Not all poets are the same; some are worse than others.

These stray clouds that don't rain—we brand them what they are.

Washington puts faith in Obregon's oral agreement. Credulous is the word.

When Sir Roger Casement was put on trial, he hung his head. Probably rehearsing.

There's one thing about the Germans, every time we lick 'em to a frazzle, they begin all over again.

It seems pretty hard that all those people who were used to eating in an Akron restaurant should have been killed so easily.

They are still after Brandeis' goat, but their interests are plainly marked. The President's nominee sinned by not being born a plutocrat.

Passengers on the Cunarder, Andonia, claim to have seen a thrilling air battle over the English channel. We don't doubt that the battle occurred.

Attorney General Lemmey seeks re-election on the strength of his record. So far as we know, his record has been pretty much a case of compromise and cure blind tiger skins.

The explosive that killed 14 employes of the Dupont Powder Company, in the plant near Gibbstown, was trinitrotoluol, and we'll bet officers of the company don't mention it. We don't.

The harmony Democrats print their manifestos in a paper that has vigorously condemned President Wilson,—in a paper that has always stood for independent movements opposed to Democracy,—in a paper that is certainly half Republican.

The Allies have adjusted their differences with Greece, according to news that didn't originate in Athens. The way they did it was quite simple. They merely said, "Now, see here Greece, we have the whip hand and if you don't smile and practice politeness, we'll use the whip."

Waco has joined the association of lynch clubs. It has burned a negro at the stake and permitted his charred body to be dragged for miles, as a token of frenzy and riot. Most of the people of Waco have had nothing to do with an incident that degrades their community, but they must be held responsible. For the act of the few, the entire people are responsible, and their State, unfortunately, is gauged by the conduct of its leading cities.

Cold Figures.

Anti-prohibitionists who have contended that prohibition tends to make whisky drinkers out of men who had formerly been content with the less harmful beverages of beer and wine will find confirmation of their argument in some statistics of production given out by the internal revenue bureau for about ten months of the fiscal year that will end June 30. These show an increase of about 7,500,000 gallons in the production of whisky and a reduction of about 45,000,000 gallons in the production of beer. The comparison is between the production for about ten months of this fiscal year with the same months of the fiscal year 1915, but since the production of whisky during that fiscal year was greater than ever before, it follows that the production of this fiscal year promises a new record. Meanwhile the area of prohibition has been expanding, the number of people under prohibitory laws increasing. Unless it can be shown that in wet communities the per capita consumption of whisky has increased and that of beer decreased, it will not be easy to escape the conclusion the anti's have insisted on, namely, that prohibition converts many beer drinkers into whisky drinkers.—Dallas News.

Champion of Peace.

Henry Clews, the New York banker, is a champion of what he calls the new internationalism. He is of the opinion that the present war proves conclusively that we are a long, long way from permanent peace, and that many of the problems involved seem almost impossible of solution by human minds.

Banker Clews has a theory that the only true way to prevent man from fighting is to inculcate a love of justice, freedom and brotherhood.

The Nazarene pointed the way. He gave to the world the gospel of justice and love, and He was crucified by representatives of the privileged classes of the era in which He lived.

If His followers really believed the gospel He taught the European war would never have happened. They profess to be His followers, but they do not practice His teachings.

Permanent peace will come with the dawn of the millennium.

Man is a progressive brute at best. He will fight for home, he loves, he will fight against those who do both.

He will fight for the love of fighting; he will fight for women; he will fight for territory; he will fight for the duties of citizenship; he will fight for soldiers and civic honors and he will fight whenever a brother man gets in his way. Today prevailed the doctrine of nonresistance as the best way to overcome evil, but from the day of the cave man to the polished product of this golden age it hasn't been customary to turn the other cheek.

There is permanent peace in this world of ours. Those who are sleeping in the wheelless palace of rest enjoy it. Those who are in the land of the living continue in the belief it can be made to exist in some possibility.—Fort Worth Record.

Senator Culberson.

The confirming press comes that Senator Culberson's health is so much improved that he is not only able to devote himself to his duties at Washington, but is turning to solve the great and intricate problems that now confront us as a nation, but that he will be able if desired to spend himself in rallying to Democratic those forces this session in the people of this state have been entirely dedicated and completely satisfactory, for he is one of the most able and influential members of the American congress. Quiet and unpretentious, courteous and winning in his ways, and attentive his duties, his withdrawal from public life at this time would be a distinct loss to this state and the entire country. The news Friday in Hamilton county will read the letters printed on the first page of the Herald with a feeling of joy and will rally to his support in the coming senatorial contest as they have always done in the years past. In choosing some one to represent them in the senate of the United States where the highest order of statesmanship is needed to preserve and carry out the principles of republican government, the voters have found that Charles A. Culberson is fully equipped for the work and he has often been selected in the exchange and never found wanting.—Hamilton Herald.

ECHOES OF SCIENCE

A California automobilist is the owner of a high powered grease gun by which it is possible to fill the bearing of differential housing of a car with lubricant in a minute.

Of French invention is a boat propelled with the blades extending far forward and back of the hub and so shaped that the water is not churned and no vacuum is caused around the hub.

