Tutt's Pills
REGULATE THE BOWELS.

Habitual Costiveness
Causes a derangement of the entire system, and begets diseases that are hazardous to life. Persons of a costive habit are subject to Headache, Defective Memory, Giddiness, Pain in the Shoulders, Nervousness, Fevers, Jaundice, Irritable Temper and other symptoms, which unite the sufferer for business or agreeable associations. Regular habit of body alone can correct the evils, and nothing succeeds so well in restoring this condition as Tutt's Pills. By their use the only is the system renovated, but in consequence of the harmonious changes, thus created, there pervades a feeling of satisfaction; the mental faculties perform their functions with vivacity, and there is an exhilaration of mind, freedom of thought, and perfect heart's ease that bespeaks the full enjoyment of health.

SECRET OF BEAUTY
Is health. The secret of health is the power to digest a proper quantity of food. This can never be done when the liver does not do its part. It is the driving wheel in the mechanism of man, and when it is out of order, the whole system becomes deranged, and Fever, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Constipation, Jaundice, Bilious Colic and General Debility ensue. To restore the functions of the Liver and impart that beauty which always attends a healthy constitution, Dr. Tutt's Liver Pills are recommended. They are not a cure-all, but are designed solely for the disordered Liver and the diseases which it produces.

MISCELLANEOUS.

My Lady Wasp.

There she goes gown Main street. She thinks her most noticeable characteristic is creating quite a sensation among the sight seers; and the broad waist of the German woman excites her liveliest disdain. Miss Wasp, a fretful, weak and decrepit creature, is at home this fine afternoon, being not in good health. And no wonder about it, I say. There goes her stylish mother, who, ever since the days of her childhood, has been trying to squeeze herself into a letter V and a letter A. She never quite arrived at the summit of her ambition; but the degree of success that has attended her efforts has been on the whole rather remarkable, as a glance at her to-day will show. Protest on the part of parents, friends and doctor, and later, on the part of her husband, prevailed not on her. "The figure must be formed," and according to some undiscovered method of reasoning, it must be formed by means of the corset. The waist must be made smaller. But how about the internal arrangements? The lungs, the liver and the stomach surely must not have room enough to work properly in that mere span of box-like palisade. Faith, the dear, delightful, stylish girl did not know for years she had such things. Any affirmation to that effect was looked upon as an insult by her innocence. But she discovered this territory, these interior provinces. The discovery of a new continent was as nothing beside this revelation. One woe was piled on another, in a most discouraging manner. I could tell just what pains and aches she had, were I writing for a medical journal, but it is not necessary to go into particulars here. We all know in a general way, the penalties of this horrible and sinful practice.

The most discouraging feature of the matter was, that our charming, our delightful Mrs. Wasp, Miss Yellow jacket of former years, referred all these ailings that rendered her life miserable, to other causes than the true one. She had "all the weakness that flesh is heir to." She knew that man, and woman too, were born to trouble, as surely as the sparks fly upwards. She alternated between a state of assumed patience in bearing the sufferings that "were sent, no doubt, for some good purpose"—(a rather covert piece of criticism on the way things are run in this world)—and a state of fretfulness, and open rebellion, with expressions of dissatisfaction with the present administration, in exceedingly bad taste not being in a position to really damage the Great Executive, she began to vent her spleen on her family; and everybody thought that although Miss Yellowjacket could sting pretty sharply, Mrs. Wasp, when she sat down on one, was apt to raise a swelling. Mrs. Wasp's daughter, Miss Wasp of course, is a poor creature, without any form to speak of; at least it is far too shapeless to require or allow the services of the corset. Poor girl, she has inherited a weak body and a complaining spirit; and for this "dispensation" the mother is ready to credit the Ruler of the Universe. Now all this sort of talk is little better than blasphemy. If there is one thing about women more certain than another, it is that they come by their diseases (whose name is legion) through transgressions of certain common-sense laws of health, and that among these trangressions, one of the most dangerous and most fruitful of evil, is the compression of the vital organs by the detested, the abominable corsets. Whoever told womankind that corsets served to improve the figure? Whoever told them that their admirers, the men, admired this their worst enemy, let it be loosely or tightly laced? Whoever did so, was, I assure you, dear creatures, an emissary of the devil, who is a liar, and the father of it. Any man who has a level head, and whose admiration is worth the having, despises the whole detested business. This matter of wearing a corset is, firstly, a cheat, meant to deceive the sap-headed and the perverted in taste; secondly, as generally worn, it is far from being an improver in any sense of the word; and thirdly, as many use it, the result is positively ugly. And above all, the evil physiological effects that follow from its use, succeeded necessarily by equal deplorable effects on the temper and on the mind, are the active and efficient agents in causing the sun to be darkened and the moon to be turned into blood, not only for the ladies themselves, but for their husbands and brothers. Thus the woman, who should be the light and comfort of the house, is liable to become its plague. And what is the root of all this evil? Alas for human presumption! It is to be presumed that the Creator knew what He was about when He fashioned Eve from the rib of Adam. If He had intended to build her in two sections, connected only by the vertebæ, He would doubtless have made the internal economy to correspond with this idea; but no doubt for reasons that seemed good another plan was followed. The woman of the present day, however, knows a thing or two. She has self complacency by the yard. She can give points to the Great Artificer in woman-building. When Eve was made, they knew very little, it appears. That we of the year 1887 should not know more than was known in the year 1, is absurd; so let us put on the corset. All right, ladies; put on the corset if you will, but mark the words of one who hates fraud, who hates silliness, who hates whining and rebellion against the wise ordering of nature, who hates the perversion of beauty as he hates the very old fiend from whose fertile brains these things take their source; listen, I say, while I tell you that in thus altering the bodies that God made in the way that appeared to Him good, you are putting upon them the mark of the beast, the vile old rebel that was cast out of Heaven, for introducing disorder in place of order, discord into the place of harmony, ugliness where before was the beauty of God's perfect handiwork

