We have had ample experience with every one of these situations. We saw Japan squeeze the last drop of blood from Pacific coast shippers during the war, when Japan had a monopoly of the Pacific trade. We saw great Britain writing up the rates for all the traffic would stand in peace years when American vessels were carrying 90 per cent of American trade, and Great Britain took toll left of us for transporting troops to Europe during the war. We saw farmers at the mercy of foreign competition after the war, and before emergency tariff law was passed by the republicans.

CUT EXPENSES TO THE VERY BONE

The various subcommittees of the house committee on appropriations have been steadily at work on the budget submitted by the budget bureau for money needed to run the government in the next fiscal year, beginning July 1, 1923. The budget bureau submits these estimates to the house committee on appropriations in confidence prior to the convening of the regular session of congress in order that the subcommittees may have all the time possible to go over the estimates and prepare for the public hearings. The budget bureau's estimates will be made public shortly after congress convenes in regular session.

However, this much is certain: This congress at its coming session will not appropriate money in excess of the visible revenue. In speaking of this matter Chairman Madden of the house appropriations committee, says: "We will cut everything to the bone. We are going to live within the income of the government. Not only that, but we are going to meet the estimated deficit of $670,000,000." The government faced an estimated deficit a year ago and by the congress cutting every appropriation to the minimum and the executive departments practising the most rigid economy the year was ended with a surplus of $300,000,000 rather than a deficit. It is believed the feat can be duplicated this year.

INDUSTRIAL CONDITIONS CONTINUE TO IMPROVE

The United States bureau of labor statistics shows that for the month of October 34 of the 13 leading basic industries in the United States showed an increase in the total amount of payrolls as compared with the previous month. The largest increases were in the following industries: railroad car building and repairing, flour milling, glass, hosiery and knit goods, iron and steel plates, pianos. The decreases were slight with the exception of seasonal industries like the manufacture of fertilizer, and the pottery industry which has been seriously affected by a general strike.

The data issued compares in October of this year with October of last year, showing that the iron and steel payrolls increased 65 per cent during the year, automobiles 41 per cent, leather goods 21 per cent, car building and repairing 19 per cent and several other basic industries a smaller per cent.

SARCASM

HE MET her at a dance, and when she found out that he held some important position in the training schools of the telephone company she started in to ask him why it was that some of the operators were so impertinent and stupid. "I should think you would insist on their being more attentive. I was kept waiting almost five minutes the other day on my own telephone, and when the girl did come with her peppy 'Number, please,' I just said: 'Well, if you have finished the chapter of that book you are so much interested in, I'll be ready.' I think she got the point," continued the society butterfly, "for she didn't say a thing, and I got the number in a second."

The young telephone man had heard through that same thing several times before and when the dance, which was an informal early affair, was over he asked the young girl's escort if they would let him take them in his motor to the nearest night exchange. He thought the young girl might be interested to see the operators trading their books and swapping over their candy.

"I can have even such a telephone exchange with rows and rows of girls right the working lot about as about 10 and really no girls could jerk why work, you know what they [illegible]

"Of course," commented the telephone man," some girl has an exhibitor please about 1000 times a day. We try to teach them to say it pleasantly, but sometimes it gets a little metallic after a girl has been on a busy board for several hours. It looks as if they must have swallowed a dictionary. They have put their politeness out of sight."

"I'm sorry I made that sarcastic speech," the society harridan said when we continued. "I should have been more marked."

"Don't let that worry you," said the girl. "The girls get used to it. It sometimes rattles the new girls, especially as they are not allowed to answer back, but just stick the plugs where."

That is the way usually with our sarcastic remarks that we think of as brilliant at the time we make them and worth repeating later on. But almost none of the sarcastic remarks really worth while.

YOUR HAND

How to Read Your Characteristics and Tendencies—the Capabilities or Weaknesses That Make for Success or Failure as Shown in Your Palm

THE HAND OF A LAWYER

TO JUDGE whether a person is fitted for success in the professions of the law, look whether the hand possesses the following characteristics:

The second phalanx of the hands (between the first or third joint and the rest of the hand) should be long, strong and well proportioned. This indicates good reasoning power, a logical mind, and strong intellect generally. Now, as the will power in a lawyer must be strong, if he is ever to attain any rank in the profession—look for the first phalanx of the thumb to most also be markedly strong and well developed.

