Foo Choos's Balsam of Shark's Oil
Positively Restores the Hearing, and is the Only Absolute Cure for Deafness known.
THIS OIL is extracted from a peculiar species of small, WHITE SHARK, found in the Yellow Sea, known as Carcharodon Rondeletii. Every Chinese fisherman knows it. Its virtues as a restorative of hearing were discovered by a Buddhist Priest about the year 1410. Its cures were so numerous and marked, [illegible] that the remedy was officially proclaimed over the entire Empire. Its use became [illegible] among the Chinese people. Sent, charges prepaid, to any address at $1 per bottle.
Only Imported by HAYLOCK & CO., SOLE AGENTS FOR AMERICA. 7 Dey Street, New York
Its virtues are unquestionable and its curative character absolute, as the writer can personally testify from experience and observation.
Among the many readers of the Review in one part and another of the country, it is probable that numbers are afflicted with deafness, and to such it may be said: "Write at once to Haylock & Co., 7 Dey Street, New York, enclosing $1, and you will receive by return a remedy that will enable you to hear like anybody else, and whose cures are effective and permanent. You will never regret doing so."—Editor of New York Scientific Review, Sept. 15, 1880.

REACH YOUR HAND TO ME.

JAMES M. MILES.

Reach your hand to me, my friend,
With its heartiest clasp—
Sometime there will come an end
To its present faithfulness—
Sometime I may ask in vain
For the touch of it again,
When between us land or sea
Holds it over back from me.

Sometime I may need it so,
Groping somewhere in the night,
It will seem to me as though
Just a touch, however light,
Would make all the darkness day,
And along some sunny way
Lead me through an April shower
Of my tears to this fair hour.

O, the present is too sweet
To go on forever thus!
Round the corner of the street
Wait for us?
Meeting, greeting—night and day!
Pacing each the selfsame way—
Still onward where the path must end—
Reach your hand to me, my friend!

FROM FOUR SPRINGS.

Crops etc.—Plea for a New Baptist Church.

PECAN SPRINGS, Hays Co., Tex. March 7th 1881.

MESSRS EDITORS.—Permit the writer to offer a few thoughts for your paper. Our hearts were made glad this morning before day, the lightning flashed and thunder roared, yes, and a gentle shower poured out. How was this done? The prophet answered in the olden time; "God, who commandeth the waters from the seas and poureth them out them out upon the earth." What for? That she may bring forth fruits, that flocks and herds may prosper. What for? All for the benefit of mankind. Ought not the inhabitants of all this earthly ball to be thankful. We have plenty of rain here for the present, the corn is up, the grass is growing, the cotton is coming, the jack brays, the horse neighs, the cows low, the calf bleats, and the colts play. Permit me to change the subject.

When in San Marcos the other day a question was asked in reference to the building of a Baptist Church. The answer came from most of our good brethren! We have bought and paid for a lot. But the outlook is gloomy for the present, some of our brethren say if it does not rain they will not give a dollar to build the church this year.

The writer remarked they lacked faith, the poet says take everything to God in prayer, remember, God loves the cheerful giver, and Solomon the wisest man says there is that scattereth and hath plenty abound, and there is that withholdeth more than is meet and it tendeth to poverty. Beware, brethren; we are only stewards for the Lord and he is only asking a little pittance of his rents as interest on the gifts bestowed upon us, and if we prove ourselves to be unworthy and refuse to pay our dues in proportion to the talents given, he may take away from us what we have and give it to another. Remember the widow's mite; remember the Lord feeds the beggar from the dunghill and makes him rich and maketh the rich man poor. If I had time I could point to the scriptures on this subject, but I forbear. Excuse me for being lengthy, and those who do not like it, let them put it into the hearts of the people to contribute. Sow thy seed in the morning, withhold not thy hand in the evening, thou knowest not whether this or that shall prosper or both be good alike. Yours truly,

Z. N. MORRELL.

Miscellaneous Items.

The new Suez canal will cost $1,000,000.

The glorious rain of April 22, was general throughout the state.

Gen. Joe Lane died at his home in Roseburg, Oregon, April 19, aged 79.

