Still, those man-eating sharks might be less chivalrous. Suppose they were girl-eating!

Another victory for Democracy. Cyclone Davis says he will never run for office again in Texas.

Foster, "An early fall may be expected." Yes; here in Nueces county the independents are already skating on thin ice.

Almost any pretty girl with six bits' worth of bathing suit can get in the swim down here. Corpus Christi is democratic.

Defective teeth are said to be the cause of much illness. We guess it's true. Roosevelt's teeth are as perfect as his health.

Negro soldiers caused trouble in San Antonio. Negro soldiers are exceptional fighters, but they sometimes pick the wrong target.

Senator Culberson has nothing to fear in the run-off with Oscar Branch Colquitt. He will draw from the best vote on both sides.

Denmark is selling us her West Indian islands for $25,000,000. We don't mind the price; we do mind buying property next door to Pelee.

General Illes has found health conditions excellent at Laredo. Good! Now Laredo can settle down and make the boys feel at home.

With General Trevino in charge of the north end of Carranza's army, we see where something is likely to get a bigger dip in diplomacy.

They tell us that weeds are taking the fields and that cotton is about knee-high, and we bless them and exclaim, "Where weeds will grow, a hoe will chop; go swat your patch and make a crop."

Bob Henry says that 60,000 votes he had a right to expect were "switched" on the night of July 21. Sad admission! Is it possible the distinguished candidate depended on ballots subject to manipulation?

President Wilson is thinking of sending a warship along with those American vessels likely to be searched by the British. If he wants to carry out his design most effectively, he'll borrow a few German submarines.

Washington Republicans claim that Colquitt's strength is a reflection on the administration of President Wilson. We'd hardly call it that. On the contrary, it proved that a large number of persons wanted to help him pay for his chicken salad.

The English Boycott.

The dispatches report a nation-wide movement begun in New York to arouse business men of the United States to the significance of the British government's action in blacklisting certain American firms suspected of having financial or political relations with Germany. Already, the state department has moved in the matter, so that the needs of such public agitation as is intended by this government would seem to be at least doubtful. It is entirely possible, not to say probable, that those giving the initiative to this movement are prompted largely by the belief that Great Britan has given them another and unexpected opportunity to alienate some of the sympathy felt in this country for the allied cause. If so, they are perhaps well advised. Few things would be more likely to stir up a feeling of resentment in this country than a cry of "boycott" against American commerce. There seems to be no doubt that it is a valid principle Great Britain has invoked to justify the blacklisting of certain firms, but it is hardly possible to practice the principle without bringing under the imposition firms which are falsely suspected. When this occurs Great Britain is in the attitude of injuring American citizens against whom no graver charge can be proved than that they bear German names.—Galveston News.

Iron Horses.

Hereafter it will be "all in the merry" for hundreds of farm horses and mules in Texas. Missouri and other states where farm tractor demonstrations have been held. It is reported from Dallas that not including the last day of the demonstration, near that city over $400,000 worth of tractors had been sold. That will give many a team of farm mules and horses their liberty so far as "breaking" land and heavy loads are concerned. The tractor, like the auto, has come to stay.—Denison Herald.

Make It Four Years

The Herald is persuaded that the governor in Texas should be elected for a term of four years and that what seems to be a useless campaign every two years. It has been demonstrated time and again that it is impossible to defeat a governor for a second term, and it seems unfair to require the expenditure of money and a waste of time in conducting a campaign. If a governor is elected for four years the people will be saved much worry and confusion, and the man in office will be given better opportunity, if he wants it, to attend to the duties of the office.—Palestine Herald.

WHY ENDURE SUMMER COLDS?

It isn't necessary to have a stuffed head running nose. To forget your head off as it were. All you need do is to use Dr. Bell's Pine Tar Honey. The soothing and healing balsams open the clogged air passages, and in a short time you get relief and start on the road to recovery. Your nose stops running, you cough less and the tickling you get in your throat, the result of a tickling, are no longer. Keep what is left of a cough and cold germs.

Few and Far Between.

In the lobby of a hotel they were talking about equivocal speeches when Henry Sydnor Harrison, the author, was reminded of a little incident along that line.

At a dinner party somebody broached the subject of small talk. A party named Brown broke in with a dissertation on his own excellence.

"Of course I am not criticizing anybody," he said, "but personally I never drink, swear, or indulge in habits of that kind."

"Huh, Mr. Brown," interjected one of the company, "you certainly smoke, don't you?"

"Yes I like a cigar after a good meal," admitted Brown. "But I suppose that on an average I don't smoke more than one a month."—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

How He Felt.

The conditions in the trenches were dreary in the extreme after the drenching and long-continued rainfall, but the irrepressible spirits of the "pals" were not yet entirely quenched when the order came to leave the trenches.

"Hurry up out of this, my gallant soldiers," was the cheery call of the sergeant to his waist-deep and rain-sodden men.

"Hold, ra!" came the derisive answer from one of them. "I'm not a soldier. I'm a blooming bullrush.—Tit-Bits.

