Republican County Ticket.

FOR JURY COMMISSIONER,
A. O. EBERHART.

Gubernatorial Talk.

A correspondent of the Pittsburg Dispatch, writing from Harrisburg, says:

"The scramble for the Governorship thus early in the fight is attracting the attention of the people, with nearly every Congressman in the State a prospective candidate. It is impossible to furnish definite information, but the struggle promises to be the liveliest in the history of the State.

"Last January the influence of Senator Quay was much sought after by aspirants for the high place, but since the failure of the reform programme and the consequent resentment of the people the different candidates are emboldened to branch out for themselves. They realize that Senator Quay has a battle of his own to wage, and in spots it would be a handicap to be known to have his support.

"On the other hand, the Senator will avoid entangling alliances until he is sure that his Senatorial title is clear. Public sentiment may change radically in a year, but at this time it cannot be denied that a number of the Beaver statesman's strongest friends are wavering in their loyalty.

"In the Juniata Valley, which the Senator carried in the Combine war, with the exception of Perry county, the sentiment is said to be decidedly anti-Quay. Huntingdon, which was the banner Quay county two years ago, is reported to be quite offish, so that if deals can be made in Allegheny and Philadelphia counties profitable to the municipal bosses they will certainly be arranged. Martin, in the Quaker City, will take advantage of the Senatorial contest to nominate a Mayor of his choice, which will be the crucial test of his leadership.

"A quiet boom for Governor has recently been started for Secretary Reeder. So many gubernatorial candidates are aspringing up that it is hard to say which is the latest. The friends of General Reeder are urging his claims upon Senator Quay, but the supposition is that the latter favors Congressman W. A. Stone of Allegheny. Colonel Stone is reported to have said that Colonel Quay never told him he was for him, but nevertheless the Northside Congressman is regarded as the Quay candidate. Attorney General McCormick has not announced his candidacy, but he will surely be in the race, and at present his friends are at work in his behalf.

The supporters of Congressman C. W. Stone of Warren, outline the situation as follows, and they have their man in training, not exactly as a compromise candidate, but they hope he will be acceptable to both factions and come in at the home stretch when the others are winded. They profess to believe that Stone of Allegheny is the choice of Senator Quay, and McCormick will be the standard-bearer of the independents and anti-Quay forces.

The fight will be hot, no doubt bitter, and eventually narrow down to these two, with the result that neither can be nominated. Then the C. W. Stone people will step forward and propose their candidate as a good one upon which both wings of the party can unite. They will point out that in the Combine row Stone, of Warren, was neutral and could not be induced to come off the top rail. It was not his battle and he stood aside and watched the other struggling. This line of action is good tactics for the Warren Congressman, and he would win probably if the contingency he anticipates should arise, but that is as uncertain as any problem in casuistry.

Meanwhile, a powerful combination is being formed east and west to boom Attorney General McCormick, whose political record since he came into prominence has been consistent. He will unquestionably be backed by the Business Men's League, the Wanamaker people and, of course, will be supported by Governor Hastings and his friends.

Ex-State Treasurer Jackson, of Armstrong county, has the gubernatorial bee badly.

He is counting upon the delegates from his Congressional district, composed of Jefferson, Westmoreland, Indiana and Armstrong. State Chairman Elkin will have considerable to say about Indiana, and Beacom and Robbins will have to contend with Colonel Huff for the control of Westmoreland. The political whirligig is changing so rapidly that Colonel Huff may land on top in the next contest. He is smarting under his defeats of the last two years.

In Central and Western Pennsylvania there are Congressman Arnold and General John A. Wiley, who have an eye on the executive chair. They will be factors in their sections of the State. The men of money bags who would like to be Governor are Congressman William Connell, of Scranton, and ex-Congressman Leisenring, of Luzerne.

Connell has been waiting to see what will turn up, and up to date has been catering to the wishes and advice of Senator Quay. At the same time he is reaching out for other help, but judging from his methods he is too cautious to be successful. The supporters of Leisenring claim he will surprise the natives. It is noticed that most of the people who talk in this vein live in Luzerne county. They claim he has set up delegates quietly over the State, and has laid a groundwork that will make him formidable. This may be true, but Leisenring will have to do some great legging before he wins."

