QUAY'S TICKET.

Delamater nominated on second ballot. Louis A. Watres, of Scranton, nominated for Lieutenant-Governor, and Thomas J. Stewart, of Norristown, for Secretary of Internal Affairs.

The noise and bustle in the usually quiet city of Harrisburg began with Monday, but it seemed to be noise without meaning and bustle without profit. Friends of Hastings, Delamater, Montooth and Stone established their headquarters in the different parlors of the Lochiel House, during the day the candidates arrived, the front of the hotel was adorned with streamers and pictures, and one banner was stretched across the street. Brass bands were playing; the Delamater people were busy telling that he could have the Philadelphia delegation when he wanted it and electioneering for Col. Schoonmaker, of Pittsburg, for second place with him as first; there was dickering back and forth as to who should be selected for temporary and permanent chairmen; Hastings and Montooth had a conference that evening, and a few men locked themselves in a room to write a platform.

Tuesday the different clubs, all headed by brass bands, arrived in the town and paraded the streets. The Montooth special train of Pullman cars was perhaps the largest that pulled into the depot, though the Lancaster delegation for Hastings numbered four hundred, and all day and nearly all night the streets echoed with music.

Senator Quay was not present, but his son Dick was there and had a room at the Lochiel with a private wire from it to his father's house in Beaver, and Dick went about insisting that Delamater must be nominated, and that his father would be satisfied with nothing else. Delegates who refused to believe this are said to have received messages signed M. S. Q. and reading, "I shall expect you to vote for Delamater on second ballot."

The sensation of the day was the effort of the Delamater people to force Montooth to take second place. Every Delamater worker was instructed to say that Montooth would take second place, and though Montooth's friends denied this, the Delamater men went about with badges labeled "Delamater and Montooth," which Montooth's friends considered an insult.

During the day there was a reported break in the Philadelphia delegation from Hastings to Delamater, and yet both men were claiming about 70 votes each on first ballot.

Nobody knew exactly what the vote on first ballot would be or how the vote would change after that. A man in practical politics is like the man who started home on a dark night and coming across an old circus ring walked around and around it till he did not know where he was.

Wednesday morning everything pointed to the nomination of Delamater. It was easy to be seen that the Philadelphia delegation was rotten; that Delamater's friends had captured them and that Quay intended to force Delamater upon the party.

The tickets for admission to the galleries of the Opera House were dished out at the hotel that morning by one of Chairman Andrews' clerks, and the Delamater men got nearly all of them.

The Opera House was crowded by ten o'clock; the delegates were in their seats, and at 10:30 Chairman Andrews called the convention to order.

The roll was read by a clerk; George S. Graham, of Philadelphia, was nominated and elected temporary chairman; committees on platform, credentials, etc., were selected; Walter S. Lyon, of Allegheny Co., was nominated and elected permanent chairman, and then the convention adjourned for one hour to give the committees time to make their reports.

At 2:30 p.m. the Convention reassembled and Chairman Lyon called for nominations.

J. J. Carter, of Crawford Co. nominated Delamater and made a long speech; Geo. B. Orlady of Huntingdon nominated Hastings naming him as a man whose success did not depend upon what the enemy did; Alfred Darte of Luzerne named Osborne; Major Moreland of Pittsburg named Montooth; W. E. Rice of Warren named Stone, and Emerson Collins of Lycoming named McCormick. The roll was then called alphabetically by counties and the first ballot resulted as follows:—Delamater 84, Hastings 64, Montooth 30, Stone 15, Osborne 8, McCormick 3. Hastings had 24 votes of the Philad'a delegation and Delamater 13, Stone 1 and Montooth 1.

The Chair announced no nomination, and a second was ordered. It began in breathless silence, and when Allegheny Co. was reached three of its delegates, including Chairman Lyon voted for Delamater, six of the Philad'a delegation dropped Hastings and went to Delamater, but when the roll was completed he did not yet have enough to nominate him, and some more Phil's and other delegates changed their votes, nominating him and making the ballot stand as follows:—Delamater 105, Hastings 58, Montooth 19, Stone 15, Osborne 4, McCormick 2.

Then the convention adjourned till 7 P. M., and at the evening session Watres was nominated for Lieut.-Gov. on first ballot, Montooth positively refusing the place. Stewart was nominated for Secretary without opposition.

