

THURSDAY MORNING, May 20th, 1880.

Dem. Primary Meetings.

In pursuance of authority vested in us and in obedience to the resolution of the Democratic State Central Committee recently assembled in Baltimore, the undersigned hereby request the DEMOCRATIC AND CONSERVATIVE VOTERS of St. Mary's county to attend at their usual places of voting.

ON SATURDAY, MAY 20th, between the hours of one and six o'clock p. m., and elect by ballot TEN DELEGATES to attend the County Convention to convene in Leonardtown.

ON TUESDAY, JUNE 1st, at 2 o'clock p. m., to send three delegates to the State Convention to meet in Baltimore.

ON WEDNESDAY, JUNE 9th, which latter Convention will select Democratic electors for the State at large, and for the several Congressional districts, and also to send delegates to the National Convention to assemble in Cincinnati to nominate Democratic candidates for President and Vice President.

JOHN F. DICKET, GEO. W. MORGAN, Dem. Central Com. for St. Mary's county, May 13, 1880-1d.

THE TRUE POSITION.—Whilst it is allowable to have presidential preferences, and to express them frankly, no man should be sent to Cincinnati who is committed by his private feelings or pledges to die in the last ditch for or against any presidential aspirant. The Cincinnati Convention will be called upon to speak for the whole democracy of the United States, and local and personal preferences should be made subordinate to the general outlook. It is not the man but the cause, that is entitled to the chief consideration, and we hold that man to be the fittest, whether it be Field or not, who bring a tried democrat, shall develop before the Convention the greatest influence in the doubtful States and give the greatest assurance of securing harmony and united action in the party. This is the true position, and this, the Fort Tobacco Times says, is the position of Hon. Richard T. Merrick. Whether Mr. Merrick shall be sent to the Convention from this district or not, no man of different views will properly represent it, or the democracy of the State either, outside of rings and cliques.

HATES AND THE PRESIDENCY.—In a recent interview with a correspondent of the Chicago Tribune, President Hayes took occasion to express his views with regard to the Presidency, and while disclaiming any intention of again becoming a candidate, intimated that "Barkis" might be willing under certain contingencies. He intimated that the nomination could by no means be considered settled, as "there are a number of candidates in the field, each one of whom has a considerable following, and there is plenty of time for others to come to the front." "My position," he continues, "in regard to accepting a second nomination under any circumstances is well understood, and will be adhered to. If the Chicago Convention cannot agree upon one of the prominent candidates now before the country, there are a large number of dark horses to select from without looking this way."

"Mr. Thomas and myself."—"Mr. Thomas and myself" are still very sore over their defeat at Frederick, and are loud in their expressions of disgust at the result. The Collector and C. C. F., of the American, both vow vengeance against the men who so completely outwitted them, but at present there does not seem any way in which they can get even, so that they will be obliged to nurse their wrath and keep it warm until a more convenient season.

The general public will not be inclined to waste any great amount of sympathy upon "Mr. Thomas and myself," as it is quite probable that if the Creswell men had not cheated them, they would have cheated the Creswell men.—Both sides were in to win on any terms, and the Creswell wing being composed of the sharpest wits, the Thomas wing came out second best. That is about all there is of it. "Mr. Thomas and myself," however, may learn a useful lesson in political maneuvering from Mr. Creswell's management of the Frederick Convention. That gentleman does not belong to the old Grant guard for nothing.

GRANT STILL AHEAD.—The opposition to the third term movement is brisk and uncompromising, but Grant still goes on picking up the delegates; and his friends already present a column that must be exceedingly discouraging to his opponents. The opposition see little chance of preventing his nomination on the first ballot, unless they can bring about a break in either the New York or Pennsylvania delegations, and strenuous efforts are now being made in that direction. Conkling and Cameron have their hands full in keeping their respective columns solid.

HARMONIOUS MARYLAND.—The Democracy of the country at large, says the Baltimorean, might well learn a sound lesson in harmony and unity from the example that has been recently set by the Democratic leaders of Maryland. In spite of all past prejudices and differences, the most complete accord now exists among all sections of the party, and the reconciliation which has been effected is of the most hearty and unreserved character. As an evidence of this, it may be stated, with almost absolute certainty, that Senator Whyte will doubtless go to Cincinnati as chairman of the Maryland delegation. Let the Democracy of other States follow the good example of Maryland, and, burying all local differences, present a solid front to the common enemy.

