

DYSPEPSIA.—The late Dr. Leared, in his recently published essay on "The Causes and Treatment of Indigestion," lays down as a fundamental principle that the amount of food which each man is capable of digesting with ease always has a limit which bears relation to his age, constitution, health and habits, and that indigestion is a consequence of exceeding this limit.

Different kinds of food are also differently adapted to different constitutions. Dyspepsia may be brought on by eating irregularly, by allowing too long an interval between meals, and by eating too often. Frequently the meals are not gaged as to their relative amount, or distributed with a due regard to health. Thus, when we go out after taking a light breakfast and keep at our work, with a still lighter lunch only during the interval, till evening, we are apt, with the solid meal which tempts us to indulgence, to put the stomach to a harder test than it can bear.

When a light breakfast is eaten, a solid meal is requisite in the middle of the day. When the organs are left too long unemployed they secrete an excess of mucus which greatly interferes with digestion.

One meal has a direct influence on the next, and a poor breakfast leaves the stomach over-active for dinner. The point to bear in mind is, that not to eat a sufficiency at one meal makes you too hungry for the next; and that, when you are too hungry, you are apt to overload the stomach, and give the gastric juices more to do than they have the power to perform. Persons who eat one meal too quickly on another must likewise expect the stomach finally to give notice that it is impeded upon.

Other procreatives of dyspepsia are imperfect mastication, smoking and snuff-taking, which occasions a waste of saliva—although some people find that smoking assists digestion, if done in moderation—sitting in positions that cramp the stomach, and the pressure that is inflicted on the stomach by the tools of some trades, as of curriers, shoemakers and weavers. The general symptoms of dyspepsia are well known. Some that deserve special remark are fancies that the limbs or hands are distorted, mental depression, extreme nervousness, hypochondria and other affections of the mind. The cure is to be sought in avoiding the food and habits by which dyspepsia are promoted, and using and practicing those which are found to agree best with the system of the subject. Regularity in the hours of meals cannot be too strongly insisted on. The stomach should not be disappointed when it expects to be replenished. If disappointed, even a diminished amount of food will be taken, without appetite, which causes the secretions to injure the stomach, or else impairs its muscular action.—Popular Science Monthly.

HOT WATER AS A BEVERAGE.—A physician writes in the "World of Science" some very interesting things regarding water to drink. The habit of drinking strong tea or black coffee directly after dinner is especially bad, and certainly interferes with digestion. At breakfast-time a healthy man has all his sleep in him, and surely it is then unscientific for him to inflict upon his system strong tea or coffee. At tea-time tea or coffee may well be indulged in moderately. The body not only wants rinsing out, but fatigue is felt, which may well be counteracted by the use of a mild stimulant such as tea, and bedtime is not yet so near that sleep is thereby interfered with. Most nations that drink coffee largely get a sallow skin, and I am inclined to think that the carbonaceous matter of the roasted coffee, when so largely and frequently taken, may perhaps have something to do with this. For hard-working people who are not corpulent, I should suggest the thick-flake cocoa as the healthiest and most nutritious breakfast beverage. For those who do not want fattening drinks, and who often cannot digest cocoa, I should say drink hot water at breakfast. Those who dine late and make their dinner their main meal need a diluent drink an hour or two afterward; and if they drink tea it keeps them awake or makes them irritable and nervous. I find for myself that dining so idly as I am obliged to do when I have done my work (7:30 p. m.), and often needing to work from 9 to 11, a tumbler of hot water brought into my study or laboratory is the best and wholesomest drink, and after a few evenings it will be as much relished as the usual draught of tea. The hot water assists to complete the digestion of residual food, it acts upon the kidneys and rinses out the effete matters, and thus will be found to wake one up sufficiently, and neither to injure the stomach nor to keep the brain awake after bed-time. In cold weather warm water is by far the best drink at dinner-time, and in hot weather a draught of warm water is far wholesomest and more cooling than cold or iced water.—British Medical Journal.

TEACH HIM TO SWIM.—Many an unwise parent labors hard and lives sparingly all his life for the purpose of leaving to his children a start in this world, as it is called. Setting a young man afloat with money left by his relatives, is like tying bladders under the arms of one who cannot swim; ten chances to one he will lose his bladders and go to the bottom. Teach him how to swim and he will never need bladders. Give your child a sound education, and you have done enough for him. See to it that his morals are pure, his mind cultivated, and his whole nature made subservient to the laws which govern man and you will have given him what will be of more value than the wealth of the Indies.

Ruskin asks, "What is there more beautiful than the word wife?" He wife herself.

UNPROFESSIONAL.—"I despise that man," said an old school Arkansas gentleman referring to a lawyer who passed along the street.

"Why do you think that he merits your hate?" asked a bystander.

"I not only have cause for thinking it, but have cause for knowing it. He was counsel against me in a law case, some time ago, and his unprofessional conduct disgusted me."

"I never before heard that he had disregarded the fine lines of professional bearing."

"But he has. You see, I was drawn into court on a charge of stealing a cow—yes, sir, charged with stealing a cow! I did not object to a professional investigation of the case; but, sir, after examining ten witnesses, and failing to sustain the indictment, he should have stopped."

"Didn't he stop?"

"No, sir. He brought into court the eleventh witness, and proved that I did steal the cow."

Corns may be easily cured. The most torturing corn can at once be extirpated as follows: "Take a sharp knife, and find the joint of the toe whereupon the corn resides; insert the knife in the articulation, cut off the toe and throw it away. It will never return again, unless your dog brings it back to you in his mouth. (Patent applied for.)"

Ammonia water of a damp cloth dipped in whitening cleans paint nicely. Cold tea is the best thing to clean varnished wood with, the tea and tea leaves saved from the table for several days and stepped will usually be sufficient. It removes spots, and gives a fresher, newer appearance than when soap and water are used.

A Nashua man left a cannon ball on the grass in front of his house, and sixteen boys, nine middle-aged men, two old men, and one woman who had pretty stockings on, mistook it for a foot-ball. Now draw on your imagination for the rest of the story.

"Trust men" and they will be true to you," says Emerson. We showed this to a respectable grocer. He grew livid with rage, seized a club, and wanted to know where that Emerson lived anyhow. There was murder in that grocer's eye. We did not tell him.

We should give as we receive, cheerfully, quickly, and without hesitation, for there is no grace in a benefit that sticks to the fingers.