Fifteen hundred miles of railway are in course of construction in Italy.

An English scientist says that rain water tanks made of cast iron plates and whitewashed inside preserve the purity and sparkle of the water.

Congress appropriated $875,000 for artificial legs for mutilated soldiers this year, and $15,000 "to promote efficiency in the different branches of the army service."

At Elgin, Ill., April 21, the railroad track was four feet under water. Bridges there and at Dundee are badly damaged. Damage at Elgin will amount to $150,000 to $200,000.

April 22, fifteen armed men entered McLauren's house in Frio, Edwards county, Texas, and murdered McLauren, his wife and a young man named Lewis. No explanation offered for the crime.

J. E. McCrary, a gentleman residing near Waco, saved his entire peach crop, and other valuable crops, from damage by the late frost by simply building large fires in various places on his plantation, and in his orchard. His success was the result and shows what a little pluck and sagacity can do.

Superior Stock in Hays County.

The questions are often asked by immigrants from other states, "Have you fine stock in Texas?" "Are farmers improving the breeds of their horses and cattle?" "Is it profitable to raise stock in Texas, and do they stand the climate well?" The writer regrets that he cannot answer fully these interrogatories, not having had sufficient time for investigation, but it may be said that Hays county is doing as much as any portion of Texas to elevate the standard of stock raising. By politeness of Mr. H. W. McMeans, who is himself somewhat of a shaper for an amateur, and takes observation of stock items near San Marcos, the names of some stock raisers in this vicinity are given.

R. M. Cardwell, an excellent farmer, has thirty to forty head of Durham cows coming or descendant from regular thoroughbreds in Kentucky. Several that were brought with calves to Texas have done remarkably well and become fine cattle. Taken when young or born and raised in Texas, blooded stock are perfectly hardy. William Good, near Mountain City, has a selection of fine stock and is improving his other cattle as fast as time and means permit. Tom and De Sha Buxton have very valuable thorough breds.

A good Durham cow in this county is worth from $75 to $150. Investing a pile to pay for one cow, but when a Durham calf brings $30 to $40, the cost of the cow is quickly returned to the owner, and he has the mother cow still left, worth half-a-dozen of the common stock.

C. L. McGehee, south of town, has Durham stock. Most of the aforementioned persons have kept ordinary cattle and are convinced it pays to change the blood. Captain Tucker, the merchant, has a splendid cow and calf. Mrs. Captain Martin has recently bought a Durham cow. These little incidents show that even private citizens consider it a privilege to keep superior animals for family use. Lucas McGehee, living ten miles down the river, has a number of Jersey cattle, several of which he sold recently in San Antonio at remunerative prices. Mr. Wilhite, an enterprising farmer, also, Alex Smith, two miles above the source of the San Marcos river, has a No. 1 male Durham, which has gained great credit in this part of Texas. T. K. Hawkins, on the Gay place, five miles beyond Mountain City, has a noble horse named "Rebel," that has made the best race in Texas. He was raised near San Marcos. Judge Cook, a considerable property owner here, has Durham cows and one Ayrshire cow. His grand horse "Knight of Anderson," is from rare race stock and attracts universal attention. We hear that Judge Cook is much interested in improved stock and will sooner or later bring out satisfactory results.

Tom Martin, residing at Kyle, has a swift horse "Project," which, it is said, he backs against any horse in Texas, at a distance of 500 yards for $2,000.

Dr. Blakemore has two blooded mares, also, a fine colt. Mr. Fourquerean is cultivating Durham and Jersey cattle. Mr. Shire is raising graded stock, particularly one half and two-thirds graded horses.

It has been said formerly that Durham cattle do not hold their own equally with Texas stock, with the same care; this has been proven to be a mistake, as scores of raisers know, for they always come out ahead in spring—an inducement to farmers to better their stock. D. R. Cockrham in town, has a colt, two years old, that compares favorably with any "colt of his size."

But further enumeration or comment are unnecessary. Hays county is coming out boldly in advanced stock raising. They find it pays to raise it; such cattle when young acclimate easily, and with reasonable care are hardy and long lived.

