Soldiers Urged to Join in War Loan

PARIS, Oct. 13.—The French soldiers are urged to invest their superfluous cash in the new French war loan in a general order to the army issued by General Joffre. The order says:

"Days are both in France and abroad knows that however heavy the charges of the war may be, they are not disproportionate to the wealth of France, which will be increased to the advantage and credit resulting from a glorious peace.

"It is a sacred duty not less imperative than military duty itself for every Frenchman to subscribe to the loan. Soldiers who do all, risk their energies and give their lives, should avoid useless expenditure and lay aside with their superfluous cash. The more money France has, the more ammunition she can expend, economizing human lives, her true wealth, and hastening the approach of victory."

CARRANZA RAILWAY SHOPS ARE CLOSED

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Oct. 12.—The constitutionalist railway shops at Monterey and Nuevo Laredo have been closed because of lack of machinery to man them. Unless operation is resumed shortly it is reported transportation facilities will be hard hampered as many locomotives and cars are being brought to these shops for repairs. It is reported the closing of the shops was due to a well devised scheme of the workmen who started to strike several months ago. They demanded to be paid in gold instead of the currency at its certain value and were preparing to walk out when Carranza issued orders that those responsible for a strike would be severely dealt with. Recently the men have been quitting in small groups each week until the forces became so depleted the shops had to be closed.

Wife of America's Richest Young Man Plays Leading Part in Society Movie

Mrs. Vincent Astor.

NEWPORT, R. I., Oct. 13.—Robert Walton Goelet's motion picture play, which he is making about Newport, is attracting much attention in social circles. A film has been made of Beechwood, Vincent Astor's villa, and several other villas will be taken.

Mrs. Astor is said to be the heroine, although Mr. Goelet is keeping many things secret so that the pictures may be a greater surprise. Miss Ethel M. B. Harrison has the part of a maid. Other characters are being enacted by Mrs. Oliver H. Jennings and Miss Rose Dolan.

During a part of the scenario which was taken at Bailey's Beach, George Henry Warren jr. went to the rescue of a "drowning" couple, who had been thrown from a canoe with their street garments on. The canoe was tipped over in such shallow water that the players were compelled to duck to maintain the proper effect.

UNCLE WIGGILY AND HIS PALS
By Howard Garis

Uncle Wiggily and the Red Paint.

"PAINT your houses! Paint your houses!"

This is the bill Uncle Wiggily Longears, the rabbit gentleman, heard one morning as he sat on the front stoop of his hollow stump bungalow, watching the wind blow about on the ground the partly colored leaves from the trees.

"Paint your house! Paint your bungalow!" came the call again.

"What's that?" asked the rabbit gentleman, sort of sitting up and taking notice. "Paint whose bungalow?"

"Why, yours, if you'd like to have me do it, and I think it would improve it," went on the voice, and along came walking a funny looking little monkey doodle man with pots of different colored paints strung on a long stick.

"Who are you?" asked Uncle Wiggily.

"You ought to know," was the answer. "I am the jolly chap who paints all the Christmas toys such pretty colors. I paint red cheeks on the dolls and make their eyes blue. I paint the red caps on the wooden soldier boys. But now all my work is finished for the year, and soon the Christmas toys will be sent out to all the boys and girls. So, as I have nothing to do I thought I would start out and make money by painting houses and bungalows."

"Ho! And a very good idea, too!" exclaimed the bunny gentleman. "Now that you speak of it, I think my hollow stump does need a touch of paint."

"What color shall I make it?" asked the monkey doodle man, setting down the pots of paint and taking some brushes out of his pocket.

Uncle Wiggily thought for a moment. "Red it shall be," he exclaimed. "We want it to be bright red and cheerful now that winter is coming on. Make it red, Mr. Painter Monkey."

"Good!" cried the jolly chap, and then and there he began to dip his brush in the red paint and put it on the hollow stump bungalow, which was soon going to be very cheerful and gay.

"Well, this is quite delightful," said Uncle Wiggily as he watched the monkey doodle at work. "I was going off to look for an adventure, but instead I think I shall stop here and watch the painting. Perhaps an adventure may happen to me here."