SENATORIAL PROSPECTING.

(From the same correspondent.)

The rumor is persistent that the Philadelphia Senators will vote for Quay, but the bargain has not been sealed. Martin's aim in life at present is to renominate his brother-in-law, Receiver of Taxes, and to secure a successor to Mayor Warwick friendly to himself. The Ward Leaders' League, according to Clerk of Courts Ahern, will support Senator Quay for another term in the Senate. Just now Martin holds the whip hand, but he will deal at the right time, and Senator Quay will not be averse.

The poor Durham faction, which elected Crow Sheriff, is to be pitied. It is upon the verge of revolt from Quayism, but doesn't know where to turn. To break with Quay would rebound to the advantage of its arch-enemy, Martin, so the workers grind their teeth and vow vengeance in secret, while the Beaver statesman confers with the combine leaders. Nothing in life is more galling than the exasperation of helplessness.

The history of the sale of Senatorial gold bricks to Governor Hastings—that is how the general describes the transactions—is an interesting chapter in State politics of the last two years. The facts are only now coming fully to the surface. It is known that when Cameron realized that he could not be reelected and he immolated himself for the white metal, Senator Quay and he sent a reliable man to Governor Hastings to notify him that he should be his successor.

Then the programme was to make Lieutenant Governor Lyon Governor, and the honest intention evidently was to pass the Pittsburg charter legislation. But the success of Sandy Crow in the Philadelphia shrievalty fight gave Penrose, Durham and Andrews a new lease of life, and the rest is history.

Penrose was virtually forced upon Quay through the bold engineering of Andrews. Governor Hastings was sidetracked and Lieutenant Governor Walter Lyon had to take his medicine, with his colleague.

The unfortunate temper of Penrose is getting him into a peck of trouble. His flare-up with Attorney General McKenna is in keeping with the row he had with Governor Hastings. This is not all, however. James McManes, the old Philadelphia leader and head of the Peoples Bank, it is current talk in political circles, also had a disagreement with the young Senator, and the banker notified Senator Quay, as the story goes, that whenever he wished to communicate with him in the future to come himself, or send another messenger than Senator Penrose. These little sideplays give the boys plenty to talk about.

It is difficult to say whether Senator Quay really intended to retire from politics or was playing a game to have Governor Hastings sign the Becker bill. Notwithstanding the talk of the Senator's friends that he was personally indifferent to the Becker measure, but interested himself to please Penrose and Durham, it is in evidence that he was as eager to have it signed as the chief promoters.

It developes that before Senator Quay indulged in what some people think was a hot-weather joke, that he was tired of politics and would retire at the end of this term, he wrote a letter to Governor Hastings making the same announcement, and suggesting to the latter that he would be his logical successor. It is stated that in this letter, which gossip seems to make quite authentic, the Beaver statesman employed an Indian metaphor, saying that he longed to sit quietly in his wigwam, and all he asked was that before the young braves went to battle they would call and take council of him. Then, when he presumed that this letter had properly paved the way, he and Senator Penrose called on the Governor, and the row followed after Daniel refused to sign the Becker measure.

At this hearing it is said on good authority that Senator Quay suggested the first thing to be done was to floor Martin, and the Becker bill would do it.

The Governor replied that Senatorial gold bricks had no further charms for him. Since then Senator Quay has had at least one conference with Martin, the man he proposed to wipe off the map—and this is modern politics. It is evident if the people want reform in government they must select men to administer affairs and pass laws who do not break them.

Since it is settled that Governor Hastings will not be a candidate for the Senate next year the anti-Quay people are casting around for a man to jump into the breach, and it is certain a good one will be found, who will meet the Senator on his own terms of a popular vote. It will be rembered that in his appeal to the people when Dalzell opposed him Senator Quay invariably selected counties for the test where his machine was in good working order and he was sure of victory. After several pronouced successes his stock went up in fine style as a result of reflex action on other voters.

Thus the first bout with Dalzell occurred in Armstrong county, where the leaders are of the Quay stripe, and the Senator won in a canter. Since then the workers in that county have been rewarded. Colonel Jackson was made Treasurer and Dan Heiner was sent to Congress, and now is to be made United States District Attorney.

