A MISSIONARY ABROAD.

Elihu Root has delivered an address in Petrograd that burns with the true purpose of democracy; and it will have a tendency to overcome the prejudice created against this country by Russian socialists, themselves nursed on pro-German intrigue. In reply, M. Tereschenko, Minister of Foreign Affairs, declared, "We shall fight together to secure liberty, freedom and happiness for all the world. I am happy to say that I do not see any moral idea or factor between Ameria and Russia to divide us. We two peoples—Russia fighting tyranny and America standing as the old democracy—hand in hand, will show the way to happiness to all nations, great and small." It is agreed, then, between the existing governments, that war is necessary, that autocracy must be crushed. It remains for both governments, working in the spirit of unison and faith, to oppose the differences of opinion within Russia and to direct its might toward the successful elimination of the war. That the task is huge, no man doubts; that it is possible of accomplishment, a determined group of idealists believes. It is something in the world's favor that America's spokesman is Elihu Root.

THE NET RESULT.

The meeting of the former students and friends of the University of Texas in Dallas amounted to nothing more than a tremendous registration of sentiment against the methods employed by Governor Ferguson. No plan for financing the University was formulated; no drastic remedy met with favor, although a minority contended vigorously for impeachment. The language of the speakers was a little too bitter in proportion to their achievements; but the announcement made by Will C. Hogg, son of the late governor, foreshadows disaster for Mr. Ferguson and his political aspirations. Mr. Hogg declared that he would deliver a series of addresses throughout the State; that he would speak to the point without fear of libel. This decision is at once a warning and a portent. It means that a new voice has risen among the people, imbued with courage, energy and the will to serve.

Well Done! But Keep on Doing

The extraordinary success of the Liberty Loan is really of as great significance as campaign talk pictured it. There probably never was any real danger that it would fail, provided the people could be aroused to the situation. It was for this reason that failure would have been a calamity, for it would have indicated that Americans were not behind their government in the whole-hearted fashion necessary to the successful conduct of the war. The manner in which they arose to the occasion once they began to realize the importance of the loan indicated that the apparent apathy did not mean indifference to the war.

In Texas we should take seriously to heart our experience in connection with the campaign. It is something at least, that we did not fail. It is something that we over-subscribed our quota. But the percentage in Fort Worth did not compare favorably with the over-subscription in many other sections of Texas. We do not say this in any disparaging mood, nor do we think it detracts from the glory of having done our share in this crisis. We say it only as a sobering reminder that our people have not yet waked up as fully to a realization of the whole meaning of the war as those of some other sections. But we are waking up, and in answer to the questions we raised during the campaign we may say now that there is nothing the matter with either Fort Worth or Texas in connection with this matter—nothing, that is, except that we have still to become a little wider awake.

And we will become so. In fact, we have just started. Now that we have accomplished one big task for the nation we are ready to tackle another. Next week we are going to over-subscribe our quota of the American Red Cross fund. Under ordinary circumstances it would seem an almost impossible task to raise $100,000 in Fort Worth in a week. But we shall not be operating under ordinary circumstances. There is only one danger and that is that after having raised more than $3,000,000 in thirty days we are likely to regard the raising of $100,000 in a week as comparatively a small matter. However, it is not a small matter and it is not going to be without difficulty. It will succeed only if everyone does his or her full share. It is going to take work, hard work on the part of those who have enlisted on the campaign committees, and it is going to require hearty cooperation on the part of everybody.

There is an opportunity offered by this Red Cross campaign. As we have said, Fort Worth's showing was not so good as some other sections of Texas in the Liberty Loan campaign, and the showing of Texas could have been better. But that was because we were just a little slow about waking up. Now we have shown that we are waking up. Let's show by the end of the week that we are just as wide awake as any other section of the country. The Red Cross campaign is a nation-wide affair. Let's make a contribution to our better showing in it than we did in the Liberty Loan fight. Let's oversubscribe the Red Cross fund.—Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

The Exposure

A prominent Dallas merchant recently generously offered the government his services free of charge during the war in any capacity where he would be useful. When the offer leaked out that he had made this generous proposition to Uncle Sam, the matter been tried to hide the light under a bushel. A Times Herald reporter was threatened with bodily harm if he published the name of this patriot and the managing editor was told that he would be fired and fostered if the identity of the disclosure leaked out.

What shall we do about it? Would it be a good policy to expose this patriot, give him a place in the sun and try to draw out his modesty? Would it be worth a lash on motives for such a donation of brothers? The editor is willing to risk it.

Tyrants never shine this editor but perhaps you could buy him off with a 20x30 (in cents) one or a pair of high lace white tan shoes.—Ft. W. Dallas Times Herald.