His Mother.

"How's my mother?" he slowly answered. "She was purty well half an hour, when we had a little arguments in the back yard and she pitched the clothes-bar at me."

'I understand,' said the other boy as he wearily sat down on a curbstone and reached out for a straw to break in pieces in his little fingers, "that she's second-hand."

"Exactly. She was a widow when pop married her, and I guess she looked upon it as her last chance. That's what we were arguing about this morning, and that's why she got mad."

"Do you call her mother?"

"I did up to yesterday. She agreed to give me fifty cents a week to call her mother round the house when pop was home, and two shillings more every time I called her ma before the neighbors. She paid up all right the first week, but defaulted on the second, and now I'm addressing her as stranger. I do business on a cash basis, I do, and when the cash stops the ma business comes to a dead standtill."

"That's it perfectly. Do they spoon much?"

"Lots. Guess pa thought it was his last chance, too, the wey he acts. Say, Jim, it's awfully tiresme for a boy to be arond where so much spooning is going on. It is kinder turnin' my stomach agin vittles, and I feel weary all over."

"Must have struck you purty sudden?"

"Y-e-s, it did. Pop and me and his sister had been keeping house alone for seven years, when one day he drove up with this second-class person in a hack and told me to kiss my new ma."

"And did you?"

"Naw. Made a climb for the back fence, and did't go home till the police threatened to send me to the Reform School."

"How did your aunt take it?"

"It was rich. Them women embraced and kissed at 2 o'clock p m., stehdard time. At 3 my aunt was out of the house, bags, bundles, and oldumbrelas, and the stranger had full possession. I wasn't there to see it, but the neighbors laughed till their sides ached. I guess my aunt is running yet, for we haven't heard from her."

'Do you 'spose this—this secondhandedition will go up to see your mother's grave."

"Will she? Well, don't bet you any money on it. About one of the first questions she asked me was what the gravestone cost, and how often pop went up, and when I told her she kicked the cat across the kitchen and broke a lamp chimney with her elbow. Next day I heard her saying to pop that she'd just like to see a husband of hers fooling away his time in a graveyard. If she and pop ever'd go up there, and pop so far forgets the situation as to heave a sigh she'll mop him over a hull acre of graves."

"Does she go through your pockets after you are asleep?"

"She sot out to, but I filled 'em with red pepper, and she didn't get her eyes opened till next day noon. Since then we treat each other with coldness."

The two sat looking at the cobblestones for a long time, and then Jim suddenly rose up and said:

"I know what I am going to do."

"What?"

"I am going to be gooder to my mother than ever before. I've got two cents, and I'm going to take her home two palm leaf fans and ask her to keep on living for my sake."