An effort was made to induce General Hastings to act as chairman of the State Committee, but he refused, and Chairman Andrews was re-elected.

The "platform" is of the usual variety, excepting that the first and most prominent plank endorses and vindicates Quay. The convention adjourned late that night.

The 4th of July.

Although Decoration Day has almost superseded the 4th of July as a day for a display of patriotism and loyalty to our government, and although it is hard to realize that this vast Nation sprung from a few English colonies scattered along our Atlantic seaboard, it will be well for all parents to teach their children the significance of the event the day commemorates, and impress upon their minds as far as is possible the value of our institutions.

True liberty does not mean license, and this Nation will continue to have a government, Republican in both form and spirit, only so long as its people are true men and true women.

All nations have as good governments as they deserve and no better.

Adjourned till July 1st.

A note of Wednesday's proceedings of the Congressional Conference at New Castle, was made last week's paper.

On Thursday, the convention reassembled. The Beaver Co. delegation voted steadily for Townsend, excepting one time when wishing to make Jackson show his hand they all voted for McDowell, Butler voted Black, Lawrence for McDowell and Jackson, and Mercer for McDowell and Brown, giving McDowell 38 votes and making him the nominee, if the vote had stood, but before it was announced, the Beaver men arose and changed their vote to Townsend. The Beaver men had "strings to their votes" and the matter was the subject of considerable joking during the next recess. The meaning of the thing was that Jackson is or was determined to beat Townsend.

Then Beaver Co. wanted to adjourn, but that was voted down, and the order of voting was reversed, viz, from Beaver, Butler, Lawrence and Mercer, to Mercer, Lawrence, Butler and Beaver, and balloting was continued until forty-eight ballots had taken when the Convention adjourned till next day.

On Friday, balloting was continued, Beaver voting steadily for Townsend, and Butler, Lawrence and Mercer complimenting each other with a few votes occasionally. During the day the Butler delegation resisted propositions from both the Lawrence and Mercer delegations, either of which would have led to the nomination of McDowell, and the Convention resolved that when it did adjourn it would adjourn to meet in New Castle on July 1st.

Late that night after 100 ballots had been taken, the Beaver men made another effort to adjourn and succeeded; Mercer Co. giving them fourteen votes and Lawrence three, making 31 in all, a bare majority, and the Convention stood adjourned. The Beaver men wished to adjourn till after the State Convention, when they expect some help from Quay.

The Butler delegation pursued an honorable course throughout, Galbreath's speech was the best made, and the delegation came home with nothing to regret.

A Shocking Execution.

ELKO, Nev., June 20.—One of the most terrible scenes in the history of death by the noose was witnessed in the Elko jail yards this morning, when Josiah and Elizabeth Potts were hanged for the murder of Miles Faucett. Hardened men shuddered and turned pale as they saw the woman's head nearly cut off by the rope and the blood drench her clothing, while beside her swung in fearful contortions the the body of her husband.

A MOST HIDEOUS CRIME.

The Pottses have been in jail over a year for a particularly atrocious murder on New Year's day, 1888. Faucett was a well-to-do bachelor, 70 years old, and born, like the Pottses, in Manchester, Eng. They were friends, but Faucett disappeared, and about a year afterward the Pottses were arrested. At their trial evidence which was clearly circumstantial showed that for the sake of obtaining ready money the woman had struck her victim on the head with an ax, then crushed his skull to prevent identification. Not satisfied with this, the two cut up the body, and the woman tried to boil it down, but could not on account of the stench. She tried to feed it to animals, and ended it by burying the body under the house.

THE WOMAN MUCH THE WORSE.

The man was a spiritless being, but his wife had all the spirit, venom and bitterness of a hardened woman, so that an awful scene was expected to precede the execution. During the time she was in jail Elizabeth gave ample proof of her fearful temper and terrible tongue. Last night she had her last tantrum. She upbraided her husband, called him a coward and sneak, and when the officers attempted to reply, turned on them and berated them fiercely. Then she went to bed, but not without hurling a curse at her husband. She closed her eyes and seemed to sleep, just as she had done on Wednesday when she sought suicide, when suddenly one of the watchers heard her gasp, and when he asked her what was the matter, she feebly asked for water. The guards then discovered upon investigation that she had severed an artery right before their eyes. A physician fixed up the wound, after which she was never left alone for a moment up to the moment of her death in the most shocking manner to-day.

