KEEPING WILSON ASSURES PEACE, GORE ASSERTS

BLIND SENATOR WINS MUCH APPLAUSE IN BOISE AT ROUSING MEETING

Boise, Idaho, Nov. 2.—Oklahoma's blind senator, Thomas P. Gore, played upon the emotions of an audience of 1700 persons for two hours in a pithy, racy, Democratic campaign address at the Pinney. His quiet, good natured but keen, occasionally biting, crooked frequent laughter and applause, yet when he chose he brought his audience to the verge of tears.

"A vote for Wilson is a vote for peace, a vote for Hughes is a vote for war" was the backbone thought of his address. He drove this point home with the dramatic painting of two superb word pictures—one of Europe, weltering in its blood, the other of America, smiling in the sunshine of peace and prosperity. For the several minutes of this recital, attention was intense. Applause broke the suspense when he cried:

"Not for all the crowned heads of Europe would I send one Boise boy into the maelstrom of war."

Senator Gore claimed for the Democratic administration the credit of constructive legislation — legislation for the masses as against the special interests. He defended the caucus, which had been attacked by Senator Borrah in his address from the same platform before an audience equally large. He decried the alleged attempt to arouse sectional feeling by campaign addresses, styling it as "waving the bloody shirt." He told especially of the reduction of the tariff and of legislation for the benefit of agricultural interests.

People commenced to arrive shortly before 7 o'clock and by 20 minutes after 7 the lower floor and the first gallery were filled to capacity. By 7:30 the entrance to the balcony was closed.

ELECTION BETS WAIT ON POLL OF THURSDAY

ry the state. He was unable to wager it. Scores of smaller bets were made at the Waldorf-Astoria yesterday at even money on the Wilson-Hughes fight, and several larger wagers at 10 to 9 on Hughes to beat Wilson.

"I have't been able to find much of that money at long odds on Hughes," he said. "The backers of the Republican candidate are holding back in the belief that they can get long odds on Wilson. I think the gentlemen will be accommodated, for I confidently expect Mr Wilson to go to the polls as favorite."

At Considine's Forty-second street and Broadway, there was a bet of $2,000 to $1,800 on Hughes yesterday afternoon, another of $10,000 to $9,000 and scores of smaller wagers. There has been considerable spirited betting among bookmakers along Broadway, who do not announce their wagers.

Republicans are saying that the fact that the odds on the curb are staying at 10 to 9 on Hughes shows that the even money talk of Democrats wasn't real, and argue that the large sums are not willing to back Wilson at evens. Democrats are asserting that the drift in odds from 2 to 1 on Hughes to 10 to 9 and even will continue this week, and that the wagers made at that figure have been small, that the men who wish to bet Republican will find plenty of Wilson money before election day arrives.

STUDENTS WANT IT IN THE NUDE OR MONEY BACK

Philadelphia, Nov. 2.—"Give us the nude or our money back! Away with fig leaves and muslin draperies. We demand a nude class, not a costume class. We wish to study the anatomy."

This cry clamored today in the ears of Howard Fremont Stratton, director of the art department of the Pennsylvania School of Industrial Art, by a dozen irate young men, voices the latest development in the nudity versus prudery controversy that is shaking the night life class to its very depths. The simultaneous appearance of a man gowned with two yards of muslin draped about him and 100 young women students, Misses Woodruff and Jones, the first of the feminine sex to join this class, to respond to a roaring upon which threatens to split the class and end in a walk out. "The figure was almost nude," Miss Woodruff said in hushed tones this morning. "The drapery that was used was so sheer that the study of anatomy would not have been disturbed at all."

Statue of Liberty to be Lighted After 30 Years

Thirty years after the statute of Liberty was set up in New York harbor as a beacon light for all the world it is to be properly lighted as night. After the incoming ships from Europe may see the figure of Liberty and be welcomed. The electrical industries of the nation have raised a fund to install lighting fixtures. Those who wish yet to contribute must do so quickly before the campaign is closed. Congress has made an appropriation for the maintenance of the light. This photograph showing Liberty lighted indicates how she will look after Dec. 2. That evening President Wilson and many public officials will witness the ceremony of the first lighting.