THE WHITTAKER MYSTERY.—In the case of the colored cadet at West Point, the "experts" have established, and we suppose the Court of inquiry will concur in the verdict, that Whittaker "slit his own ears" to get up a sensation for the benefit of the republican party and to bring some of the white cadets into trouble. We beg to be excused. We undertake to believe any reasonable lie, but we are really unable to stomach a story like this!

ADJOURNMENT OF CONGRESS.—The concurrent resolution for the adjournment of Congress passed the House on Saturday last by a vote of 121 yeas, says 90. The Senate, however, is yet to hear from and may refuse to agree to a day so early.

PAST FINDING OUT.—Just what the Maryland Republican State Convention meant by adopting a Blaine resolution and choosing Grant delegates to Chicago, is one of those things that no fellow (save a machine politician) "can find out."

VIRGINIA SURE.—Some weeks ago, there was a good deal of talk about a break in the electoral votes of the South, at the coming Presidential election. It was intimated by republican papers that the Democratic party, in a number of the States lately in rebellion, was disintegrating. When the combination of re-adjusters and Republicans succeeded in gaining a majority of the Virginia Legislature, the joyful cry went up that the solid South had been broken, and that the electoral votes of Virginia could no longer be counted as sure by the Democrats. So much rejoiced were the Republicans that they forgot all about the dishonorable platform upon which the re-adjusters and members of their own party in that State had come together. They ceased to denounce in the vigorous terms they had previously employed towards the impoverished Southern States struggling with their enormous debts, any intimation of a wish or purpose to evade the payment of their obligations.

Prior to the combination no language was too strong in which to characterize any movement looking towards re-adjustment. After the election, the Republican papers became strangely silent as to the conduct of the legislature in attempting to rescind the McCulloch settlement. Excuses were made for the votes of the Republicans in the legislature that they were ignorant and easily misled. When Mahone was elected Senator, it was welcomed again by the whole Republican press of the country, as a victory which showed that the State could be carried by the Republican nominee.—The third terms caught up the idea, and industriously disseminated the belief that Grant was the man who could do it, that all the re-adjusters would support him enthusiastically, and that their votes, added to the Republicans, would give him a handsome majority.

When the Republican convention met a determined effort was made by Mahone to capture the convention. His idea was that a mongrel electoral ticket should be placed in the field, composed partly of Republicans and partly of re-adjusters. He failed to carry his point, but why? Not because the leaders of the Republicans would have hesitated about agreeing to such a ticket, if they had thought it would be successful. Not at all. By the time that convention met the Republicans had discovered that the great body of Virginia Democrats were still true to the Democratic party upon all national issues.—Many of them had followed Mahone and Massey into the questionable walks of re-adjustment, but they were not willing to go with them to the camp of the enemy. It was found that the men who had voted the Re-adjusters' ticket, regarded the issue last fall as purely a State issue. They had not bound themselves so blindly to their leader that they would allow him to form for them a coalition with the Republicans upon the question of a Presidential election. From all parts of the State the news came that the people were a unit for a Democratic President and it was simply because the Republican leaders said that the combination offered them by Mahone would bring them no strength, that the mongrel ticket would, at the election, get only Republican votes, that they declined to enter into the agreement.

Since then the feeling has manifested itself in every direction throughout the State that the vote of the State must be cast for those electors who will vote for the nominee of the Democratic National Convention, and to-day the vote of Virginia can be counted as sure as that of Maryland or Kentucky. The Republicans henceforth must look elsewhere than to Virginia when they figure upon the electoral votes and make up their lists of doubtful votes. Her votes must be put down in the Democratic column.—Daily News.

DEMOCRATIC PROSPECTS.—The New York Herald says: "That any republican candidate can be elected against any Democrat is a boastful assumption not warranted by the political situation. What reason is there for believing that the democratic party is not as strong in 1880 as it was in 1876, when the republican ticket had but one majority in the electoral votes? The popular majority in 1876 was largely in favor of the democratic candidate. 4,284,265 Hayes received, 4,033,265 Tilden received. Although Tilden lost his election by the narrowest of possible majorities—a majority of one—in the electoral colleges, he ran ahead of Hayes by more than a quarter of a million in the popular vote. The democrats have at present a majority both in the Senate and the House, their majority in the popular branch of Congress showing that the people of the country at large continued to stand by them for two years after the Presidential election. What has occurred since to depress democratic hopes? To be sure there is the feud in New York; but with any other candidate than Mr. Tilden that feud will be instantly healed from the moment that the Chicago ticket is announced. There has been a steady democratic majority in this State since Mr. Tilden's election as Governor. Even last year the aggregate democratic vote was a majority, and had it been united on one candidate Mr. Cornell would have been defeated. Vote for both dem. candidates, 453,866; Vote for Cornell, 418,567.

