novelties,

Choice both as to material, pattern and style, with values running regularly at $7, $8, $9 and $10. A huge collection of the most attractive patterns at the most attractive prices that have ever prevailed. There are Sailor suits without number, Junior suits in vast variety, Reefer suits almost unending, Tuxedos in manifold patterns, Middys in all the possible combinations, Newports in desirable assortment and Zouaves in all their glory.

The Free, Unlimited Choice of the Entire Assortment of Novelties,

$4.85.

Straw Hats.

The same story of faith in the future which induced the making up of vast stocks of goods holds in this department, and the hats were bought at the same marvelously low prices. No braid that is worthy is lacking; no style that is new is missing. There's possible only one point of difference between this stock and those displayed generally about town—and that's in the price. The lightest straw hat made—the Yeddo—of Japanese straw, comfortable, sightly and durable, sells here for 35 Cents.

And the entire line is proportionately imbued with the bargain fever.

Men's Shoes.

With a saving certain and plain. Every style of toe, every shape of last; comfort and wear, and satisfaction guaranteed with every pair sold. Shoe stores can't duplicate them at it; no other store has them so good at our price. Vast variety and huge purchases make the selling an easy matter because the price is more than right—it's actually and positively the ordinary $4 quality for $3.00.

Shirt Waists and Blouses.

All the most reliable makes and the most taking patterns—and every one of them new. Star, Mother's Friend, B. & K., and Katz brands; quality superior to usual at each price—25c, 45c, 75c, $1.00.

Boys' Long Pants Suits.

One chance that it will pay you to attend to. Ages 12 to 19 years. All points reinforced, best of Italian and serge linings, guaranteed not to rip—and with the most conservative estimate of value, worth $7, $8, $9 and $10. In this great overproduction sale you get choice for $5.00.

Wash Suits.

Sailor Suits in Galateas, fast colors, braided, with lanyard and whistle. As good as the best at $1.00,

25 Cents.

There's a stock here which closely approximates a quarter of a million dollars, and there will be no stone left unturned to aid in its speedy reduction. If you've an eye to the main chance, you'll watch our ads constantly, for the bargains are plentiful and real.

SEVERE BLOW TO SCALPERS.

NEW REGULATIONS INCREASING SALE OF REGULR TICKETS.

Arrangements Completed for the Building of a Railroad From St. Louis to Fort Smith—Other Railroad News.

Passenger men connected with the different lines of railroad in Kansas City assert that since the new restrictions were placed about the sale of mileage books so that brokers cannot so easily manipulate them for general sale, the sale of regular fare tickets has shown a strong increase and that when once the use of mileage is displaced the normal conditions of trade will be resumed.

The brokers, who have stacks of mileage books on hand, can have them redeemed by presenting them to the roads issuing them if presented by June 15. It is said that many books are being presented for redemption. The railroad companies declare that a rigid enforcement of penalties by Chairman Caldwell will wipe out the abuse of the mileage privileges. When the brokers exhaust their supply of mileage it is not apparent where they will get another supply.

A NEW RAILROAD.

To Be Built From St. Louis to the Southwest by Way of Siloam Springs.

St. Louis, June 5.—The building of a new railroad from St. Louis to the Southwest via Siloam Springs is now said to be assured. Contracts have been let for the construction of a portion of the line. Back of H. D. Mackey, the promoter of the enterprise, it is understood, are enlisted the financial interests of H. A. Havemeyer, of the sugar trust, and Mr. McCurdy, another Eastern capitalist.

West Plains, Mo., June 5.—(Special.) Colonel H. D. Mackay was in this city yesterday for the purpose of having recorded a mortgage of $5,000,000 on the roadbed of the St. Louis, Siloam & Southern railroad, to run from St. Louis via Pomona, Siloam Springs, Harrison and other points to Fort Smith. The colonel is president of the road and has put the enterprise on its present footing single handed and alone. He has overcome what seemed insurmountable obstacles, both at home and in the East, but now has the supreme satisfaction of seeing his enterprise as good as accomplished, as the money for its construction is forthcoming, the contracts for building and equipping the entire line have been signed. It is to be completed within two years. The road passes through sections of country that have long felt the need of railroads. In South Missouri and Northern Arkansas there is a region filled with minerals and other valuable resources 200 miles wide, which this new road will put into connection with the outside world.

