STREET CLEANING LONG AGO

Autobiography Tells How [illegible] Contract

[illegible] schemes of [illegible] Philadelphia there [illegible] the auto[illegible] Franklin [illegible] of street cleaning by [illegible] in Philadelphia. The incident is interesting also, however, as illustrat[illegible] children obedient [illegible] to the [illegible] philosophy.

"One day," Franklin wrote, "I found most industrious [illegible] was sitting [illegible] to advertise keeping the [illegible] of clean by sweeping it twice a [illegible] carrying off the dirt from be[illegible] all the neighbors' doors, for the [illegible] of sixpence per month [illegible] by each house. I then wrote and printed a paper setting forth the advantages to the neighborhood that [illegible] be obtained by this small expense. . . . I sent one of these papers each house, and in a day or two went around to see who would subscribe an agreement to pay these six pences. It was unanimously signed, and for a time well executed. This [illegible] a general desire to have all the streets paved, and made the people more willing to subscribe to a tax for that purpose."—The Survey.

BEAUTIFUL MEDALS TO BE AWARDED AT TULSA DRY-FARMING CONGRESS

Any man who wins a prize at the International Dry-Farming Congress and Exposition at Tulsa will at once enjoy a reputation that is [illegible] national. Good farmers realize that the value of the prizes may be a penny each for the ribbon to [illegible] is worth while.

The Congress however, does [illegible] to be left out in the ordinary way. Its prizes for the Tulsa Exposition will be [illegible] of any other fair or exposition in the United States or Canada. Medals will be given for all entries, but they will not be given in money except in a few instances.

Nearly all fairs give small cash prizes which are quickly spent and as quickly forgotten. The International Congress will give specially engraved and embossed medals, together with bronze and solid silver cups and trophies and farm machinery, in prizes for all of its competitive classes.

Beautifully engraved gold and silver awards bearing the winner's name will be given in more than 500 individual classes for wheat and threshed grains, vegetables and roots and fruits. In district exhibits, where competition has been keenest among farmers, gold, silver or bronze trophies, ranging in value up to $100 each, will be given. For individual and [illegible] exhibits and in [illegible] classes. The prizes will be farm machinery, some of the single prizes ranging in value as high as $1,250 each. Every machine will be the best of its kind manufactured in America, and will be especially designed to do proper work in assisting the western farmer to produce better crops and more of them per acre. This year's prize list totals a greater value than has ever before been given at any International Dry-Farming Congress or Exposition.

OKLAHOMA'S PRIZE CROPS TO HAVE EXCLUSIVE BUILDING AT TULSA DRY-FARMING CONGRESS

Exhibits from every part of North America are today enroute to Tulsa to be shown at the International Dry-Farming Congress and Exposition beginning October 22. From Prince Edward Island to British Columbia and north to the Peace River country the Canadians are bringing their best crop products. From Maine to Oregon, Florida to Southern California and south to the City of Mexico advices have reached Tulsa of exhibits now on the way. It is a certainty that the early statements made concerning the scope of this great Congress and Exposition were in no wise unfounded.

Foreign delegates to the International Congress from Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Nicaragua, Venezuela, Guatemala, Belgium, Mexico, Russia, Colombia, Italy, Turkestan, Roumania, Hungary and China are either on the way or are packing their trunks in their home lands, while [illegible] are coming almost daily from other countries which have appointed delegates. The Canadians are planning to visit Tulsa in train loads, while the Canadian exhibits, collected at Regina, Saskatchewan, and [illegible] on September 2[illegible] are expected to arrive in Tulsa this week.

Advices from all sections of Oklahoma indicate that more than [illegible] counties will have special exhibits, while individual [illegible] are coming from every quarter of the state. It is [illegible] Kafir Corn Palace, built by the state to house [illegible] will be

PREPARED FOR MONSTER CROWDS

TULSA TO PLAY THE HOST IN GREAT STYLE

Ample Accommodations For Visitors to Dry Farming Congress Oct. 22-Nov. 1

To properly [illegible] details for the handling of huge crowds is a big job in any convention city. On the [illegible] day of October, however, the citizens of Tulsa had completed plans to fully entertain the largest number of people ever gathered together at any place in Oklahoma. Today Tulsa has every assurance of adequate and comfortable accommodation for her thousands of visitors during the International Dry-Farming Congress, October 22 to November 1.

Every hotel, every rooming house and every restaurant in the city has been busy preparing to take care of the enormous influx of strangers and facilities have been increased to handle with ease, a daily attendance of over 10,000 people.

Bureaus of information will be open day and night near the railroad stations and visitors will be furnished with full information as to the location, prices and equipment of hotels, rooming houses, restaurants and private homes. Hundreds of private families are preparing to serve meals to their guests at moderate prices and every business man in the city has agreed that there shall be no increase in the price of accommodations or necessities during the Congress and Exposition.

EXPERIENCE MEETING AT TULSA

Old World Famous to Describe Successful Dry Farming Methods.

How to grow next year's crops on this fall's rain.

This is the big secret which will be told to the world at the International Dry-Farming Congress in Tulsa beginning October 27. Many men say it can't be done, but there will be hundreds of other men at the Tulsa Congress who have actually succeeded in doing it and who will be glad to tell how.

One man from South Africa will tell how he grew seventeen bushels of wheat and twenty-five bushels of corn per acre in 1912 on one-half an inch of rainfall between planting time and harvest. Another from Stratton, Neb., will furnish proof that he raised 22 bushels of 62-pound wheat this year on four and a quarter inches of rain between January 1 and August 30. A third, from Peyton, Colorado, will be there to give the details of how he raised [illegible] bushels of wheat on 10 acres of ground with but four inches of rain from the day he planted the wheat to the day he cut it.

These men, and many others, will insist that they got good crops in [illegible] years principally by knowing how to hold the moisture of an entire year in the soil for use when [illegible] growing crops. [illegible] will tell what they [illegible] how they did it and [illegible] profits they made and they will prove to a solid ten acres of good crop rain [illegible]

The farmer in the southwest whose crops were cut by drouth in [illegible] be well repaid for a trip to Tulsa between October 27 and October 31.

LETTUCE WHILE YOU WAIT

Dinner Guests May See It Grow on the Table for Their Salad.

When at a dinner in Rome [illegible] was served with strawberries [illegible] growing on the parent vine [illegible] son earthen pot which was [illegible] by a sash of white thread. [illegible] this was the last word with [illegible] serving food at the dinner table [illegible] remains, however, for a New York florist to work what seems like a miracle. He claims to be able to grow lettuce while you wait—enough lettuce for dinner to eat with [illegible] spring chicken.

When asked to reveal his secret, he said: "I take a handful of lettuce seeds that have been soaked overnight in alcohol and I plant them in a box containing three inches of loam and quicklime. I water this well, and in ten minutes the seeds burst. In twenty minutes two tiny leaves push through the earth. The leaves grow and develop. In an hour they are [illegible] as dollars. Then you may pick and eat them. They are delicious, [illegible] salad. Sometimes when I give a dinner party I have one of these [illegible] prepared lettuce beds in the center of the table. The guests see the [illegible] grow, and when the time comes for the salad course there is the salad thoughtfully before them all ready [illegible] to pluck."

Considering what marvels in [illegible] cooking are accomplished [illegible] chafing dish and denatured alcohol, and scientific marvels like [illegible] we may reasonably expect to see [illegible] shelves in active, slaughtered [illegible] before our very eyes.