Democratic majority, 34,789. It is generally conceded that the vote of New York will decide the Presidential contest. But in view of steady democratic majorities in the last six elections how can any sober minded republican cherish so audacious a fancy as that the weakest republican candidate can carry the State against the strongest candidate the democratic party can nominate? A weak candidate has really no chance at all in this controlling State against the united democracy supporting a popular ticket. It is mere brag and moonshine to say that a candidate who would repel a considerable number of republican votes is stronger than the best man the democrats can nominate.

Many of our citizens availed themselves of the call of the Steamer Thompson at our wharf on Tuesday morning last to visit Washington, the special attractions being the races now going on there and the contest between the champion orators, Hylan and Courtney, which is set down in the bills for Wednesday, the 19th instant. Most of the excursionists will return home on the Thompson to-night.

Our friend, Mr. Geo. Taylor, of Charles county, is amongst our soliciting officers for a weekly work. He is representing the old and reliable Richmond and Baltimore Nurseries, Franklin Davis & Co. We bespeak for him liberal encouragement and wish him success, knowing that those of our people who purchase of him will get as good stock as large capital, an experience of thirty years and careful personal supervision can produce.

Dinner at Our Lady's Chapel. The ladies of the Medley's Neck Chapel congregation, not to be outdone in enterprise by their sisters of other localities in providing means for the improvement and ornamentation of their parish churches, are making arrangements for a dinner in behalf of their own Chapel and propose having it in the grove near the church on Wednesday, June 2nd, at 3 o'clock, p. m.—See notice in our advertising columns.

The Tobacco Inspectorship Case. Judge Gilder filed on Monday last his opinion in the mandamus petition of the new inspectors against the present incumbents, granting the writ as prayed by the form. An appeal was once taken by the counsel of the old inspectors to the Court of Appeals, and this body, being authorized by law to hear such cases out of their usual order, the final decision may be anticipated in a few days.

Don't Forget the Tea Party. As this is the last opportunity we shall have to call attention to the Martha Washington Tea Party which comes off at the Society's Hall to-night, we advise our readers, one and all, who can make it convenient, to see it, and General and Lady Washington, and particularly the thirteen young ladies who have been selected to represent the thirteen original States. Admission to the Hall, 25 cents. Supper, 25 cents. Refreshments extra. Col. Crane will make a brief address.

Public Debate. The members of the Washington and Stone-Well Society will have a public debate on the evening of Friday, 24th instant, in the large hall of the school building. The question for discussion is, "Which has the greater influence over man, the Hope of Reward or the Fear of Punishment?" Supported on the affirmative by Messrs. J. W. H. Dixon and R. B. Tippet—on the negative by Messrs. R. W. Silvester and W. M. Muschette. The public are cordially invited to attend.

"Go" for Him, Brother Cox! Our neighbor of the Independent is guilty of great temerity in presuming to follow his own judgment in preference to the advice of the Speaker of the House of Delegates. We could show him beyond a peradventure if we choose, but we don't choose, and we have with us a wrong-headed brother to the tender mercies of the Times. We should have lived to let little purpose not to have found out ere this that, when chestnuts are to be taken from the fire, somebody else's paw is always the proper thing to do with. "Go" for him, Brother Cox!

The Canadian Weather Forecast. The Canadian weather prophet, seems in a fair way to supersede Old Probabilities. The remarkable accuracy of his predictions during the last few months has given him a fame which threatens to eclipse that of the regular clerk of the weather. In response to some 2,000 enquiries he has recently written a letter to the Albany Journal giving his views as to the probabilities for the next few months. The weather during that period, he thinks, will show the same sudden alternations which we have recently experienced, and so far his predictions would seem to have been completely verified.

The Sun's Anniversary. On Monday last, the Baltimore Daily Sun entered upon its 44th year, and the complacency of the retrospect it makes is quite pardonable, considering its modest beginnings and contrasting them with what it has come to be. The ability and moderation of its management, its liberality in paying for and enterprise in gathering news, the sound judgment it shows in condensing and collecting its matter, with its uniform excellent mechanical execution, fairly account for its extraordinary success and the popular favor which still follows it.

NOTICE. NOTICE is hereby given, that all persons indebted to the late Henry Neal on account are requested to settle the same with the undersigned immediately. JOS. F. NEAL. May 20, 1880-2t.

