INVESTIGATION OF THE TROUBLES UP AT STORRS

LABOR MAN HERE FOR GOVERNMENT PROBING.

Allegation That Men Were Recently Discharged For Connection With the United Mine Workers Is Denied By Management Locally and Also By J. William Knight.

As a result of charges made by John McLennon, international representative of the union of United Mine Workers, that the men employed by the Spring Canyon Coal company at Storrs were forbidden to organize by A. E. Gibson, general superintendent of the mine, and that the mine was closed as a result of the men organizing, and that despite cold weather they were driven from their homes on company property, Charles P. Connell of Los Angeles, Cala., United States commissioner of conciliation employed by the department of labor, arrived in Salt Lake City this week to conduct an investigation. He of course will come to Carbon county, where the property of Spring Canyon Coal company is located, and where also, the United Mine Workers have a lodge at Helper.

McLennon asserts that the miners at Storrs decided to organize early last month. They made known their intentions to Gibson, the superintendent, and that he informed them if they did so the property would close down and the entire force would lose their jobs. Despite the threats, declares McLennon, the employes held a meeting and the following day were informed that the mine had closed and they must vacate the houses that they occupied on the company property. Ejection was carried out, charges McLennon, despite the very cold weather, and all were moved from the property with but one exception, where the wife of a miner was about to be confined. The action of the company, alleges McLennon, is an interference with the rights of the miners to organize, recognized by the war labor board and proclaimed by President Wilson. He is preparing affidavits to be submitted to Connell in support of his charges.

The allegations of McLennon are denied by J. Will Knight, manager of the Spring Canyon Coal company. Knight says the company's No. 3 mine was closed down because of a great decrease in the demand for coal and the necessity of immediately curtailing the output of the company. Fifty men, added Knight, were laid off at that time, but he instructed Gibson that no discrimination should be shown against union men or men who showed any desire to organize. Knight says he has never questioned the right of the men to organize. When the mine was closed employes were given notice to vacate the company's property, says Knight, but the instructions were that no men should be compelled to move immediately if it would entail suffering.

General Superintendent Gibson's statemgnts are practically the same as those of Knight. In the meantime the investigation being made by Connell goes on and further developments are awaited. According to McLennon there are six men who will swear that Gibson made the threats attributed to him.

It has been known locally for some time that there had been trouble at Storrs over union matters, but it was thought it had blown over.

PRODUCTION OF BLACK DIAMONDS TOLD IN FIGURES

Grant, who was indicted by a grand jury on the charge of violating the sabotage act by driving spikes in the armature of a dynamo furnishing power for about one-third of the machinery of the American Fuel company at its mines at Sego, on August 18, 1918, was discussed. It was alleged by the bureau of investigation that after having given notice that he was going to leave the employment of the company Grant ruined the dynamo, and drawing the wages due him, left for other parts of the country. He was captured near Colorado Springs, Colo., within one week after leaving Utah.

Coal Weighing Bill.

Sec. 4. It is expressly provided that this act shall be construed as independent of and without the provisions of the act approved March 8, 1917, and known as the public utilities commission of Utah.

The above paragraph is about the only important change made by Senator Joseph Chez in his bill introduced in the senate Wednesday last to provide for the weighing of carloads of coal at destination. The measure is one that has been before more than one preceding session of the legislature in one form or another, and has each time met with some opposition and encountered much debate. It has been nearly a law each time it was introduced, but for some reason or another never actually took its place on the statute books.

The theory of the bill is that it will cause the railroads to guard their coal shipments in open cars with more care if they find that freight is to be paid on coal actually delivered at destination, instead of on car, as weighed at the mine. It is argued that the difference entails considerable loss, ultimately borne either by the coal retailer or the consumer.

In the last legislature the bill was finally defeated on the plea that the public utilities commission of Utah could regulate such matters with justice to all, and that the subject came decidedly within the province of the commission. The commission has done nothing as yet, and Senator Chez has added the clause to the draft of the bill at the present session.

Curious Slab Is Found.

PETERSBURG, Ind., Jan. 12.—William Posey and Ed Sturgeon, two coal miners who work in the Atlas coal mines just north of here, have made a valuable discovery that is of considerable interest to hieroglyphic students throughout the country.

The boys were working a rift when one noticed a peculiar piece of coal that resembled a slab of wood. They carefully picked it out and found it to contain many hieroglyphic figures, drawn in straight lines.

In the same mine miners have found petrified fish, forest leaves and ocean shells. The recent find was made at a depth of one hundred and twelve feet beneath the surface of the earth, eighty feet of which was solid sandstone and rock.

CARD OF THANKS.

We take this method of most sincerely thanking all those friends who were so thoughtful of the family at the funeral of our brother, the late J. NATIONAL PROHIBITION IS CALLED FOR HERE IN UTAH.

The state legislature of Utah last Wednesday ratified the national prohibition amendment. Utah is the thirty-fifth state to give official approval. Only one more state is needed and the amendment becomes a law. The senate adopted House Resolution No. 1 by Welling, changing the wording just enough to make the resolution represent the legislature as a whole instead of merely the house. After this change the resolution was sent back to the house and within a short time it had been approved.

PRESIDENT MAY TOUR THE WESTERN STATES

PARIS, Jan. 13.—President Wilson is considering a speaking tour of the United States when he returns home. It is said that this trip will take him into many of the principal cities, and it is possible that he may touch the Pacific Coast. With congress out of the way early in March, he would have an opportunity for such a tour before returning to Europe should he follow his original plan, and if his return should be necessary.

YOUTH DROPS DEAD WHILE AT DINNER TABLE

Death came very suddenly about noon today (Friday) to Master Ross Birch, 12-year-old son of Mrs. Arthur W. Birch, of Price. The lad had returned home from school for the noon meal and was being served, when with the exclamation, "Oh, Mama," he fell over dead. He had been a sufferer from Bright's disease, it is said, aggravated by heart trouble. His father, one of the first settlers of this valley, was killed about a year ago by a powder blast while working on the state road near Helper. No arrangements are yet announced for the funeral. The family is one of the oldest in Price and will have the sympathy of very many friends in this latest sorrow.

Leading all other Utah counties, Morgan has already adopted the plan proposed by the state department of education for the appointment of a school health supervisor, according to Josiah Hall, state high school inspector. Hall has reported also that the Morgan county schools have 30 per cent more attendance than ever before, with some returned soldiers enrolled. He said that practically no influenza had appeared in that county.

Capital invested in American railroads at the end of 1917, when the roads were taken over by the government, totaled $20,543,571. The gross receipts from their operation during the year were $3,596,865,766, while the total expenses of operation were $2,357,398,412. This left a net railroad operating income after certain taxes and retals were subtracted of $1,081,356,496.

Unused water from a spring or flowing well may be made valuable if brought to a watering trough, cooling tank, fish pond or swimming pool or harvested as ice. A saving may be effected by laying two lines of pipe in one trench. The engine which drives the pump may operate other useful appliances such as a dynamo, saw, washing machine, cream separator or churn.

Funeral services for Elmer H. Brown, who died at a local hospital of influenza Thursday of last week, were held Sunday last. The family came here a short time ago and lived on one of the Hoffman farms near Price. A sister, Margery, is still in the hospital.