Portersville, Pa.

JUNE 26th, 1890.

Rev. Wright of Coultersville, held communion in the Presbyterian church on last Sabbath.

Wm. Covert returned home from Tarkio, Mo., where he has been working for the last four years. His many friends greet him with a hearty shake of the hand.

Dr. S. E. McClymonds and family, formerly of this place, but now residents of Mo., returned home to their many friends on a visit for a few weeks. We are all glad to see our old neighbors.

Prof. John McClymonds, son of James McClymonds, who is Sup't of the schools in California, returned home to see his father once more, it being 18 years since he left this place.

Mrs. Fulmer, daughter of Robert and Nancy Badger of this place, has come home to pay her parents a visit, it being a number of years since she left Portersville.

Charley Kennedy and wife of Sharon, were the guests of his father, Wm. Kennedy, a few days last week.

Miss Sue Glenn has returned from Slippeyrock, where she has been attending school.

Sup't McCullough held an examination in the Portersville school-house on last Friday. His class numbered 18. The teachers speak very highly of the Professor.

Mr. Critchlow and wife of Prospect, were the guests of S. A. Heyl and wife on Sunday.

H. Heberling and wife were in Butler over Sunday.

A pleasant surprise party was held at the house of James Newton, on Saturday, June 21st, it being Mr. Newton's birthday. A host of friends numbering about three hundred gathered around his home with overflowing baskets of refreshments of all kinds. The Portersville Cornet Band and Orchestra made the woods and fields resound with the finest of music while the ladies prepared dinner. H. E. Heberling and Frank Covert were appointed a committee to escort Rev. Ralston and Mr. Newton and wife to dinner, which they did in a very graceful manner. After dinner Rev. Ralston made a few remarks and then at Mr. Newton's request asked God's blessing, after which the band played the long-meter doxology. Then the friends gathered together and general good time until about five o'clock when the older folks started for home, while the younger stayed until the cool of the evening. Mr. Newton extends his thanks to his many friends. VITA.

NEAR Earlville, Ill. thirty-two people were killed by a cyclone, last Friday afternoon.

Speaker Reed's Triumph.

But for the iron will, firmness and alertness of Thomas B. Reed, Speaker of the House of Representatives, the past week might have seen both branches of the American Congress pass a free coinage bill in a shape full of danger to the country's business interests. Speaker Reed saved the House from that blunder. We congratulate him on his triumph, and his country, the whole country, on having him in the right place at the right time. We hope this week will see a moderate bill for the increase of our silver currency on a sound basis that will command the confidence of the conservative, sent to the President.—N. Y. Press.

Letters from Distant Points.

In a letter to his father, who lives in Butler, George Heydrick who is now doing some surveying in Kentucky, related an exciting experience that he had a few days ago. He was riding along the road, and as he neared a log cabin he noticed a girl hiding in a fence corner, a moment after an old man came out of the cabin with a Winchester in his hands and began blazing away at him. The first shot whizzed past his face, the second struck the fence along side him and a third struck and slightly wounded the horse he was riding, which turned and galloped off for all it was worth. As soon as he reached a town he went to a Justice of the Peace and told his story and wanted the man arrested, but the crowd that gathered talked him out of it. It appeared that the girl had gone out to meet her "feller," whom the old man didn't like and whom he thought he was shooting at—a little mistake that don't count in that part of Kentucky.

