The Talk Is of Ribbons

WHEN the talk is of ribbons it is apt to be endless, for there is no end to the ways in which ribbons are used in all the belongings of women and children. Even bathing suits are not immune; some of them flaunt many long ends of bright colored ribbon in lieu of a belt sewn from a narrow girdle. They make picturesque playthings for the waves. Suits of light colored jersey cloth have sashes of black taffeta ribbed, finished with buoyant bows and short ends, or longer bows and ends are contrived in this ribbon when the sash is wrap with a vivid color.

Speaking of sashes leads right away into the midst of a glorious company of them made for wear with afternoon and evening gowns. Both wide and narrow ribbons command the attention of designers for making girdles and sashes, which they often elaborate with rosettes or ribbon flowers. On the use these ornaments unknowingly is the means, sometimes, most of other grades for the sash and and a decided attention in the ribbon arrangements. A ribbon sash, embellished with ribbon flowers is shown in the picture above; a white satin sash ribbon makes the sash and a narrow ribbon the flowers. This sash is tied in a distinct manner at the side. Wide sashes of moire ribbon tied in the back in short loops, with long ends seem destined to finish off many simple evening frocks for young girls.

The very lavish use of ribbons on bouquets for brides and bridesmaids cannot be overlooked in this brief chapter in the long story of ribbons. On brides' bouquets they have been wide and splendid and from the bouquets of the maids long loops of ribbon with ends trailing on the floor have given a new importance to ribbons in the bridal processions.

Narrow grosgrain and picot edged ribbons often provide sashes and girdles for georgette blouses which they match in color. These girdles are loosely adjusted and often tied at each side. They give very little definition of the waist line and are used on blouses with peplums. Sometimes they fall to extend all around the waist but are tacked on at each side on the back and front and tied at the sides. A pretty arrangement of ribbon for the evening coiffure is shown in the picture, but as our ornaments seem to have suffered the eclipse that has overtaken other fashionable adornments of an impractical character.

CLAIRVOYANTS BEING ROUTED BY THE GERMANS

(By Associated Press)

BERLIN, Aug. 13.—The business of making a living by playing upon the credulity and ignorance of the people, which has been developed into a skillful and lucrative profession in Germany during the past two years, has been practiced by thousands of men and women, the majority of whom are being investigated, in Berlin, recent investigations have disclosed.

The investigations grew out of the unusual number of "psychoses and revelations" which have been appearing in virtually all the sensational papers and shows the astrologers, hypnotists, aerologers and other specialists in personal prognostication were reaping by unusual rewards.

There are 300 persons in Berlin reported to the secretaries of interior proving the stars to a few marks per head and 1500 are reported to be here. Their charges are moderate, the poorer classes, lacks of money, cannot afford to pay sufficient fees for themselves and consequently they have turned to the fortune-tellers. It is stated to be one of the latest fads, cast off those for three.

All in one garment of the more professional fortune-tellers, and so narrow, for it has been ascertained that some of the "professional" sides in wide communication and many received messages from the "spirits" last week, or "visited" of Hungary, Austria, Hungary and Poland.

MEXICO STOPS FREE GASOLINE FOR EMPLOYES

(By Associated Press)

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 13.—The Mexican government, by refusing free gasoline, free repairs and storage service to its employes who use government automobiles, hopes to effect a saving of more than $1,000,000 annually. Several more hundreds of thousands will be saved to the government when army officers are forced to purchase their own skin uniforms and there will be a still greater saving when all federal employes drawing more than five pesos daily suffer a wage reduction of 10 per cent.

These economies which it is understood will be made effective shortly, are in line with a program of right tariff inaugurated recently by presidential decree. The first step was to reduce to all departments and to cut their operating forces to the minimum and after July 1 to operate on the budget system, calling for a careful federal audit.

BRAZIL DOESN'T THINK VERY WELL OF WORLD LEAGUE

(By Associated Press)

BUENOS AIRES, Aug. 13.—Epitacio Pessoa, former president of Brazil, told the Nacional this morning correspondent recently that the league of nations was an imperfect organization which does not and cannot live up to the expectations of those who created it. Its institution would remove international law and order that that institution could be turned into useful instrument for the peace of the world. It is willing to do as far as possible, contribute personally the nations.

The Brazilian executive said that it was necessary for this latter purpose that the league should be established upon a more democratic basis.