OTHER VIEWS

H. G. Wells' Idea of God
(Kansas City Star.)

H. G. Wells's latest book, "God the Invisible King," is further evidence of the way in which the war has brought religion home to people who had large it ignored its claim before. The beginning of the process was evident in "Mr. Britling Sees it Through," when Mr. Britling, overwhelmed by the loss of his son on the battle field, is finally brought to exclaim: "Religion is the first thing and last thing and until a man has 'found God and been found by God,' he begins at no beginning, he works to no end."

Without doubt the experience of the last three years has profoundly affected Mr. Wells himself. It has made religion the vital problem. He reflects it in the books that followed "Mr. Britling." "Italy, France and Britain at War," he devotes an entire book to it. In "God the Invisible King," and apparently he is approaching the same problem from another angle in his new novel, which has just begun publication in Collier's, "The Soul of a Bishop."

"God the Invisible King," theologically unorthodox as it is, is a highly interesting religious document. Mr. Wells doesn't attempt to argue the subject. There is no elaborate proof of the existence for granted. He has experienced the power and help of God in his own life. No other proof is necessary. Like the Hebrew prophet he proclaims, "Thus saith the Lord," because he knows the Lord is speaking through him.

Here was the problem, it may be inferred, that confronted him. He saw the war a terrible and unnecessary thing. The world he expected to be the world the most desirable because the whole purpose of evil. He could not account for the evil and disorder which he so appreciated and strong that a the same time he independently had had a profound personal experience which made him believe that God was at least working with him against evil. What was the solution? Definitely that the chief of his experience and his God Creator were one the same being.

So he is faced by the conclusion that the Creator is not omnipotent and omniscient. Neither being. If the consciousness is coming of creation he can disclaim any attributes of power and wisdom. He feels that God is the spirit that the human race is to become in the unknown but is in process of becoming. He feels that God is Love and the world is Love and that is Light in the world.

This outline of course is not exactly with him. He differs from other in Prof. Royce's Lectures. This is more itself really much in the beginning of Genesis. The creation conformed with the whole problem remains over. Nevertheless, some concepts have to be made. The conflict of reports of origin and nature of Jehovah in Genesis is illuminating.

It is a tremendous problem and the difficulties that Mr. Wells sees in the solution show the greatest care and very great. And perhaps he is hardly fair when he says that he is at bottom a moral authority. Public consciousness that we are at war with Germany is not in the United States. The United States is fighting that Mr. Wells's United States is fighting that of his argument.

ITALIAN WOMEN PATRIOTS

ROME, June 15.—The wife and daughters of General Cadorna, chief of the general staff of the Italian army, have been very active during the war in the relief of the wives and children of poor or wounded soldiers. Miss Carla Cadorna has written a story of her war experiences, describing the courage of women in wartime.

Use "Gets-It," Lift Corn Right Off

Shrivels, Loosens—and It's Gone!

"Just drop a little on a corn—that's new, isn't it? Well, it's the quickest corn stuff I ever saw. It has been tested with the wonderful Hoosier corn test. Stops the ache almost instantly and finally lifts the corn off with fingers. Simple and easy as A-B-C. You ladies who have wrapped your feet in bandages to look like boodles, who have cried salves that turned your toes raw and sore, and used plasters that would shift from their place and never "get" the corn, and who have dug and picked at your corns with knives and scissors and perhaps made them bleed—just wait 'Gets-It' and painless ways and try 'Gets-It' just once. You put 1 or 2 drops on, and it dries at once. There's nothing to stick. You can put your shoe and stocking right on again. The pain is all gone. Then the corn dies a painless, shriveling death. It loosens from your toe, and off it comes. 'Gets-It' is the slickest selling corn remedy in the world today. There's none other as good.

"Gets-It" is sold by druggists everywhere, 25c a bottle, or sent on receipt of price by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago, Ill.

Sold in Corpus Christi and recommended as the world's best corn remedy by R. H. Hingham and Hart Drug Store.

Mrs. Gachardt Chaperons Party to North Beach for Securing Surf Bathing Scenes

As a result of an appeal to the Corpus Christi Commercial Association to the fair sex of the city Mrs. William Gachardt organized and chaperoned a party of twenty young ladies to pose for photographs, which will be used in exploiting the delights of local surf bathing.

The party met at North Beach yesterday evening at 5 o'clock and under direction of Photographer Cook and Secretary Quirke of the Commercial Association posed for a number of photographs. It is the opinion of Mr. Cross that the attempts were successful and will develop nicely.

MORE MEN THAN WOMEN HAVE APPENDICITIS

Surgeons state men are slightly more subject to appendicitis than women. Corpus Christi people should know that a few doses of simple buckthorn bark, glycerine, etc., as mixed in Adler-i-ka, often relieve or prevent appendicitis. This mixture removes such surprising foul matter that ONE SPOONFUL relieves almost ANY CASE constipation, sour stomach or gas. The INSTANT gas action of Adler-i-ka is surprising. J. E.