PRISCO REORGANIZATION.

The Sale of the Road Will Take Place on June 27.

Topeka, Kas., June 5.—(Special.) J. W. Gleed, attorney for Kansas for the receivers of the St. Louis & San Francisco railroad, returned to Topeka yesterday from an absence of several weeks in New York, where he has been engaged upon business connected with the reorganization of that company. To the correspondent for the Journal Mr. Gleed said this morning:

"The reorganization of the St. Louis & San Francisco railroad is progressing smoothly and rapidly. When Judge Caldwell signed the final decree he expressed it as his wish that the new company, which will be the purchaser, should take possession of the property on July 1. Everything indicates that this can be done and the sale will take place June 27. The plan of the reorganization recast the fixed charges considerably and everything indicates that the new company will have easy sailing. The old St. Louis & San Francisco Railroad Company would have been solvent but for its outstanding obligations on the Atlantic & Pacific and Wichita & Western, of course these obligations are wiped out by the foreclosure, as are also a number of minor contracts which were losing contracts to the old company."

In reply to the question whether the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Company would be in any wise interested in the new Frisco Company, Mr. Gleed said:

"No, the Santa Fe will have no interest whatever in the Frisco road after July 1. I believe the Frisco will do much better as an independent line. No doubt, however, the relations between the Frisco and the Santa Fe will remain friendly. The new Frisco Company will be chartered under the laws of Missouri as the old company was. The officers of the new company have not been elected as yet."

MEANS LESS PAY.

Missouri Pacific Reduces the Working Hours of Its Shop Employes in Kansas City, Kas.

The Missouri Pacific Railway Company yesterday reduced the working hours of all its shop employes in Kansas City, Kas., from eight to six hours per day. This reduction in hours means a large cut in the men's salaries. Skilled workmen will now make only about $2.70 per day and common laborers will receive about $1.20. The company made the cut on account of slack work. The men now go to work at 8 o'clock in the morning and quit at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, with an hour off for dinner. How long this cut in the working hours will last is not known, but it is thought they will not be increased during the summer months.

The men at the Union Pacific shops are now working eight hours per day and it is thought that their working time will not be reduced.

BLACKLISTING UNLAWFUL.

William Drummond Given $3,550 Damages Against the Evansville & Terre Haute Railway.

Vincennes, Ind., June 5.—The jury in the case of William Drummond against the Evansville & Terre Haute railway gave a verdict of $3,550 in favor of the plaintiff. Drummond was a conductor on this road, but lost his job at the time of the Debs strike, since which time the plaintiff alleged that he has been unable to get employment because of the fact that he is blacklisted. This is the second time damages for blacklisting have been allowed in the United States. The other case was decided on January 30, 1896, in Florida.

WILL LEAVE THE SANTA FE.

D. B. Robinson Accepts the Presidency of the St. Louis & San Francisco Railway.

New York, June 5.—D. B. Robinson, vice president of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe railway, has accepted the presidency of the St. Louis & San Francisco road.

Spikes.

Among the railroad officials who were in the city yesterday were L. W. Wakely, general passenger agent of the Burlington, and P. S. Eustes, of the Burlington at Chicago; J. Francis, of Omaha, and W. J. C. Kenyon, of St. Paul, all connected with the passenger department of the Burlington routes.

Y. M. C. A. in Working Order.

Ten days have elapsed since the organization of the Young Men's Christian Association of Kansas City, Mo., and those ten days have seen a wonderful change in the new quarters, and to-day they are ready to take up the work where it was interrupted by the necessity of moving. The gymnasium apparatus has all been set up in the room to be used as a temporary gymnasium, and the baths were completed last evening, and to-day are ready for use. To-morrow afternoon at 4 o'clock the regular song service will be held in the parlors, the address will be by S. A. Voorhees, who is the chairman of the committee of management for this department. A cordial invitation is extended to all to visit the new quarters and see what the association has there, and especially to all men to attend the service on Sunday afternoon.