In a letter to his sister at Petrolia Joe Burkhard then on his way to Peru, said:—After leaving Panama we went on board the Spanish American S. S. Limeri and stopped at every port between there and this place, Talara Bay. The first port is called Buena Ventura, meaning bonny fortune, so-called by Morgan, the pirate, after his successful raid and burning of Panama. The finest scenery I ever saw in my life is at Tumaca. At Bahia we took cargo—all cocoa beans, which are raised here in great quantities. Chocolate is made from these beans. At Wauta they manufacture Panama hats of a kind of root which grows here. It is so finely woven that rain has no effect upon it. The hats cannot be broken; you can crush them up and put them in your pocket; they last a lifetime and cost from $4 to $150 a piece; it takes as high as a year to make them. The largest place we stopped at was Guayaquil, in Ecuador, where I saw some of the most beautiful women I ever saw. They are both white and black, small and finely built, and have small but regular features. In fact, they are daisies when young, but perfect looking old hags after becoming 30 years of age. They all were high-heeled shoes and walk very oddly. Guayaquil is a town of about 20,000, and there is not a pane of window glass in the whole place that I saw. There are at least 15 or 20 churches in the town—All Roman Catholic. I went to a mass and heard some very fine singing. At some of the churches they don't provide any seats. You see the higher class of Spanish and Indians going to church, their servants following them with chairs. It looks funny to an American. The country round is low and swampy and covered with heavy forests. The place is very sickly. Fruit is at a discount here; you can buy a dozen of pineapples for 10 cents and the largest bunches of bananas I ever saw are sold for 40 cents, a dozen of cocoanuts for 10 cents, and so on. But food is dear. At the next port we stopped, the character of the country was all changed. The climate is very healthy, the only fault I have with it there has been no rain here for seven years. There is not a blade of grass, a tree, nor anything green in sight—nothing but sand and hills on one side and the Pacific Ocean on the other. You have heard a song "The Lighthouse by the sea." I not only sing it, but sleep in it. I tell you it is very nice to see the looming of the big waves as you go to sleep, but the romance is all knocked out of it when you go to bed and find lizards and sand ants that are worse than bedbugs in your bed. But I am pleased with the trip and am in the best of health. I am going 1200 miles farther south very soon. Good bye with love to all. From your loving brother.

Gust Schmuck, who is now in Burmah, with some other Americans drilling an oil well, writes to a friend in Enfenton as follows: This is the poorest country I ever lived in, I am certain. It is nothing but sand hills all cut up with water courses, called chaungs or mullas. These are all dry at present and have been ever since we came into the country; have had but two light rains in all this time. The rainy season will commence about the 15th of this month (May) then water will be running in every direction for the next five or six months. Our water for drinking, cooking and bathing is all brought three miles from the Irrwady River on bullock carts. One barrel is a load for two oxen and they make two trips a day. The oxen are about the size of a Jersey cow and have a hump on the shoulders. The ox driver manages his oxen with two lines, the same as teamsters do a team of horses, except that the native has no bit to put in the ox's mouth, but punches a hole through its nose, that is, from one nostril through to another, then passes a thin rope through the hole, brings the two ends up on the head close behind the horns and ears and ties it firmly, as there it remains till rotted away. The line is tied into this loop or bridle, I don't know the proper name for it. Their carts are made entirely of wood.

There is not one bit of iron in the whole outfit, except sometimes a driver will put a brass bell on the neck of one of his bullocks, but for every brass bell you will see a dozen wooden ones.

There is no native blacksmith shop near here that I know of. I saw one at a town named Mihlah when we were coming up on the boat.

The Burmese think we are wonderful people, in fact supernatural, and think we ought to go to their pagodas (places of worship) and allow them to pray to us. Of course we cannot talk to them nor they to us, but the Company's agent, who talks the three languages, told us that they had told him this. One day shortly after our arrival here we were placing some sills. While two or three of us rolled over the main sill a number of Burmese oil producers were standing by with the agent watching us and they exclaimed, "Can three white men roll that timber over?" The agent said, "Yes, easily," and at the same time asked them how many Burmans is would take, and they said it would take 18 or 20 at least.

Some of them pray that we get dry holes. They say the white devils should go back to their own country and let them get their own oil out of the ground.

I have see very little vegetation in this country. There are a few cocoanut trees, a few palm or palmetto, I don't know which; some cactus, and some large trees I don't know the names of. Natives raise corn and rice in part of Burmah but not here. Beans and onions are all I have seen under cultivation in this country.

The thermometer has registered from 105 to 107 deg. nearly every day for the past four or five weeks.

Rheumatism

We doubt if there is, or can be, a specific remedy for rheumatism; but thousands who have suffered its pains have been greatly benefited by Hood's Sarsaparilla. If you have failed to find relief, try this great remedy. It corrects the acidity of the blood which is the cause of the disease, and builds up the whole system.

"I was afflicted with rheumatism twenty years. Previous to 1883 I found no relief, but grew worse, until I was almost helpless. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me more good than all the other medicine I ever had." H. T. BALCOM, Shirley Village, Mass.

