ONE-LEGGED.

Mr. A. F. Hill, who had a leg as Amputation, gives the following list of questions which are asked him over and over again, until he says they are stereotyped on heart and brain.

"Did you lose your limb in battle?"

"What battle?"

"Did a common ball take it off?"

"Did it knock it clear off?"

"Did you feel much pain?"

"Who amputated it?"

"Did it hurt?"

"Could you wear a wooden leg?"

"How does a person feel with his leg off?"

All these questions and many others he feels that the most as a gentleman, answer politely, even if they are asked every day of his life. And yet this soldier had some pleasant experiences which must have compensated him somewhat for his affliction.

"In New York, at the door of my hotel, I met," he says, "a solitary bootblack, who greeted me with, 'Black en'?"

"All right," said I, as I placed my foot on his box. He had soon polished the boot sufficiently, but was still brushing away when I said,

"There, that will do. 'What do you charge?"

"The dirty, ragged little fellow looked up earnestly in my face, and said,

"O, I won't charge you anything. You've only got one."

"I compelled him to accept ten cents of course, assuring him that I had 'bushels of em."

"But the intention was no less kind, and the gentle sympathy, boyishly expressed as it was, touched me deeply."

A SIGN WHICH CONQUERED.

A Wayne county farmer who is much annoyed by snakes, came to Detroit a while ago and had a dozen signs of "Smallpox" painted to post up on his house and grounds. Although he had one on either side of his gate, they had not been up two hours when a rover passed between them and knocked on the door and asked for food.

"Don't you see those signs on the door?" demanded the farmer.

"Yes, but I can't read."

The next one said he was near sighted and thought the sign read "for sale."

The third had small-pox and was willing to nurse the family.

The fourth had been vaccinated and was reckless. The fifth had a remedy to sell, and the sixth after getting away with a cold bite, turned to his benefactor and said:

"If you want to beat the boys knock down those signs and put up one reading 'Help wanted.' It never fails to keep 'em jogging straight along."

The farmer followed the advice, and he hasn't had a call since.

FRIENDLY PEOPLE.

The influence of genuine friendliness is wonderful. We have met people who were so kind and cordial in manner, so responsible in look and greeting, and so swift in doing and saying courteous and graceful things, that they seemed to diffuse a sweet atmosphere around them. How beautiful they were, even though they had plain faces and rough hands. No face is hopelessly plain through which a friendly soul looks out upon the world.

Wild mint will keep rats and mice out of your house.

Flowers and shrubs should be excluded from a bed-chamber.

Lime sprinkled in fire places during summer months is healthful.

Vinegar will remove the disagreeable odor of kerosene from tinware.

Sometimes a little assistance at the right time will enable the system to throw off an attack which might otherwise result in serious sickness.

Ayer's Pills should always be kept at hand, and promptly taken for the relief of slight ailments, before they become formidable diseases.

"Yes, judge," said a prisoner, "I admit that the back of my trousers were tangled in the dog's teeth, and that I dragged the animal away, but if you call that stealing a dog no man on earth is safe from committing crime."

An Iowa judge refused a woman a divorce which she wanted because her husband kissed the pretty servant. He said she ought to be thankful that her husband had found a way to keep a servant girl.