A Boy's Composition on Girls.

Girls are very stuckup and dignified in their behavior. They think more of dress than anything, and like to play with dolls and rags. They cry if they see a cow in a far distance and are afraid of guns. They stay at home all the time and go to church every Sunday. They're always sick; and always funny and makin' fun of the boys' hands and say how dirty! They can't play marbles. I pity them, poor things. They make fun of boys and then turn round and love them. I don't beleve they ever killed a cat or anything. They look out every nite and say, "Oh, an't the moon lovely?"

There is one thing I have not told and that is they always now their lessons bettern boys.

—The position of country editor is not held in the deserved, merited and high esteem it should be. Country papers are notrespected as they ought to be. If a family can afford only on paper, let that be the home paper; for it concerns a family more to know what is being done in its own county than it does to know the news of distant places. The city paper cannot give, and does not pretend to give, the local news that its country readers must have; but the good country paper does give a fair epitome of the world's news. No other publication can supply the place of a good local paper. If both cannot be retained—if either the city journal or country newspaper must go, let it be the former; for nothing can supply the place of the local paper.—Ex.

Important Decision.

The cases argued before the Supreme Court of the United States some time ago involving the constitutionality of the Kansas prohibitive liquor law, has just been decided in favor of the State. The points upon which the plaintiffs in error depended for a judgment in their favor, was that the prohibition statutes of Kansas are in conflict with the fourteenth amendment to the Constitution of the United States, which says: "No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty or property without due process of law."

Mr. Justice Harlan, in rendering his opinion, says that previous decisions of the Supreme Court, both before and since the adoption of the fourteenth amendment to the Constitution, make it clear that legislation by a State, prohibiting the manufacture within her limits of intoxicating liquors, to be there sold or bartered for general use as a beverage, does not necessarily infringe any right, privilege or immunity secured by the Constitution of the United States.

As to the contention that no Legislature has the right to prohibit any citizen from manufacturing for his own use or for export or storage, any article of food or drink not endangering or affecting the rights of others, the Court admits the correctness of the proposition, and says:

"It will be observed that the proposition, and the argument made in support of it, equally concede that the right to manufacture drink for personal use is subject to the condition that such manufacture does not endanger or affect the rights of others. If such manufacture does prejudicially affect the rights and interests of the community, it follows from the very premises stated by counsel that society has the power to protect itself by legislation against the injurious consequences of that business."

The power of determination as to the injurious consequences of any business, the Supreme Court says is lodged with the legislative branch of the Government.

Regarding the assertion that the prohibition of the manufacture and sale of liquor deprives those engaged in the business of their property without due process of law the Court says that "property under our form of government is subject to the obligation that it shall not be used so as to injuriously affect the rights of the community and thereby become a nuisance. The State of Kansas had a right to prohibit the liquor traffic. It did not thereby take away the property of the brewers. It simply abated the nuisance. The property is not taken away from the owners; they are only prohibited from using it for a specific purpose which the Legislature declared to be injurious to the community.

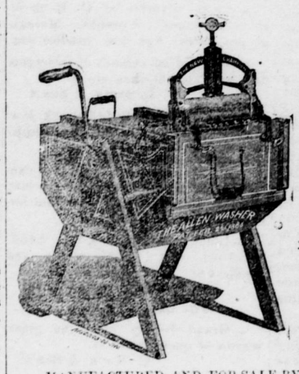
THE CELEBRATED
ALLEN WASHER.

Why it is Superior to All Others in the Market,



1st. Being easily worked, and does the work more rapidly than any other machine.

2nd. Being enclosed prevents all splashing of water and inhaling of steam, so injurious to health, and unavoidable in the use of all open machines or the washboard. Thousands of women are yearly broken down in health by the labor of the washboard and inhaling of the sickening fumes of the washtub, from clothes worn on the person or bed of the sick and well. This is not the case in using the Allen washer; being enclosed it retains the high temperature so necessary in removing the dirt from the goods; another material point is that there is no friction on clothing to damage them. Persons who have used the Allen washer say they believe that it will save the price of it in less than a year's time.

The peculiar action of the water in the machine (which cannot be understood unless one sees it) forcing a strong current of water through the clothing at every vibration of the agitator, which is caused by the peculiar construction of the top of the machine, in connection with the New Champion Wringer, makes the Allen Washer a household necessity.