It is hardly necessary to refer to the well known fact that the best Merino sheep are being successfully introduced extensively into Texas flocks, and their wool is equal to any in the markets. Sheep might be profitably and more widely raised, even with limited range and the receipts compare favorably with those of cotton raising, over which the majority of farmers are perhaps working too hard and exclusively, to the neglect of other interests.

As to improved swine there are any quantity of Berkshire and Poland China or Essex (mixed breed) of hogs, as large and healthy as can be found any where. From 400 to 500 pounds is frequent weight. It is thought that the project of stock raising will yet prove to equal any other venture in the farming line.

Superior kinds of poultry do remarkably well in this county, and command first class prices at San Marcos, Austin and San Antonio. It cannot be doubted that regular henneries or fowl farms established in this part of the country would be vastly agreeable and healthy for the multitude of egg eaters in western Texas. The owners' names of fancy fowls have not yet been learned, but when obtained the writer will be gratified again at a future time to refer to this interesting subject.

President Garfield is quoted by the Cleveland Leader as saying that for twenty years after her husband died, his mother scarcely ever had the comforts, much less the luxuries of life. "And now, added the President, "it has been my study to promote her happiness and comfort in every way possible in order to make up for the privations she suffered during my boyhood. She has the best room in my house and their is nothing she wants but what she always has. Whenever I go to Mentor she always accompanies me. When I return to Washington she always comes back with me. Whenever she wishes to go to New Hampshire to visit her relatives she goes, and I always go with her. In that manner I am trying to make up to her what she was deprived of during the days of her early poverty.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C. April 14, 1881.

Yesterday, their were rumors of an agreement between Senators by which business could be proceeded with, but little credence is given them. To all appearance, the Senate will sit until December, vote every day not to go into executive session, and listen to long speeches. Of all the speakers so far heard since the Hill and Mahone debate, last week ago, those of Senator Beck and Vest have attracted most attention. It clearly justifies all the Democrats are doing, and fully exposes the inconsistencies of the position taken by many Republican Senators. Of this speech a very large number will be printed for distribution.

It has all along seemed to me that the proposition of Secretary Windom to "call" the six and five per cent—some seven hundred millions or more of them—when he has not and knew he had, not and could not have money to redeem them, partook somewhat of the nature of Wall street stock gambling. The Secretary believes of course that the holders of these bonds will, rather than take the chances of having their particular bonds fall among the comparatively few which the Secretary can redeem, accept an interest much less than the face of the bonds promises. In fact the Secretary bets that not more of the bonds will be presented for redemption than he can redeem, which is about one fourth of them. The scheme is an improper one. It is doubtful too, no matter what the Attorney General may say, if the Secretary has any right to adopt a rate of interest not known in to any obligation of the government, more especially as both House and Senate have emphatically declared for a lower rate than he proposed to pay. However the Secretary's scheme, if successful, and if bond-holders do not hereafter come into court and collect what the face of their bonds called for, will save the government a great deal of money. The credit of the government was never so good before as at this moment. Numerous parties have already written to the Secretary that they would accept the three and one half per cent in lieu of six, and the Secretary is confident nearly all of them will do so.

In several of the departments there are convincing indications that a general reorganization is to take place. While only the Secretary of the interior Interior and Post-master-General has thus far made decided moves, others will undoubtedly follow them. In all the departments there has been little change of system in the last twenty years. In all of them much of the clerical material is of inferior quality. The president and his advisers will do the country a service by moving promptly.

The President is giving considerable attention, which is much appreciated by all Virginians here, to the coming celebration of the surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown, one hundred years ago. There were at one time fears through lack of funds, or a failure to excite general interest in the event the celebration would be only moderately successful. In both the important respects the presidential course has had a very beneficial effect.

Gatherings.

The Paris compress has pressed 22,000 bales this season.

The Mexican capitalists are waking up and taking great interest in railroads and are determined to push them ahead.

Operatives are leaving Bradford, England, for the United States, at the rate of fifty per week. Some of the Bradford firms contemplate soon landing factory machinery in the United States.

