WILSON, THAT'S ALL

[illegible] is setting under the provisions [illegible]

Whenever the commission is [illegible] of the opinion that shortage of [illegible] congestion of traffic, [illegible] upon emergency requiring immediate action, exists in any [illegible] section of the country, the commission shall have and is hereby [illegible] authority, either upon [illegible] or upon its own initiative, without complaint, at once, [illegible] without answer [illegible] hearing on the [illegible] of carriers and [illegible] without notice, hearing [illegible] making or filing of a [illegible] as the commission may determine to do this [illegible]

The months rides are an example of our summary and [illegible] the powers given. The same powers are given in the same language in the transportation act as an incident to the creation of through routes [illegible]. Still another section provides that the enumeration of the commission's powers shall not be exclusive of any powers necessarily given under the act. [illegible] gives the commission power to act through inspectors and agents, [illegible] to cooperate under a penalty. It is plain that the commission has initiative with all attendant action by railroads.

The mining of coal is not interstate commerce but coal which will be useless of their general [illegible] to be transported [illegible] may be taken as well and [illegible] used. More coal has been mined than now can be transported. There are plenty of cars but coal movement is congested. The point to remark is the inability of Secretary Hoover [illegible] with the commission. Ordinary consumers of coal may be surprised to find that they rank at the bottom of the list of priorities.

FEARFUL COST OF TWO STRIKES

There is food for very serious thought in the official government estimates of the losses to the strikers, to the employers and to the business of the country in the two nationwide strikes now going on.

More than half a billion dollars is the portentous aggregate of these losses, divided as follows:

Railway workers and coal miners, at an average of $7,500,000 a day, have lost $193,000,000 in wages. The coal operators have lost $240,000,000, estimating $1 a ton for bituminous coal that would have been mined during the 16 weeks of the strike.

The railroads are estimated to have lost the remaining $1,000,000,000 through curtailed transportation facilities and other expenses.

There are 600,000 miners and 500,000 railroad workers on strike, according to the estimate, an appalling total of 1,240,000 men idle at a time when every effort is being made to reduce involuntary unemployment to a minimum that the country may get back to normal industrial conditions.

Is there any sound or honest reason why the authority of the people as a whole, in whatever way it may be legally exercised, ought not to be exerted toward ending this state of affairs, which vastly outweigh any minor limit of population. Nearly a million and a quarter men are voluntarily idle and by being so are subjecting the country to an emergency constantly growing more critical.

For every man voluntarily idle in the exercise of a right which need not be disputed for the purpose of the present discussion, there is a man involuntarily idle and eager to earn a living.

Nothing has been proposed in excess of assuring the enjoyment of that right to the men who want to work and thereby averting consequences to the people as a whole which are day by day approaching the disastrous.

When a person gets his foot in it he usually puts his hand out for help.

It is easier to live up to one's reputation than to live down one's past.

GO SLOW, LEGION

To charge that General Sawyer is obstructing the work of the government in caring for disabled world war veterans is virtually to make the charge against President Harding. General Sawyer is a personal friend of the president, appointed by him for the express purpose of coordinating the various forces for soldier relief, and seeing that the hospital program went forward with intelligence and speed. The general and the president are on the most intimate terms and Mr. Harding keeps himself closely informed of every step in the hospitalization program. There is not a doubt that he has approved General Sawyer's policies and acts. The American legion should hesitate long before it permits its officials to charge the administration with willful delay of the relief program.

WARBURG'S ANGLE

At the meeting of the institute of politics held at Williamstown, Mass., Paul Warburg, expressing the confidence that France and Germany would settle their differences, as indeed are saying in such circumstances, it would seem incomprehensible that America could continue to insist in claiming payment for war loans from each of our allies as plainly could not repay us without disastrous consequences to themselves and to other nations including ourselves as well.

When did the payment of just debts result in disastrous consequences to any man or nation? The writer also reported the session of the institute remarked: "Mr. Warburg approached his subject from the angle of the international banker." That is the slant.
