DANA ON BUTLER.

A Pen Picture of the Bold, Bad Ben.

The New York Sun, in the year 1878, drew this beautiful picture of the man it is now supporting for president: "The life and career of Ben Butler fitly illustrates Banton's maxim: 'Audacity, more audacity—always audacity.' Whatever of fictitious consequence he has or of questionable success he may have attained can be traced to that one governing rule of his conduct. Without it he would be lost in the crowd of trading demagogues and knaves, to which he worthily belongs. With it he has become a power in the party to which, while affecting to despise his vulgar practices, yet abjectly accepts his leadership and humbly bows before his power. Hated by some, contemned by many and distrusted by all, this bad man, with his crooked ways, foul methods, distorted mind and wicked heart, glories in these moral deformities, flaunts them constantly before the public eye and traffics in them as political merchandise. The notoriety which decency shrinks from as a degradation he seeks at any sacrifice. He treats the reproach which follows such exhibitions as so much capital added to the stock of ill-fame that had already made his name odiously conspicuous in and out of congress. Rejoicing in his own shame and gaining money for open venality, discarding any pretense of principle, bound by no ties of honor, scoffing at religion, making politics a trade, despotic when clothed with authority, cowardly by nature, mercenary from habit and destitute of one enobling quality for manly attributes to lift him up above these wretched characteristics, he is to-day the leading candidate for the highest honor in enlightened and moral Massachusetts. To this complexion have we come at last."

ON 'CHANGE.

The Stock Market was Quiet, Closing Somewhat Higher, Yesterday—Cotton Steady.

Wheat Demoralized, After Much Fluctuation Closed Lower, Heavy—Corn Scarce, Higher.

NEW YORK, N. Y., Sept. 4.—Governments easier.

Railroads firm.

State securities dull.

The stock market was quiet again to-day, but dealings were characterized by considerable strength. At the opening prices advanced ¼ to 1½. Louisville & Nashville, Union Pacific, Western Atlantic, New York Central, Lake Shore and Grangers being especially prominent in the rise. Later on there was a reaction of ¼ to ⅞ per cent, in the entire active list and a drop of 1⅝ per cent. in Jersey Central. In final dealings there was a return to strength, and St. Paul, Louisville & Nashville and Pacific Mail advanced to the highest points of the day; St. Paul was brisk and in demand just at the close and left off at 81@81 1-4. Business was very dull, but withal, operators showed a mere disposition to buy on account of the favorable weather now prevailing in corn belts. Compared with last night's closing, prices are 1-4 to 1½ per cent. higher, except for New Jersey Central and Texas & Pacific, which are ½@1 per cent. lower.

Transactions 183,000 shares.