NEIGHBORHOOD NOTES.

Father Mollinger of Troy hill is seriously ill, the result of overwork during the late celebration at his church.

A peculiar story was developed at a trial before Alderman McMasters of Pittsburg, last Saturday afternoon in which Miss Katie Logan charged John Stehley, a pumper in the Bakerstown oil field, with refusing to marry her. Miss Logan's parents separated 16 years ago and have not met since. She lived with her father at Bakerstown and her mother has remained with two other daughters in Pittsburg. Mrs. Logan and Katie did not meet since the latter was two years old until last Friday, when the latter came to her mother's home and related the circumstances of her downfall. The two then went to the Alderman's office and made the charge against Stahley. Stahley said he was willing to marry the girl, but that could not be done until her father's consent is secured.

At Mercer last week, H. W. Ellis got a verdict vs the L. S. & M. S. R. R. of $7,900, for being struck at a crossing, by a train that did not whistle or slacken its speed.

At Leechburg, last Friday, "original package" Silverman disposed of sixty-five bbls of beer.

Justice Piper of Beaver Co., lately drew up letters of separation between a Hungarian named Stephen Busse and wife. She took the furniture and gave Busse $60. It seems she has been keeping company with another Hungarian in the North End and he furnished the $60. They all think the letters of separation is a divorce and now Mrs. Busse and the man who furnished the money are living together as man and wife. It is said the man already rues his bargain and wants Busse to take back the woman and refund the money, but Busse is satisfied with things as they are and refuses to have anything more to do with the woman.

August 25 will be a big day in Greensburg, Pa. The electric street railway will be completed on that day, and business is to be suspended in honor of the event.

Hold your tongue! Mrs. John Karns, of Armstrong Co., recovered $400 last week in a suit for slander instituted by her against a neighbor.

D. C. Rogers, who has been living in Kittanning with his wife and two children for about two months, was arrested a few days ago on the charge of embezzling $2,500 from different I O O F lodges of Pittsburg.

A Livermore fisherman the other day in lifting his outline secured three or four good fish, and then a hook came to the surface bearing a portion of a human scalp, covered with light brown hair five or six inches in length. This was in the Conemaugh, and doubtless this was a portion of the remains of one of the Johnstown flood victims. The fisherman no longer casts his lines in that stream.

The admission of Miss Alice McGee to the bar at Warren is having the effect of stimulating other young ladies to similar achievments. Miss Florence M. Cook, of Pittsburg, a school teacher, has declared her intention of submitting to examination as a student-at-law. Courting is always more pleasant when ladies are actively engaged in the proceedings, says a Butler youth of the male persuasion, and a law student himself.

Barney Hoover, an aged citizen of Plum township, Venango Co., was the victim of a bold robery last Friday night or Saturday morning. Mr. Hoover lives alone in his isolated house near Sunville. The nearest residence is his son's house, about 150 yards away. At midnight on Friday, the old gentleman was awakened by a knock at his door. Upon opening the door, he was struck on the head with a club and knocked senseless. The robbers then bound him, and began to search the house. They found a sum of money, variously estimated at from $200 to $500, which they took. They then stole Mr. Hoover's horse and rode him turn about till they reached Coon Wallace's place, on the Wallaceville and Cherrytree road, where they left the animal. The thieves seemed to be heading for Titusville or Oil City.

A case of considerable interest to the A O U W was settled in the United States court, in Pittsburgh lately, in which Mrs. Susan Little was the wife of Mr. George Hoffman, who died two or three years ago. Mr. Hoffman had been a member of Active Lodge No. 21, A O U W, for some time; having family troubles he stopped paying his assessments and was suspended by the lodge, but before the suspension had been made by the Grand Lodge, Mrs. Hoffman tendered payment of the assessments and it was refused. Hoffman died shortly thereafter, whereupon his widow demanded payment of the face of the policy ($2000) and the Grand Lodge refused. The United States court ruled that the tender of the money was equivalent to payment, and the case was settled before it reached trial, the plaintiff receiving $1650.

A. C. Crouch, of Petersburg, Ind., and R. B. Griffith, of Bellevernon, Pa., administrators of the estate of the late John Crouch, of Bentleysville, who was murdered a few weeks ago, have offered a reward for the discovery and return of cash and notes aggregating from $5,060 to $8,000 supposed to have been stolen from the Crouch residence, at the time of the murder. One-half of the cash is offered for the return of the lost property.