The opposition will not fall into the same trap, but will adopt Quay's tactics, of selecting their counties in which to make a big bluff. Tioga, Lycoming, McKean, Clinton, Center, and even Clearfield, York, Perry, Bucks, Lehigh, Carbon, Wyoming Lucerne, Schuylkill, Allegheny and some others would not be one sided Quay territory. The anti-Quay candidate will be coached to keep out of counties on which Senator Quay has a mortgage. It will be a battle royal with the shrewd politics not all confined to the Quay faction.

Prospect and Vicinity.

Be it remembered that:

James McClymonds, who has worked for H. A. Kelly all summer, departed for his home at Centreville, Saturday. We hope Jim will come to see us now and then.

Joe Allen and Clay Sarver came down from Isle, Saturday morning, and spent awhile in town.

John Waddell and family went down to Evans City last Saturday to witness the ball game between Evans City and Mars.

John Weigle and wife and Bird Dick and mother-in-law, Mrs. Teets, were New Castle visitors last week. Bird was surprised to see the bustle there.

Ira Gallagher and wife were in Butler one day last week, and we must say that Ira and that new buggy make a fine appearance.

H. W. Henshaw and G. P. Weigle went berry hunting, west of town, last Thursday, and Mrs. J. J. Shanor and her girls came to the rescue with a lunch at dinner time. Mrs. Shanor thought the boys were "dudes," but thanks anyway.

Mr. Bartell of Warren, O., was the guest of T. H. Boehm and family last week. We are glad to hear that Mr. Bartell has a liking for our town.

Alex Stewart and wife and Stewart Wilson and wife attended the recent Weller-English reunion in Lawrence county.

Miss Nannie Murphy of Butler has been visiting her aunts, Mrs. M. Heyl and Mrs. John Weigle the past week.

Mrs. H. W. Langherst and girls spent last week with Mrs. Lewis Albert of the Hickory Corner district, visiting and canning huckleberries.

Newt Riddle thinks that some of the kittens in Prospect are the meanest and most impudent felines he ever saw. It was fun for John Shaffer and Thannie Grossman to watch the antics.

Miss Maud Heyl has returned from a visit to her uncle, John Flinner of Lancaster twp.

Marion Henshaw and wife of Butler were the guests of C. M. Henshaw and wife, a recent Sunday.

Curt Grossman recently went up to Elora to attend to some important business, and during an ungarded moment the horse broke the fills out of the buggy, and poor Curt had to come home on horseback. Curt, a fellow will have some mishaps.

Burry and Heyl are making the rounds again with their "Low-down Massillon" thresher, doing their usual good work. John has a great time keeping George and Ford from talking too much with the girls

Edmundson's band formed in line and marched to the home of M. T. McCandless, a mile north of town, one evening last week. Of course Mrs. McCandless furnished the boys with an excellent supper.

C. P. Krantz, P. H. Sechler and Silas Kissick have of late indulged in the poet's fancies, and have written some fair productions.

Mrs. George Deitz and children of Allegheny have been summering at the Boehm House, the past two weeks. We believe that city folks would find more rest, comfort and health in a place like our town than they could by going to the seashore and many other places, not necessary to name.

W. T. Gallagher of Butler visited his father, Thomas Gallagher, not long since.

Supt. Cheesman of Portersville passed through town on his way to Butler last Friday evening.

John McBride and a goodly number of other picnicers from McCandless passed through town last Friday morning on their way to Slipperyrock. The young folks were enjoying themselves.

Miss Clara Heck of Butler has been visiting her relatives hereabouts, the past two weeks, and has sung some of her fine solos for the Luther League.

Mrs. J Park Hays of the Mile Run district, recently spent the day with her old schoolmate, Mrs. Lepley and family.

Miss Eva Keefer of West Liberty lately visited her sisters, Mrs. H. A. Kelly and Mrs. J. L. Henshaw.

This was a great hay-harvest and Daniel Shanor and John Shaffer had nearly a hundred loads each.

Mrs. Fred Bauder and daughter Mrs. Wagner of Portersville were the guests of Mrs. T. H. Boehm, lately.

Ed. McCleary was in the city last week buying goods and sight seeing.

JOE COSITY.

POLITICAL.

