AMUSEMENTS

EUGENE O'BRIEN AT THE BUTLER TODAY

A story of exceptional power has been purchased by Eugene O'Brien in United Lines which will be shown at the Butler theatre today.

In the play Mr. O'Brien plays the part of a young explorer whose romantic manhood in the absence of the lately "upper-crust" creature chose only attraction is his wealth, capital. Disgusted at returning Kenne Meranda hurries to New York, but again he finds his younger sweetheart has been married and that her life is made miserable by the man who is her husband. He decides to devote his life to her rescue.

Tremendously dramatic is the climax which brings about the conclusion unexpected as it is startling and logical. As it illustrates the old axiom that true hearts shall win in the end.

Accompanying Eugene O'Brien is Wallace Beery in Marcia Mansfield the famous beauty of screen and stage and some well-known adverse. Also the news pictorial a Mack Sennett comedy. Screen Snapshots.

Tomorrow: Bebe Daniels in "The Queen of Diamonds."

PIONEER OF DESERT VISITS BEN D. LUCE

When Charles Higgins motored into Tonopah yesterday from Rochester, two old desert pals met and renewed stories of earlier days. The first person to be encountered by the visitor was none other than Ben D. Luce, with whom Mr. Higgins is acquainted. Mr. Higgins passed through many of the boom camps of Nevada of late years, including Wonder, Rawhide and Rochester, while he was a frequent visitor to both Tonopah and Goldfield during the boom days. At present he is a resident of Reno where he holds a lucrative position. He is favorably impressed with the prospects of this district and predicts a general revival of mining in southern Nevada. Mr. Higgins is an old newspaper man, having years ago published papers both in Eureka and Nelson, Clark.

AN OPEN LETTER FROM A. B. WEST, VICE-PRESIDENT AND GENERAL MANAGER OF THE NEVADA-CALIFORNIA POWER COMPANY, ON THE LOS ANGELES POWER PROGRAM.

This is No. 2 of a series of communications from officials of The Nevada-California Power Company to the people of the territory it serves, frankly discussing utility problems and mutual interests.

There is now growing a state-wide revolt against the program of municipal power development as worked out by politicians and financiers of the City of Los Angeles to the manifest detriment and prosperity of the interior Counties.

This program, which manifestly seeks a monopoly of hydroelectric power under which Los Angeles could compel industries to locate there, is based on special legislation, both state and national, ostensibly procured as equally favorable to all municipalities, but in reality conferring advantages solely on Los Angeles, San Francisco and Oakland, since these three cities are the only ones having wealth and organization for utilizing them. As two of the cities prefer privately owned and state regulated public utilities to publicly owned, politically managed public utilities, Los Angeles is in effect the only beneficiary under these laws. Tax exemption, both as to properties and bonds for their development, together with immunity from state regulation of rates, service, operating costs and methods of accounting, are the means by which Los Angeles has hitherto been able to "put over" one of the most daring and ruthless schemes of self-aggrandizement ever conceived under a republican form of government.

Every taxpayer in the state, outside the City of Los Angeles, is being taxed, directly or indirectly, as a result of the immunities and exemptions enjoyed by that city. And every city and community other than Los Angeles is being held back in growth and prosperity by the ability of Los Angeles to draw itself, by fixing power rates on a subsidy basis, industries that would otherwise go to other communities offering greater natural as opposed to artificial advantages.

Self-preservation urges organized opposition to the Los Angeles program by every outside city and community in the state. The principle involved has nothing to do with the question of public or private ownership of public utilities, but concerns the exploitation, by a single incorporated city, of essential resources lying outside its own borders, to the exclusion and injury of all other cities and communities.

Very truly yours,

A. B. West

Vice-President and General Manager.
