At the Theatres

THE OVERHOLSER

In the forthcoming performance of "The Henrietta" at the Overholser theater, Friday and Saturday evenings and Saturday matinee, December 3 and 4, bring to mind several pleasing facts about the theater and its people. Here is a play that has been honored as much as any work of American authorship and its appeal as as strong today as at any time in its career. It was written by Bronson Howard, an American through and through and Robson and Crane, two Yankee comedians, were its stage sponsors. Many plays of sterling merit, dealing with various phases of our social andcommercial life, have been brought forward by American managers, but none has so completely satisfied the wishes of both critic and patron.

Thackeray's immortal novel, "Vanity Fair," is said to have [illegible] adaptation of "The [illegible] whether or not [illegible] interest, [illegible] and dramatic action [illegible] some kind. The [illegible] source of suggestion [illegible] conversation. Early [illegible] manager in the West [illegible] Bonner since William [illegible] has lent now to [illegible] territories at [illegible] in New York, in [illegible] time, old friends [illegible] to acquire greater [illegible] and as more exacting [illegible] entertainment [illegible].

And even given [illegible] from every viewpoint [illegible] writing, it has never been [illegible] just to measure up with [illegible] portunities and to [illegible] formances as [illegible] revival touring the [illegible] with William H. [illegible] Ross, Marcya Arbuckle [illegible] Sam and Mabel Taliaferro [illegible] ing dominant roles. [illegible] without good [illegible] without a sprinkle [illegible] happily we have [illegible] that he can [illegible].

Now Comes Hesitation. [illegible] "High Jinks," [illegible] which Arthur Hammerstein [illegible] seat at the Overholser [illegible] Wednesday with a [illegible] day, depends for [illegible] magic perfume which [illegible] in a frenzy of delight [illegible] and when the scent [illegible] there is produced a [illegible] tune, which one recalls [illegible] of the Casino, New York [illegible] as a "Hesitation Schottische." [illegible] added that it "has [illegible] for tea dance amateurs that [illegible] ing it almost duress [illegible] described as the most [illegible] number on the contest [illegible] is the "High Jinks" [illegible] occurs at the close of [illegible] the entire company, [illegible] land and gaily-dressed [illegible] Dembale.

THE STRAND

Francis X. Bushman [illegible] Bayne, the two most [illegible] the screen, who are [illegible] exclusively in Metro [illegible] seen here at the Strand [illegible] and Tuesday in the five part feature picture "Pennington's Choice." This production will be a decided treat for motion picture patrons for neither Mr. Bushman or Miss Bayne [illegible] appeared in any previous [illegible] to better advantage. In the role of a wealthy young New York [illegible] who must prove his worth among the woodsmen on Northern Canada before the girl of his choice [illegible] sent to marry him, Mr. Bushman has the greatest opportunity of his career. Not only does he give a faithful portrayal of the debonair [illegible] man, but because of his wonderful physique and marvelous muscular powers, he appears to great advantage in a difficult role in the woods. Miss Bayne is equally skillful in her part. First shown to a New York dressing room and afterward as her supposed twin sister, escaping with an [illegible] Canadian woods. Never before have these two stars had such an opportunity to prove their versatility. A strong cast appears in support of Mr. Bushman and Miss Bayne, including Wellington Playter, Lester Cuneo, Helen Dunbar and William Farrar.

THE MET

As an added feature with no advance in price the Met is presenting the Fayette Sextette, the jubilee singers, who formerly appeared for such a long time at the Lyric and the Airdome. Considering the big picture program and the added singing big bargain show for a nickel. "Mary's Lamb" is the feature picture attraction at the Met continuing Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, marking the first appearance in pictures of the eminent American comedian, Mr. Richard Carle. An actor of Mr. Carle's stature in his own great stage success cannot help but be worth anybody's money. "The Diamond From the Sky" with Irene Cummings and Lottie Pickford also furnishes a bright spot on the program. Heinie and Louie [illegible] at the Met in "Bold, Bad Boys." Starting Thursday comes Miss Jackie Saunders again in "Her Conquered Self," "Neal of the Navy," and the great "Wallingford." There is one thing positive you get a nickel's worth in going to the Met.

THE LYRIC

Summing it up in brief, the new program at the Lyric is "making good." The vaudeville acts are three in number and excel even those sterling features which held home folks and visitors in a series of laughs last week.

The "Cadets de Gascogne," is certainly a magnificent quartet, presenting operatic selections in a way that rung applause at every Sunday performance. The Herbert Germaine Trio, a troupe of renowned gymnasts, merited the encores received and responded with cheerfulness to several appeals. Miss Flora Brown, the prima donna of "Birdland," which title she created when with Henry W. Savage's musical production of that name, is a refined and very sweet songster, and is assisted to splendid effect by Mr. Herbert Spencer, who is a song writer and "some pianist."

Today, and again tomorrow, the great four-act film play, "The Luring Lights," which is a treat for every miss who ever had the desire to go on the stage, an interesting story of life "behind the scenes."

THE EMPRESS

The stage-struck girl is usually an object of ridicule unless she succeeds. A great many girls become stage-struck but most of them get safely over it before they get as far as the stage door. But there is one Detroit girl who is a striking exception to the rule. She is Genevieve Hamper, the beautiful and gifted young actress who is co-star with Robert B. Mantell, in that eminent actor's film debut in modern screen drama under the management of William Fox.

Miss Hamper makes her initial appearance in modern screen plays in the role of a beautiful adventuress in "The Blindness of Devotion," a drama which is described as "casting a relentless searchlight on the foibles of modern society," and which will be presented Tuesday and Wednesday at the Empress. This young actress has been hailed by metropolitan critics as "the modern Helen typifying in her wonderfully mobile and expressive features the beauty of the ages." Howard Chandler Christy, Charles Dana Gibson and other noted artists have decreed that Miss Hamper represents probably the most perfect type of classic beauty. Today Blanche Ring in "The Yankee Girl," and Fatty and Mabel in "The Sea Nymphs," are being screened.

THE FOLLY

Heading the splendid variety program at The Folly until Thursday is Fred W. Kelly's aggregation of seven Happy Youngsters in a musical skit containing some dancing and a preponderance of comedy. The Steel City quartet composed of the four male members of the company is brought out strongly in the latter part of the act and is of exceptional merit. The act carries its own scenery and is unusually entertaining. Tillie Mack and dainty little "Dot" Williams, a pretty comedienne, offer a clever number entitled "A Lesson in Dancing," but there really is more dancing and comedy talking in it than a lesson. The personality of "Dot" is scintillating and she made a tremendous hit Sunday with every audience. Jermon and Mack have a comedy singing and talking number and were well received. The photoplay program embraces eight reels of high-class pictures, the principal feature for today only being J. Warren Kerrigan in the second part of "The Adventures of Terence O'Rourke," and Rosemary Theby and Harry Meyer in a three-reel comedy, "He's Only a Bathing Suit Salesman."