OTHER VIEWS

Fewer and Better Laws.

The 1916-17 legislature may be fewer statutes to enact. Economists rather to think. For one thing, not fewer of them have been in session whereas the previous four years were active. Moreover even in the sitting legislature there has been considerable reduced in part in the 1915 abroad. While that was no indication no such happy days will come. But reform promises and improvements are the watchword today. Laws proposed and attempted are to be scanned through. Commitments already made are to be kept up to date of improvements and fundamental changes. "Second public policy are to work only for showing up.

Now and to those failures to the other about another one, namely, that policy in the way, and with the benefit of it, public opinion that more economy should be the point where it and begin to see the absurdity of such large and costly sessions in Lawmaking as the Texas legislature whose sessions are another one. Why the should be in it is a question the point has shown strongly, and just because the questions had shown a decline it is not of serious that good Democrats the legislature should not have better time next time if not sooner. Much has been made recently in comparing the proposed change with existing laws to take expenses at Austin, and to formulate the new social control in accordance with facts.

In some of the details the people do not go to extremes. Lower salaries, for the whole, look and seem unfavorable to those to work, as few as we now need it at. Economy on some lot, for the salaries of state have supplied to any appearance a the national of state was not of women, and a doubtful was been called for better economy. The plan is to this Gold this year has been federal, and a possible not follow this legislation. Local option, state prohibition and stricter enforcement of old laws have been features of the Point of the Legislature. Here, as for some years past, the South wends.

In conclusion there is a steady trend away from free and use of force, and a tendency to a more frank and fraternal policy, one that will save better for the physical and intellectual welfare of all. Members elected this, partly because it is really impossible for conscientious ethical standards and public sentiment to be effective there, the present primary and safeguards to the which is necessarily a crude substitute. We wants to accomplish.

Quite naturally, but and always probably, the demand for "economy now" has had its effect on lawmakers, and members as quickly as in each economy were as in New York state which has gone far beyond the bounds set by educators, who were consulted but not heeded, in the direction of militaryizing universal education of young people in the fundamentals of military living, accomplishments and ideals.—Christian Science Monitor.

Sieges by Land.

At a time when attention in this country is directed with renewed intensity upon the war area with a view to an understanding as to the outcome of the conflict and its possible duration, the news which was given out in Paris yesterday from Salonica is of the utmost importance.

The statement is made that preparations is in progress along the entire front. This means that recommendations has been followed by an intense use of the artillery and that a general advance similar to that which has been in progress on the Eastern or Prussian front for more than a month on the Western or French front for two weeks, and which was recently renewed on the Italo-Austrian front is about to be essayed.

Thus the circle is being completed and the closing in process which is so obviously necessary to the consummation of the entente allies in its progress. If this advance on the part of the interior nations is continuous, the obvious result will be that everywhere, in spite of stubborn resistance and dogged fighting, the German armies will be forced to retire toward the Rhine in France and Belgium. The Austrian and German armies will contine their withdrawal from Russian territory. The Austrians will give way before the Italians, and the Bulgarians, supported as they doubtless are by the Germans and the Turks, will retreat their steps through the Balkans and steadily be on the defensive until they are driven out of the Austrian territory, and that the French, British and Serbian forces in time will form a junction with the Russians who have fought their way through Bessarabia.

Germany and Austria now is a state of siege. Occasionally by such as one, now are actually in a state of siege in fact.—New York Herald.

The Worm That Turned.

Just by looking at him at a bit, in the witness chair in the Judge's room, to mention one could tell that he was harmless, but a close observer would also have remarked that there lurked in his narrowed and wrinkled eyes a latent fire indicative of a past when he did had been an even a life-long and distant. He seemed to be that of one having been crushed by the minister while under his control.

Counsel for the plaintiff in the case proceeded to ask him the usual questions:

"Please state your name to the jury."

"John Jones."

"Your age?"

"Fifty-eight."

"Now, it was that John Jones, who is to be shaft, as a result of quarrelsome, came into his own and he proceeded to a roller that made so much unpleasantness."

"Yes, sirry."

In the time of the trouble a number of the records placed at the disposal of the court were in a very poor state of preservation, and a good deal of time was lost in deciphering them. The following extract from the proceedings was taken from the Corpus Christi Caller-Herald.

"There is a compliance that prompts, before any decision of a fellow man. The Innocent. It is a Bluebird photoplay of Henry Sydney Harrison's novel of the same name. Miss Sweet is the lead in the production, and the other parts of importance are well taken by Herbert Rawlinson, Robert Van Hoven, Lincoln Plumer, Robert Cummings, Walter Hoover, E. Carpenter, Harold Hamilton and other members of the Lois Weber company.

In "The Innocent" Blanche Sweet will take the role of the daughter of a rural Scottish household and she will have an opportunity to display many dramatic qualities.

The photoplay was produced under the direction of William C. Dowlan who has been so successful in the direction of Miss Sweet's recent productions. "The Unpardonable" and "The Innocent" "Black Fear."
