A VETO PROPHESIED.

Fate of the River and Harbor Bill Looks Gloomy.

NOW IN HANDS OF THE PRESIDENT.

Trustworthy Information Says It Will Surely Be Vetoed.

QUICK ACTION ON MEASURE.

Senate Dallied With Question of Raising Revenue—Factional Impeachment Resolutions In House.

Washington, May 23.—The river and harbor bill, as finally passed by both houses, was taken to the White House at a late hour this afternoon by the messenger of the committee on enrolled bills. As soon as the house had agreed to the senate committee's report the enrolled bills went to work in the house. The bill agreed in all respects with the recommendations of the conference committee. Owing to the numerous amendments it was no easy task, but as a continuous work the committee finished a little morning after Saturday. The enrolled bill was then taken to Speaker Reed, who signed it and immediately announced the fact to the house. Then the clerk bearing the matter in charge hurried over to the senate, where the bill received the signature of Vice President Stevenson.

This action of the vice president has been announced to the senate, the bill taken back to the enrolled bill committee and afterward to the White House. The president has ten days (exclusive of Sundays excluded on which to act on the bill.

Washington, May 23.—While [illegible] are on the stream and harbors [illegible] wrangling over the Sioux [illegible] and were endeavoring to secure [illegible] Board of commissioners or [illegible] naming of them. President [illegible] Reed just as busily occupied [illegible] himself with facts in [illegible] facts without the sanction of the [illegible] engineers. The surplus [illegible] stare for success with [illegible] bill will be one of the casualties [illegible] session.

Information was received [illegible] by trustworthy sources that [illegible] ever doubt may have been [illegible] regarding the fate which awaits the river and harbors bill. It is [illegible] It will be possible, of course, [illegible] to pass it over the veto [illegible] will, from the president's [illegible] place itself on record as [illegible] money for projects which [illegible] are unworthy, if not [illegible].

In anticipation of receiving the [illegible] at early date, he has [illegible] has now before him, the [illegible] district engineers from [illegible] ry on all the projects [illegible] and in signing, if he [illegible] his signature will [illegible] the extravagance and [illegible] time of public money. [illegible] of projects which [illegible] for the continuing [illegible] in this way whose [illegible] secretary of war, [illegible] him, and in the advertising [illegible] will accompany the veto [illegible] parture from well-established [illegible] with is given a [illegible] the president [illegible] and motives all this will [illegible] in the history of the [illegible] he will have to [illegible].

CONGRESSIONAL PROCEEDINGS.

SENATE.

Washington, May 23.—The [illegible] senate was occupied [illegible] chemes" bill and the second [illegible] the speech by Mr. Allen [illegible] ler bill to prohibit the issue of [illegible] out the authority of congress.

On the ground that the [illegible] bill was a revenue measure [illegible] ments to raise revenue were [illegible] all failed.

One by Mr. Mills (Dem., Texas) [illegible] pose a 5 per cent internal [illegible] on all products in excess of [illegible] sum from the capitalization [illegible] ing iron, steel, copper, [illegible] wool, cotton wool, [illegible] laid on the table by a vote of [illegible].

Amendments by Mr. Allen [illegible] for an additional internal [illegible] $1 a barrel on beer, ale and [illegible] Mr. Gray (Dem., Del.) for an [illegible] of 10 cents a pound on [illegible] similar rates and the [illegible] then adjourned to give way [illegible].

As Allen devoted his time [illegible] question and the platform of [illegible] party, he was much interrupted [illegible] Gray, Hill, Chandler, Butler and [illegible] senators, who sought to hear [illegible] popular tenets, as the speech was [illegible] decidedly informal. The speech [illegible].

The senate passed forty pension [illegible] bills in as many minutes without [illegible] tion, thus clearing the calendar [illegible] thorized the publication as a [illegible] ment of Governor Altgeld's [illegible] fary Carlisle's recent [illegible] speech, because the letter had [illegible] printed.

Mr. Sherman endeavored to secure [illegible] addition for the filled cheese bill and [illegible] Mitchell (Rep., Oregon) tried to [illegible] resolution for the election of senators by the popular vote.

Mr. Sherman's case prevailed so far [illegible].

Mr. Sherman explained that the bill was similar to the oleomargarine act.

"This is a revenue measure," interrupted Mr. Hill. "What revenue will be received from it?"

"That is difficult to tell," replied Mr. Sherman, "it was estimated the oleomargarine would produce a million, but it yields two or three millions."

General discussion ensued upon the question whether the filled cheese business was a fraud and whether it can stand a tax, and Mr. Hill gave notice that he would move to substitute the house rates for the senate amendments having been adopted.

Mr. Teller said in a sarcastic vein he would like to inquire if the senator from Ohio had on several occasions pertinent to because we have not taken steps to increase the revenue, why he did not offer amendments to the bill for revenue purposes? The senator from Ohio on several occasions had on hand revenue bills ready to be offered, but he had never offered them.

Mr. Sherman said he had never offered any measure to repeal the laws which allowed United States notes and treasury notes redemption in coin.

That he had ignored and refused to have enforced the anti-trust law.

That he has sent United States troops into the State of Illinois without authority of law and in violation of the constitution.

That he has corrupted politics through the interference of Federal office holders.

That he has used the patronage of the government to influence legislation in the interest of his party.

That he has used the patronage of the government to influence legislation in the interest of his party.

That he has used the patronage of the government to influence legislation in the interest of his party