LOCAL NOTINGS.

Committee to Jail. Sheriff Ford judged in our jail on Tuesday last, under the supervision of Justice Hammett, in default of Wm. William Barnes, colored, charged with stealing a pig-ot.

Improvements Still Ongoing. We notice that our friends, T. M. Camalier & Co., have erected fine swings over the windows and doors of their new store, which are gotten up in the finest city style and add greatly to the appearance of that otherwise well constructed establishment.

The Combat Deepens! Liberal reference having been made of late by the enterprising merchants of our village to "Pirates" and the "Fines," not to be outdone, friends Tom goes for the enemy this week with a quotation from Macbeth! Read Tom's advertisement. The combat deepens—on ye brave—and remember, the free use of printer's ink is the true road to fortune!

Children's Party. In imitation of their grown-up sisters, the very young ladies of our village gave a leap-year party at the Society's Hall on Friday night last. The children were admirably entertained, the children having full room for enjoyment and behaving handsomely. We know who was the belle, and the prettiest girl in the room, too, but as soberly asked us to dance or took any notice of us, mum's the word!

Excursion to Washington. Many of our citizens availed themselves of the call of the Steamer Thompson at our wharf on Tuesday morning last to visit Washington, the special attractions being the races now going on there and the contest between the champion orators, Hylan and Courtney, which is set down in the bills for Wednesday, the 19th instant. Crop Prospects. There has been not only no intermission in the ravages of the fly among the tobacco plants in the last ten days, but reports from nearly all sections of the county assure us, that they have largely increased since the recent rain and are proving more destructive than ever. Many planters are seriously canvassing the idea of planting their tobacco lands in corn and several to our knowledge have already ploughed up and laid off large portions of lands intended for tobacco for this purpose. The death of the crop is general throughout the county. Rust has attacked the wheat in some sections, and corn-land wheat is looking badly. There is generally also a bad stand of corn, and garden vegetables are much later than usual.

The Prince Georgian for Sale. The Prince Georgian, with its good will, fixtures, etc., is offered for sale by its owner, Thomas J. Turner, Esq. Brother Turner has been in "harm's way" for twenty-nine years and relinquishes his charge on account of ill-health. We hope he may be satisfied with the change, but we doubt it. It is a saying of Grant, that it is hazardous to transplant an oak at forty and over, and we are disposed to think that a man who has pulled so long and faithfully at the oar as has our brother will scarcely now be satisfied with other employment but that longings for the old work will return upon him in his retirement, however pleasant the lines which his new life may be cast! This as it may, we wish our brother a speedy recovery to good health and prosperity for the Prince Georgian under whatever direction it may fall.

The Democratic Primaries. Our County Democratic Central Committee has made public call for the meeting of the primaries of the party on Saturday, the 20th instant. It has already been published in the Beacon a week and will continue to be printed until the meeting day designated. Thus no democrat will be entitled to complain after the delegates have been selected that due notice was not given. Those, also, who feel interest in the personal make-up of the delegation to the State Convention have ample time in which to work in behalf of their favorites. The result, of course, will not satisfy everybody, because such a thing is impossible where opposite preferences intrude, but the canvass can be made and the election conducted in such a manner as to meet the respect and confidence of all engaged, even of the minority. This is all that any fair-minded democrat has the right to ask. The majority vote, expressed in accordance with party law, is entitled to rule and no loyal democrat will gainsay the right. Let then the coming struggle for the honors of our party be peaceful and fairly conducted and the district delegates chosen be the honest expression of the popular wishes. We will then have harmonious County Convention and a delegation to Baltimore which will speak by authority because it will represent the predominant sentiment of the party.

IN MEMORIAM. Died, at the residence of his father near Mechanicsville, after a short and painful illness, on the 11th instant, JOSEPH, son of James P. and E. A. Millburn, in the 19th year of his age. The subject of this notice was a promising young man, kind and courteous to all, and had many warm friends. How sad to see a young man, just on the verge of manhood, with bright hopes, cut off so suddenly, but how comforting to family and friends to believe that he died to live! After being in close communion with his spiritual adviser, (retaining his senses to the very last), he called his parents, brothers and sisters to his bedside and bade them an affectionate adieu, assuring them that all was well. He then asked to be laid down and bowed meekly to the Divine decree and his spirit winged its flight to glory; that Arm ever ready to save. He died in the arms of his mother, a devoted Catholic church and his death was beautiful and ought to teach us how transitory are the things of earth.