The fuss that is made over the loss of Secretary Sherman's memory should not cause it to be overlooked that the same complaint has affected other eminent gentlemen. The Republican leaders of this State seem to have had a bad attack of it, concerning their own pledges, and in their arrangments for the future they hope for nothing better for themselves than that the forgetfulness shall become epidemic among the people. —Dispatch.

At the meeting of the Business Men's Republican League in Philadelphia last Thursday the candidacy of Major McCauley, of Chester county, for Auditor General, was indorsed, but the committee refrained from any indorsement of a candidate for State Treasurer. The following resolutions were unamously adopted:

Whereas, We, the Business Men's Republican League of the State of Pennsylvania, in our battle to protect the people's interests from unjust and vicious legislation, and against the machinations of selfish and insolent dictatorship, are pledged—strictly within party lines—to support candidates of ability and fitness, regardless of factions or their affiliations, believing that the essential step towards improved political methods is the election of better men to office; and

Whereas, It was thought that the passage of the bill requiring interest on State deposits would deprive the State Treasurership contest of any vital issue, but the shameless and persistent assaults upon the State Treasury by the "mileage grabbers" and Treasury looters" during the last session of the Legislature have demonstrated that the conduct of the office of the State Treasurer is still of vital importance to every taxpayer, and make it necessary to elect as its guardian a man whose vault keys shall not be merely the "will of a political boss," and

Whereas, The widespread discontent and disgust pervading the rank and file of the Republican party in Pennsylvania, because of long-continued "one-man domination," should be met by the selection of men as candidates for Auditor General and State Treasurer of unimpeachable character and marked independence, free from those influences that longer render possible or encourage "Treasury raids;" therefore, be it

Resolved, That we heartily indorse the candidacy of Major Levi C. McCauley, of Chester county, for Auditor General, and pledge him the active and earnest support of this organization, believing his sterling Republicanism, splendid qualifications and independence to especially fit him for that office; and be it further

Resolved, That we earnestly admonish the party managers, if they have honest regard for Republican welfare, to take heed of the threatening storm of righteous disapproval, by nominating for State Treasurer a man who possesses the confidence of the party, and and whose best boast is not that "he is the creature of a boss."

WASHINGTON.

The efforts to secure the removal of United States District Attorney Hall by inducing him to resign, or by ousting him summarily, were given a final quietus at the Department of Justice last Thursday when Senator Penrose called, it is supposed at the instance of Quay, to make a last appeal for the immediate appointment of ex-Congressman Heiner.

The Attorney General has not hitherto given any explicit answer to frequent recent arguments of this character; but when Penrose become somewhat dictatorial she was told that Mr. Hall would not be removed; that his resignation had not been asked for, and would not be, and that he would be permitted to serve the brief remnant of his term without being disturbed.

The Attorney General intimated that it was not specially complimentary to Heinr and his friends that they should connive at the dismissal of an officer against whom there were no charges, and that such a peformance would be of no benefit to the prospective appointee.

It is believed the sole reason for the movement is that Quay and Heiner have been somewhat alarmed at the growing strength of Higgins, of Erie, and the efforts making to secure the Attorneyship for him.

Drs, G. L. Campell, and S. M. Bippus have been appointed Pension Examining surgeons for Butler Co.

R. M. Stewart of Brownsdale and A. M. Borland of Butler have been granted pensions.

Flick.

Be it known that:—

C. C. Criner is home from the Cornwallis, W. Va. oil field, for a short stay.

Mr. and Mrs. Levi Logan of Jefferson Centre were the guest of A. H. Gold last Friday.

Misses Florence and Lucy LaPoint of Cooperstown were the guests of Miss Pearl Criner, last week.

Miss Nannie McGowan of Tarentum was the guest of Mrs. J. N. Fulton, last Friday.

Miss Mable McCall who has been attending school at Wilmerding, is home on a vacation.

Wm. Johnston and Wm. Beckwith were the guest of J. C. Johnston, last Sunday.

An interesting game of ball was played last Saturday between the Flick nine and Oakpoint Students. Score 23 to 22 in favor of Oakpoint.

Chas Firman, J. C. Johnston and Jas. Anderson are seriously thinking of going to Klondike.

Wm. Davis of Tarentum was the guest of his cousin, S. F. Johnston, last week.

Miss Grace McCall is the guest of Mrs. John Allen.