The Cuero Bulletin says that from thirty to forty girls, from eleven years old and upward, can find lucrative employment at the new cotton factory at that place.

The night express westward on the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul R. R., April 21 was thrown into the Meredosa river near Clinton, Iowa, by the giving way of the trestle work over the river. Two cars floated off down stream. One passenger coach lodged against the island about four rods away. Only the roofs of the two cars are now in sight. The engineer and fireman and six passengers were drowned and a number of others injured.

BUSINESS WORLD.

The idle and parasitic classes are not to so great an extent in this country as in other lands. Men and women have occupations, and business affairs and the business habits and qualifications relate to men only. Never, we need hardly say, [illegible] possessed expertness in business habits only compatible with [illegible] but is in a measure [illegible] the comfort and well [illegible] properly governed family and household is an object [illegible] as the management of a business office, requires method, economy, organization, industry, economy, discipline, tact, knowledge of [illegible] fitness for adapting means to ends.

All this is of the [illegible] business; and hence business habits are necessary to be cultivated by women who would succeed in the affairs of home—in other words, who would make home happy must by aid in the affairs of trade, of commerce, or manufacture.

Method, which is the soul of business, is equally important in the home. Work can only be got through by method. Middle life before [illegible] unknown. Based on [illegible] quality. The unpunctual [illegible] are considered dishonorable, as time and money are wasted. Time, [illegible] the reflection that we are not of sufficient importance to make her more prompt. To the business man, time is money; but to the business woman, method is money. Method, system and economy is [illegible] wealth and domestic prosperity. Hence it is important that our girls should receive a practical business training as well as our boys. Its benefits will be apparent every day throughout their lives.

Cut and Dried.

The agitation of the old proposition about disposing of the President has brought to light some facts concerning the descendants of our former rulers. A Washington correspondent says:

The grand daughters of Thos. Jefferson and her three unmarried daughters have been here living very plainly for several years. One of the daughters has a government clerkship at $900 per annum. President Monroe's grandson, who died here last year, had been living very plainly before his death. He left a widow and three daughters, one of whom has been given a good clerkship. A daughter of Andrew Jackson's adopted son, Andrew Jackson Donelson, who was born in the White House, and educated in Berlin while her father was minister there, has a position in the post office department, which is the principal income of the family. President Tyler's own daughter, who, while her father was living, presided for him at the White House, lives at the Louisa Home, the institution founded by Mr. Corcoran. The only direct descendant of a president who is independently wealthy is Mr. Henry Adams. He has spent a year here within the last four years and is now here with his wife. They have leased the residence adjoining Mr. Corcoran's.

Acts of Noted People in The Last Moment.

Augustus Cæsar chose to die in a standing position, and was careful in arranging his person, and dress for the occasion. Julius Cæsar when slain by the conspirators in the Capitol, concealed his face beneath the folds of his toga, so that his enemies might not see the death pang upon his countenance. Siward, Earl of Northumberland, when at the point of death, quitted his bed and put on his armor, saying, "It becomes not a man to die like a beast."

Maria Louisa of Austria a short time before she breathed her last had fallen into an apparent light slumber and one of the ladies in attendance remarked that Her Majesty appeared to be asleep.

"No," replied she, "I could sleep if I would indulge repose, but I am sensible of the near approach of death, and I would not allow myself to be surprised by him in sleep; I wish to meet him wide Awake."

Lord Nelson on receiving the fatal shot, said to Captain Hardy:

"They have done for me at last, Hardy; my backbone is shot through;" and had the presence of mind, while being carried below to, take out his handkerchief and cover his face and his scars, to be concealed from the eyes of the crew.

And last of all, the great Napoleon died in his field marshal's uniform and boots, which he had ordered to be put on a short time previous to his death.

Given up by Doctors.

"Is it possible that Mr. Godfrey is up and at work" and cured by so simple a remedy?"

"I assure you it is true that he is entirely cured and with nothing but Hop Bitters; and only the days ago his doctors gave him up and said he must die!"

"Well-a-day! That is remarkable! I will go this day and get some for my poor Cousin—I know how are good.
