MEETING ON TRAIN BROUGHT RESULTS

Kitchen of Oklahoma City Joins Friends Who Carry Bottles In Their Grips.

Mr. R. A. Kitchen, a popular and very well known traveling salesman, whose home is 404 East 10th St., Oklahoma City, tells of an incident aboard a train that brought him good results.

"One day I met a traveling friend on the train who had a bottle of Vinaltas in his grip and he began telling me what a wonderful medicine it was. I told him of my troubles (run down, nervous, loss of appetite, did not rest well at nights) and he advised me to get a bottle at once. I did, and I am glad to say that it worked wonders with me. I have never felt better, after taking Vinaltas I sleep, and really enjoy what I eat, feel like a different man now. While traveling our states of Louisiana, Arkansas, Texas and Oklahoma I have met numbers of traveling men who carry Vinaltas in their grips."

As a general tonic and tore-you-up there is no man-made medicine that equals natural Vinaltas. It literally revives at any hour, dissolves disorders of stomach, liver, kidneys, nerves and blood. It will assuredly put to flight alcohol and liquor craving drinks. A child or most delicate invalid can take it.

Question the Vinaltas man you know, or free from the Vinaltas at Fitzhenter's Pharmacy, 309 West Main St., or write Gurney Co., Vinaltas Building.

'RUGGLES OF RED GAP' IS COMPLETE FAILURE

Clever Story By Harry Leon Wilson Comes a Christmas Eve Cropper at the Fulton

(From New York World)

"Ruggles of Red Gap" as it emerged in a dramatic version by Harrison Rhodes at the Fulton Theatre Friday night, is not a comedy that playgoers will be grateful to find in their Christmas stocking and apparently it is designed to bring the holiday sheer relief to its producers or to the backers (if there are implicated in its performance).

When a man possessed of a public reputation of such an amount of playwriting as this will long remain one of the mysteries of a mysterious theatrical season.

DEATH RATE AMONG BABIES

Overworked Mothers Account Largely for High Rate of Infant Mortality

"NO one knows how many fathers or how many mothers there are in the United States. No one knows how many mothers are at work (or gain outside their homes)." The Children's Bureau of the U. S. Department of Labor brings out this fact in its third annual report, made public Monday, and says that it is high time to determine the relative importance of the high death rate among babies of working mothers and to know how many mothers there are at work in industry.

The Children's Bureau is conducting a detailed inquiry into the social and economic causes of infant mortality. The present report shows that the preliminary of the inquiry conducted during the past year revealed an average infant death rate of 124 out of every 1,000 babies in a city making and marketing town as against a rate of 84 out of every 1,000 in a residential suburb. An even greater contrast is found between the most congested and the cleanest wholesome sections of these four communities.

All in the Family Surroundings

Concerning these facts the report says: "The more favorable the economic family surroundings and the better the general conditions of life, the more clearly are they reflected in a lessened infant mortality."

The report shows however that no deductions can be made about the relation between the general prosperity, family size and industrial employment of women until the Bureau knows the number and proportion of mothers at work enclosed in the census returns are made available by tabulation.

"This tabulation is expected by contract to be completed by the Census Bureau." Among the questions of study which the new division is undertaking to undertake are infant mortality, the birth rate, marriage and divorce, and regarding information as to family, [illegible] Feb. 1880. Prior to this information was secured in the material has not been [illegible] because there has been little [illegible] demand [illegible] for example, the comprehensive [illegible] data regarding manufactures, published by the Bureau of Census every five years. The census office has fully realized its value, but neither the Census Bureau nor the Congress [illegible] has [illegible] that sound action this body of [illegible] to be available for use.

Lines of Inquiry

Meanwhile the Children's Bureau is pursuing its inquiry into the relation of infant deaths to wages and social conditions believing "that the inquiry will prove increasingly valuable as a standpoint to more active protection of the youngest and tenderest lives throughout the nation."

Such practical results have already followed the inquiry in the [illegible] as the opening of infant welfare nurses, improving the milk supply, and bringing community interest in kindred activities.

The Bureau also approaches the problem of infant mortality in a constructive fashion through two pamphlets entitled "Prenatal Care" and "Infant Care" which are sent upon request to individual mothers.

WOMEN FACE BIG PROBLEMS

Standing Committee of National Civic Federation to Meet in January

THE Woman's Department, a standing committee of the National Civic Federation, will hold its annual meeting at the New Willard Hotel in Washington on January 17 and 18, 1916.

The Woman's Department concerns itself with problems dealing with the industrial, social and economic life of our times, and aims always to maintain the basic principle of the Civic Federation, that of the cooperation and mutual understanding of the three parts of society, the employer, employee and public. Its organization is composed of sections in various localities of the United States. These sections are autonomous, and their activities are as varied as their localities, conforming always, however, to the principles of the National Civic Federation.

17 States Represented

Seventeen states are now represented in eight sections, showing one of the strongest assets of the department—its national aspect, which links the problem of Florida and its solution with the same problem under different conditions in Massachusetts.

Many of the committees are national in their policy.

The platform includes the following:

1. The elimination of politics from the management of correctional institutions.
2. The development of character and self-control in the prisoner through the honor system, and a larger degree of self government within correctional institutions.
3. The study and further development of the principle of the indeterminate sentence.
4. The development of farm industrial prisons and other modern correctional institutions.
5. The development of the state-use system of prison labor throughout the country in order to develop the best that is in the prisoner and at the same time conserve the interest of the state.
6. Co-operation to secure Federal legislation which will make possible an effective State-use system in every state.
7. The application of proper rules regarding just compensation of prisoners in all correctional institutions, with a view to creating an interest in the prisoner in his work and sense of responsibility for the support of himself and his family, and ability to provide such support.
8. The establishment and improvement of prison schools for instruction in elementary subjects in correlation with industrial education.

Wherever possible, with the co-operation of other societies, and with consideration of local conditions, these principles are being urged.

ILL. RECORD AGAINST OWEN

Roger Sullivan and Friends Would Defeat Vice Presidential Nomination

OKLAHOMA politicians from over the state visiting the capital recently generally regret the nomination of Senator R. L. Owen as a candidate for the vice presidency a most complimentary to the senator and to the state but few of them think the senator nominee has a chance for selection.

This certainty of opinion is based upon the fact that in the last national campaign the Oklahoma senator went into Illinois and made a vigorous campaign against the Democratic candidate of the organization. They say it may have been praiseworthy from a moral standpoint, but undoubtedly was reprehensible from the standpoint of party politics, and that, right or wrong, it eliminates Senator Owen from consideration for any high national office with men like Roger Sullivan of Illinois, Taggart of Indiana and the Tammany organization of New York ready to lift his political scalp at the first opportunity presented.