The monkey doodle gentleman kept on painting Uncle Wiggily's hollow stump home a beautiful red. This painter did not have to have ladders and other things to get around the different parts of the stump, for, being a monkey, he could climb anywhere. And he could hang by his tail and use two brushes in his front paws and two in his hind paws, making four in all, so that he could paint very quickly indeed, more quickly even, I think, than your drawing teacher.

"I think I should like to paint a bit myself," said the bunny gentleman, after a while.

"Help yourself," said the monkey doodle who, just then, was painting a hard part under the roof of the porch. "Paint as much as you like."

So Uncle Wiggily took a brush and began helping paint his own bungalow. But he did not paint very long, and finally he said:

"I find my rheumatism is hurting me a bit. So I will not paint any more. I'll just lie down in the grass in the warm sunshine at the side of the house and go to sleep."

"Very good," said the monkey doodle gentleman. "Anything that pleases you pleases me."

So Uncle Wiggily went to sleep, stretched out on the grass, but he put a rug under him so the dampness would not make his pain worse.

Nurse Jane saw him lying there and she was going out to spread a blanket over him, but, before she had a chance to do this, Mrs. Wibblewobble, the duck lady, came in and they began talking about how to put raisins in the very exact and middle center of sugar cookies, and Nurse Jane was so interested in this that she forgot all about Uncle Wiggily and the shawl until along came Dr. Possum.

"Is Uncle Wiggily in?" Dr. Possum called from his auto. "Grandpa Goosey Gander wants him to come and see him so I said I'd stop and tell him to hop over."

"Yes Uncle Wiggily is out there taking a sun bath," spoke Nurse Jane.

"I don't see him," spoke Dr. Possum, looking at the monkey doodle, who was still painting red.

"Why, he was right there a moment ago," said the muskrat lady. "He must be there. I'll come and look."

She came out to look, and so did Mrs. Wibblewobble, and Dr. Possum even got out of his car. But Uncle Wiggily was not in sight.

"He must have gone for a walk," said Dr. Possum.

"No, for he didn't take his red, white and blue striped rheumatism crutch that I gnawed for him out of a cornstalk," said Nurse Jane. "He wouldn't go without that."

"I'm sure he didn't go away," said the monkey.

But, look all over as they did, no Uncle Wiggily could they find. They were quite worried and Mrs. Wibblewobble said the skillery scallery alligator might have come and carried him off in a balloon. But Nurse Jane said the alligator had turned good, and wouldn't do such a thing. But where was Uncle Wiggily?

Just then when they were thinking of sending for Old Reynal the police dog, something red, like a pot of paint, and which every one thought was a pot of red paint, moved, got up and there was the rabbit gentleman himself. But such a sight!

He was as red as a boiled lobster, and the reason no one had noticed him was because he was just the color of his red bungalow against which he had stretched out to sleep.

"Why, how did this happen?" the bunny asked, looking down at his red fur.

"I guess I must have splashed some red paint on you when I was painting the porch," said the monkey.

"I guess you did, and I never felt it because I was asleep," said Mr. Longears. "Oh, what a sight I am!"

"Never mind. I can clean the paint off you with the stuff I use to clean my paws when I am through," said the monkey. And he did. Then Uncle Wiggily was himself again, and he didn't look like a pot of red paint. And soon his bungalow was the most beautiful color, and, after he was paid, the monkey doodle went on looking for more painting work.

So Uncle Wiggily had his adventure after all, you see, and, if the tiffoll on the yeast cake doesn't turn into a gold dollar and buy itself a new automobile, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily and the bees.

Cabin Boy Used to It.

NEWPORT, R. I., Oct. 13.—The only survivors on board the United States destroyer McDougall when it arrived here were six members of the crew of the Bloomeradijk, a Dutch freighter, which was sunk. When the health officer boarded her he found all of the men sleeping peacefully, as though nothing unusual had happened. It was necessary, however, to awaken them for the purpose of examination.

The cabin boy of the Bloomeradijk, a bright lad, about 14 years old, came in on the destroyer Benham, and clattered across the deck with his wooden shoes when called for examination by the physician.

He was the least disturbed of any of the Benham, for, he explained, this was the third time he had had the experience of being aboard a torpedoed ship.