As a new sewer cleaning machine is hauled through a pipe by a rope attached to a windlass fire hose connected to the rear end operates a water motor that drives spiral cutting blades.

To protect a Swiss railroad from frequent avalanches numerous snow retaining walls have been built on a mountain side at points from which the slides start to hold the snow until it melts.

To insure the owner of a private driving cup keys in a barber shop that he is the only user there has been invented a paper cap to cover it, which cannot be removed without breaking a seal.

The world's greatest wireless station has been built in Italy, powerful enough to communicate with North and South America when similar stations are erected on this side of the Atlantic.

To facilitate rapid writing there has been invented a metal device to be clamped to the little finger and with a shelf on which to rest the next finger and slide over a surface written upon.

In the last few years Moscow has been increasing in population more rapidly than at any time in a century and, if the present rate be continued, it will have more than 2,000,000 residents in 1920.

PUBLICITY

Please note this little fact, Flora: It is the man that sits the egg, the rooster does the crowing. Hope did only wings and claws, and points with pride at what and thinks some fits around your dwelling. And every time I read this among and praises around the universe, it makes Lucretia Borgia. I think of Cleopatra I have known, who think that they and they alone, deserve the praise and glory. When would ignore the patient wives who devoted their entire lives when they were badly wanted, who look after the trouble of the day, and expect to get the credit of lots of which the hubs are swagging. There's many a female hero, dame who would have failed to win the prize but for some little woman, who staying humbly in the side, will make her old man for the stuff. With patience superhuman. And, having conquered from out the cold, hard world, her old man shrieks, how powerful she is! Yes, with the fearless glory.

Is the Elephant Doomed?

When you are at the office take memorandum thereof that Mad Anthony Wilson is still at the helm. If in the meantime the weekly prognostication of some one who knows the ways of the American voter should come true, Mad Anthony will be back at the helm of the ship of state in March, 1917. In the meantime, in spite of the great odds that have assailed that country have been killed of late on sight. They have been sadly roughly in the list of pets for great, in other parts of Africa there are still great numbers of them but they are constantly being driven back as the white man advances from the frontiers, and at last will be exterminated or domesticated. The African continent has the chance of attention from the nations, because the latter is used for many domestic and industrial purposes, while in Africa there has been no degradation to use the elephant as a beast of burden, and indeed there is less use for him. Africa is distinctly the elephant's country, the elephant will finally survive the extension of civilization throughout the continent.—New York Press.

One Crop or Several?

The collapse of cotton prices that followed the declaration of war threatened a very serious situation for the cotton states and inspired a great and agitation to reduce cotton acreage. Last year the acreage was reduced about 15 per cent, and though the way cut off important normal markets it developed others. It has been calculated that three million bales were consumed in the manufacture of explosives in the United States and Europe during 1915. This is as much as all the cotton mills of the North consume in making cloth in a normal year. So the price of cotton has kinda been maintained around 12c a pound, or about what it was when war broke out.

But a new crop year is at hand, and the question arises whether last year's war scare had any permanent effect in way of inducing greater diversification of crops in the cotton states. Speaking at Birmingham recently, and arguing against a one-crop system, Mr. Harding of the Federal Reserve Board pointed out that, war or no war, the man who devoted his entire crop was always subject to a period when what overproduced, whether it of cotton or something else. In whose case the price was pretty low, but comparatively few, while a large class was a little under, seemed to have good prices.

From the greatest point of view the situation is those farmers who produce enough to feed themselves and their stock, and have some surplus left for market, are in a position to withstand the vicissitudes of weather, insects and other calamities, and to form a large part of the country.

There is no doubt that the South, the whole division has made great strides. The war has shown that in the raising of cotton will pay, if diversification and use the big stick.—Galveston Daily News.

German-American "Rights"

The session which the German American Alliance of New Jersey stands in the matter of the act of doing air of the German Alliance all over the country, and in the sentiments expressed, if a representative one of all the German-American societies, which it is not, the attitude is a proper one. The Alliance is known to be opposed to the enforcement of the laws of the United States, and to the same time the Alliance is in the order of the German-American societies, in view of the manner in which it has conducted itself in the past, and its attitude at all times, it is not to be expected that it will be the rights and the laws of the United States, and will whenever it is convenient to do so, and to be opposed to the laws of any other country.

This fear of an anti-German sentiment is a figment of the alleged German societies and their political purposes. It is not the intention of the United States to interfere with the German societies in the United States, but it is not to be expected that the illegal efforts of a few German citizens in this country will be tolerated. The German citizens in this country are entitled to the same rights and privileges as other citizens, but to use of the German societies as a means of propaganda, and to use the German societies for political purposes, is not to be tolerated.

Save the Gears

One of the troubles of operating heavy machinery is the rapidity with which gears wear out.

We have developed a lubricant which will protect the heaviest gears under the greatest pressure.

We call it

TEXACO
CRATER COMPOUND

It is a rich, heavy lubricant which cannot be squeezed from between the teeth. The pinions run on a film—cutting and wear are stopped.

"Crater" resists weather, water, heat, and dust. It is particularly adapted for gears on oil mills, cotton compressors—wherever large gears need protection.
