Mural Painting at the World's Fair.

The domes of the Liberal Arts building as they stand are extremely interesting as experiments in a field to which America has not thus far contributed many workers. The decorators of the domes of the Liberal Arts building have had to paint on curved surfaces to be seen from beneath, and they have been met by difficulties, such as those of complicated foreshortening, which, it may be presumed, few American artists have been accustomed to attack under similar circumstances.

Among the painters, Mr. Cox has some of Paul Baudry's science, and so has Mr. Blashfield. Mr. Cox has a share of that mastery of draftsmanship and the laws of perspective which puts something into a picture that goes through it like an electric shock. Immediately the figure painted by a man with this gift lifts up its head, as it were, and has a being on the surface which has received it. Mr. Cox's figures have vitality, and they owe it to the fact that technically they are sound. But what also proves him a mural painter from whom much is to be expected if he is given other opportunities in the future is the thoroughness with which he has done all his work. In decoration of this sort a shabby architectural background or a slovenly scroll will go far to weaken the entire effect.

The balustrades and the bands for the leg ends in Mr. Cox's dome are drawn with a delightful firmness. Mr. Blashfield's dome is not distinguished by remarkable draftsmanship, but in a purely decorative way he has accomplished much.—Royal Cortissoz in Century.

THE MARKETS.

McELROY & GIBERT.

NEW ORLEANS, La., July 29.—(Special.)—McElroy & Gibert say: Futures—The New York Chronicle's weekly report confirms the late accounts received from Texas regarding the exceedingly serious nature of the existing drouth, and speaks also of the need of rain in sections of Arkansas, Tennessee, Mississippi and Alabama. This influence more than counteracted the effect of further news of the shutting down of mills in England, or rather the prolongation of the usual annual fortnight holiday to a month's recess. It is hardly likely that the mills which have decided to quit work, have done so with their warehouses full of cotton. It is decidedly more probable that their stocks of raw material have been reduced to a minimum, and that the financial situation has forced them to suspend operations by reason of their inability to secure the needed money for additional supplies.

If we look back a year in the light of intervening events, we see that last year the world was burdened with extremely large stocks of manufactured goods, while the mills must have been supplied with a heavy reserve of raw material, otherwise they never could have kept their spindles going as long as they did on their extremely small takings from the visible supply. At the present time all this has changed. Manufactured stocks are much smaller and with many mills stopping must decrease during the next month. Financial stringency prevents spinners from carrying any large stocks of raw cotton, hence it naturally follows that the visible supply must in itself completely represent the surplus carried over than is any other previous season. In other words, the surplus is practically in the visible supply of raw cotton. Under these circumstances, any disaster to the growing crop, by alarming spinners who are short, would have an exhilirating effect upon prices. The financial situation, however, bids fair to continue strained and unsatisfactory, and up to the present time has fully counteracted the unfavorable outlook for the growing crop.

Liverpool closed at the same prices as yesterday, with sales of 5000 bales of spots. Our market closed 2 points above last night. Spots continue firm at unchanged prices with sales of 550 bales.

ATWOOD VIOLETT & CO.

NEW ORLEANS, La., July 29.—(Special.)—Atwood Violett & Co. say: Futures—The record of the day is one-half point improvement in Liverpool with 5000 bales spot sales, and 2 points improvement here. Drouth reports still come from Texas. To show how poorly the weather bureau is provided in Texas for giving information, either as to excessive, or lack of, moisture we ascertain that there are now about twenty weather stations in Texas, which is the same number as existed twelve years ago, since which time the crop has nearly doubled in size. If we take into account the big yield of last year, it shows therefore the necessity for some decided improvement in that respect. Our exchange will take some action to that end and in fact we have already interested ourselves hoping to bring about some action on its part in connection with the New York cotton exchange in asking from the coming session of congress an additional appropriation to improve such service.

The New York stock market was again so seriously disturbed today by declines in some stocks almost as low as those touched in the panic during the month of May. Wheat also dropped 2 1-2 cents, equivalent to about 2-5 cents in cotton.

The world's visible supply of American today is 2,000,000 bales, against 2,437,000 bales last year, 1,408,000 bales the year before, and 2,190,000 bales last Saturday, and showing the loss in sight this week to have been 16,000 bales, whereas the loss this week last year was 100,000 bales.

CHICAGO PRODUCE.

CHICAGO, Ill., July 29.—The liquidation in wheat, which has been so much of a feature in the last few days, continued this morning and prices again beat all records for cheapness. September sold off at one time 2 3-4c from the close last night, and December 2 1-2c. Everybody seemed to have wheat for sale. As the decline went on, margins became exhausted and many trades were closed on that account. Cash sold as low as 56 1-4c; September, 60 1-4c, and December, 67 7-8c. Near the close the shorts began to cover, causing a rally of 1 1-4c from the low point.

The corn market was remarkably firm considering the weakness in wheat. At the close there was 3-8c decline.

Trading in oats was light and scattering. The market fell off slightly in sympathy with wheat and corn. It firmed up toward the close, and ended at the top price of the day.

The provision market repeated yesterday's performance. The clique held September lard at $9.70, and packers sold some at the. Ribs were weak and closed 5c lower.