"STILL HERE."

Why certainly we are here. Don't you remember we told you a year ago we were going to stay and don't you remember we told you how we had been working for ten years to reach the top of the business, and told you we were nearly there. We told you we were not certain then whether we were the largest dealers in our line in this great state of Pennsylvania. But now we are the largest. Just think of it right here in Butler—the largest wholesale and retail carriage dealers in the whole state—well it is true we have the largest wholesale and we have the largest retail trade. We carry the largest stock and sell cheaper than any house in the state, the amount of business we do enables us to do so. We do not sit around doing nothing and customers come in then size him up and go for all he has we do a straight forward business and having all kinds of grades of work we tell you the quality you are getting every time. Why just think we sell the very same top buggy for $45 that others sell for $65, and we keep also the very best hand-made buggies—we keep the best work kept by any dealer. We have harness for $6 and up, also the very best hand-made harness—in fact we are the only place you can get a really good fine harness You should look at our stock of surreys—the best you ever seen at one place in your life. We had them all made for this year's trade and they are the latest styles, and the finest work too—and spring wagons, we have more spring wagons than you could shake a stick at. Just think of it, $33 for a spring wagon, also the very best kind made; and then the best part of it is you always know just what quality of work you are getting when you buy from us. Our rule has always been never misrepresent and never try to get rich off one customer. Remember we keep everything in our line and pay strict attention. You will always find us here. We cannot enumerate, but just think of it, the best collar pads for 50c, horse collars 50c and up, carts for $10 up. We have 12 different kinds, lap robes for $1 that others sell at $1.50, fly nets cheaper than you could make them yourself, good kip collars ticking face, tufted with hair with pat fastener on top for $2,—just the collar (only a little better) you have been paying $2.50 to $3.00 for. Good hand made team harness—best oak tanned leather, all complete for $32. You paid $38 to $40 for the same, only yours hadn't as good leather. Now do you think this talk is all true or is it only an advertisement. It's quite a picture isn't it? Well, now neighbor, look here; If you just come down and spend one hour looking through our large stock and don't say its true as far as it goes only not half told we will pay you for your time—is not this fair? Come down, it is only a little distance from Main St. down to 35 W. Cunningham St. —where we pay no rent. We want to see and get acquainted with you if you never were here before, and if you have been here come and see us for we are glad to meet old friends.

Respectfully,
S. B. MARTINCOURT & CO.

S. B. Martincourt,
J. M. Lieghner,

P. S. We forgot to say we sell about 25 Kramer wagon per month just for variety and could sell a great many more it they could make them faster We have a car load of 26 on the way now which will be here about May 8th, if you want one, come soon, they go off like dynamite. Don't forget the place. Read the name again and start.

ONLY TOO WILLING.

"I know that I am no match for you in wealth, weight or social position."

"I know how unworthy I am of you, too; but may I not hope that some time—some day—'

"Yes," she asserted, lifting her regal head; "Some day, why not now? I am ONLY TOO WILLING"

That you should compare our goods and prices with those of any other dealer, and then decide whether you do better elsewhere. We are willing because we know that we have the clinch on every other buyer. We sell for less, because we buy for less.

-o- WE WANT YOU -o-

To buy where you can do best, and if we can't do better than any other firm, we are willing to see you go away but we know you'll not; for we can and will do better, because we offer better goods at lower prices. Come and sample our goods and

WE'LL MAKE YOU HAPPY

With bargains that are at the top notch of cheapness and value. Others may claim to do as well by you, but we do all we claim, and perform every promise we make. Are you willing to lend us your ear? We will pay you bigger interest on the loan than you could get on hard cash. We are better on the trade than we are on the talk. But we can tell what we know so that you can understand us. Are you willing? We don't stretch things when we say we have the largest room, largest stock, greatest variety and sell at lower prices than any house in the whole county. All the latest novelties and standard goods will be found in our late arrivals of spring and summer styles in mens', boy's and children's fashionable clothing, hats, shirts, underwear, collars, cuffs, ties, hosiery, trunks, valises, satchels, umbrellas, overalls, jumper jackets, jewelry, watches, chains, charms,
