EVERYTHING READY.

The Sangerfeast to Begin in New York Tonight.

New York, June 23.—At Madison Square Garden this morning President Richard Katzenmayer said that everything was in readiness for the great national Sangerfeast that opens tonight. Said he: "We have brought about this carnival of music and song in the belief that it would tend to encourage cultivation of singing societies, and we are now satisfied that it will eclipse every previous effort of the kind that has been attempted in this country. Representatives of all the principal singing societies in every state east of the Mississippi have registered here, and our effort to bring the chorus up to ten thousand male voices, the largest ever held in this country, has been successful." The interior of the immense garden has been magnificently decorated with growing flowers, plants, and American and German colors, and this morning presented an enchanting appearance. Seven thousand tickets have already been disposed of for the opening performance this evening, and which will be given in honor of the visiting singers. The festival will be continued for several days. The soloists include Mme. Materna, Mme. Tavary, Emma Juch, and Signor Campanari. Tomorrow afternoon will be devoted to prize singing, and representatives of every society east of the Mississippi will render Pache's "Waldeimsankeit."