Next proceed to an inspection of the line of the head. Necessary: The line to read: Eloquence and argument, the successful career in the law, and this is indicated by various signs, one of them being a decided line running between the second phalanx of the little finger and the third.

THE FROG WEDDING

[illegible]

Jennie Leaning on Her Father's Arm.

[illegible] Cricket, "We are so sick [illegible]

[illegible] and I [illegible] and have [illegible] will marry them?"

"[illegible] Mrs. Mouse, "[illegible] have access dress, and I will have to ask Grandma. But [illegible] the children [illegible] about it [illegible]

[illegible] Mr. Jar Fly began tuning his [illegible] soon the orchestra [illegible] the wedding march [illegible] yellow butterflies [illegible] the candle [illegible] and began to sprinkle [illegible] for the bride to walk on.

Then came pretty little Sally Frog, [illegible] on the arm of her father, Mr. B. Frog. He looked so puffed up with pride that the guests were afraid he would burst [illegible] while [illegible].

"Mrs. Darning Needle did know how to arrange Jenny's veil," whispered Mrs. Cricket to Mrs. Mouse. "I was afraid she would be so old fashioned that she might spoil Jenny's costume."

Darning Beetle, with his black book in hand, was waiting beneath the pine tree for the wedding party, and two handsome young Frogs held a big lily leaf canopy over them, so the rays of the sun peeping through the tree branches would not shine in their eyes.

"Speed, begin yet," suddenly buzzed a fly that was flying over the heads of every one and not behaving in a manner of a gentleman. "Here comes old Mrs. Snail puffing up the hill. She will pass the wedding if you don't wait."

No one wanted to have old Mrs. Snail miss anything, so the Ant boys pushed away in their wagon to bring her the rest of the way.

"This is the first time I ever knew that lazy Bee failing to do anything sensible," buzzed Miss Wasp, who never failed to use her sharp tongue. "His mother should teach him better manners."

The wedding gifts were numerous and of many kinds, though as Mrs. Wasp said, "Why anyone save dried frog's milk underfoot she could not imagine when Jenny had just come the water and, in fact, would rather be wet than not."

And then came that wonderful supper when every one ate all they wanted and a little more. "But we had to be somebody," said Miss Wasp, talking it over the next day with some of her friends, "for when that frog quartet began to sing you could not hear a word anyone said, so we just had to eat."

After supper there was a dance until the sun had gone out of sight over the hill and the bride's star peeped out of the skies and everybody voted it the most exciting day they had ever attended and said that Jenny Frog was the prettiest bride.

"They always say that about the bride," commented Miss Wasp as she flew away.

"Poor Miss Wasp," said gentle Mrs. Cricket, "I was afraid we did not treat her kindly enough or she would never make such stinging remarks."

Improvement in Reindeer Herds.

L. A. Pollard, in charge of the government's reindeer experiment station at Nome, Alaska, has just sent in a report to the United States Department of Agriculture that conditions among Alaskan reindeer herds are the best this year in the history of the industry. The fawn crop has been abundant, large and favorable weather has greatly reduced the number of losses. Herd owners who have adopted recommendations of the bureau's survey for improved handling of the herds report marked gain in size and condition of animals, and a reduction in the losses from those experienced under former methods. Reindeer in the Nome, Teller, Unalakleet and Nulato districts are being successfully herded, the reports show, much larger of late than amounts of the same region on the mainland.

Stealing—and Proud of It.

Representative John W. Langley from Kentucky, tells this one in Washington, says Everybody's:

A young attorney in Pikeville, who sought county honors, was on an electioneering tour in his district when he called at a house where the head of the family happened to be absent. He told the mistress who he was and that he was a candidate seeking votes at the coming election.

"And, it's you?" she exclaimed. "Why, of course my husband will vote for you, bein' it was you that got him arrested of stealin' that meat."

"Sir, on the charge of stealing the meat," the attorney corrected her.

"Charge nothin'!" said the woman. "Why, part of that meat is hangin' up in the house yet."
