UNCLE WIGGILY

THE STORY OF THE BIG ICICLE.

(BY HOWARD R. GARIS)

Johnnie and Billie Bushytail, the two squirrels, and Sammie Littletail, the rabbit chap, were out playing in the snow. They frisked about, dodging behind trees and leaping through the white drifts. For each wore a warm coat of fur and did not mind the cold nor the frosty, white flakes.

"Oh, look at this big icicle!" cried Johnnie, as he skipped around the corner of Uncle Wiggily's hollow stump bungalow and saw, hanging from the roof, a large icicle. The day before had been warm and the snow on the roof had melted, running down drop by drop. Then the weather grew colder, and as each drop fell it froze until they had all frozen into a long stick, or cane, called an icicle.

"Isn't it a jolly big one?" chattered Billie Bushytail.

"It's as long as Uncle Wiggily's rheumatism crutch!" said Sammie.

"And the same shape," added Johnnie, "with the thick part on one end where Uncle Wiggily puts it under his paw."

"Oh, I know what we can do!" cried Billie.

"What can we do?" asked his brother and Sammie.

"We can take down this big icicle," said Billie, "color it red and blue, like Uncle Wiggily's crutch, and fool him with it."

"How?" asked Sammie.

"Why, after we take the icicle down we'll color it with red ink and blue ink," explained the squirrel chap. "We can leave places on it without coloring them and they'll be the white parts. Then when we have it all done we'll stand it in Uncle Wiggily's hall. He'll think the big icicle is his rheumatism crutch, he'll start to hop on it, and he'll slip down and bump his pink, twinkling nose!"

"Oh, that will be lots of fun!" laughed Johnnie and Sammie. I suppose they meant it would be fun for them—not for the bunny.

So the squirrel boys and the rabbit boy broke off the big, frosty icicle in one long piece. It was, indeed, like Uncle Wiggily's rheumatism crutch. Then Johnnie, Billie and Sammie, getting some red and blue ink, colored the icicle like a barber pole.

"Now we'll set it in Uncle Wiggily's front hall, and when he starts out to look for an adventure, as he does every day, he'll take this icicle crutch instead of his own and he'll slip like anything!" laughed Billie.

Well, the squirrel and rabbit boys managed to get the big icicle into Uncle Wiggily's front hall without being found out. They set it up in a corner and took the real rheumatism crutch away.

"Now we'll hide behind the hat rack and wait for what happens," whispered Billie.

The animal boys did themselves where they could look out and see when Uncle Wiggily took the big icicle crutch. A little later they heard the bunny gentleman in his bungalow speaking to Nurse Jane.

"I think I'll go for a little hop over the snow," said the bunny gentleman.

"Well, take your rheumatism crutch so you won't stumble and fall," advised the muskrat lady housekeeper.

"Yes, I'll do that," Uncle Wiggily said.

"Oh, won't he be fooled when he takes up this big colored icicle instead of his crutch!" chuckled Billie to his brother and Sammie.

But before Uncle Wiggily could come out into the hall the front door of his bungalow opened and in came the Woozie Wolf. The animal boys had forgotten to lock the door after they sneaked in, and so the Wolf could enter.

"Oh, ho!" growled the Wolf, as he saw the red and blue icicle in the corner of the hall. "Here is Uncle Wiggily's crutch, and he can't be far away. It's lucky the door was open or I never could have gotten in. I'll just hide that crutch, and when Uncle Wiggily comes out to look for it he'll be so surprised to find it gone that I can easily nab him and nibble his ears."

In fear and trembling, the animal boys, hidden behind the hat rack, watched the Wolf. Oh, how sorry they were for having left the door open.

The Wolf reached out his paws to take away what he thought was Uncle Wiggily's rheumatism crutch when, all at once, the icicle, which had melted a little on one end, slipped down, and fell with a crash right on the Wolf. The big icicle broke into a dozen pieces and one large chunk hit the Wolf on his nose.

"Oh, wow! Oh, wow!" howled the Wolf. "What's this? Uncle Wiggily's rheumatism crutch came to life and banged me on the head! Oh, this must be magic! Oh, I'm going away!" And out he ran, not biting any one.

Uncle Wiggily and Nurse Jane came running out into the hall. They saw the broken icicle and the animal boys, and they caught a glimpse of the Wolf running away.

"Did you boys scare the bad chap?" asked the bunny.

"No, it was your big icicle!" chattered Billie. And then he told of the trick they had tried to play.

"Well, everything happened for the best!" laughed Uncle Wiggily, as he found his regular crutch. "I'll forgive you." Then Johnnie, Billie and Sammie helped Nurse Jane pick up the broken icicle, and Uncle Wiggily laughed so hard at the way the Wolf was frightened, that the bunny's pink nose twinkled upside down.

So once again Mr. Longears was saved, and if the cow lady doesn't blow her horn so loudly in the night that she wakes up the sleeping car on the railroad, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily and the snow house.

Kiddies' Colds Can Be Eased Quickly

MONARCH MOOSE IS KILLED BY HUNTER

CODY, Wyo., Jan. 3.—"Old Slocum," wily moose monarch of the Wyoming forests, has been slain.

"Old Slocum" was said to have been one of the biggest moose known in the famous "Jackson Hole" country. He fell before the gun of R. W. Everett a hunter from Pisgah Forest, N. C. His pelt and 55-inch spread of antlers will be mounted.

Unlike deer and elk, a moose is antagonistic, and "Old Slocum" fought fiercely to the end. With his horns lowered and bellowing loudly, he charged forward as Everett pumped a shot straight through his heart, ending his long career.

SUCCESS—POWER

Work Shows the Man

You must respect your work before you can respect yourself. Character is built in effort. Life is activity.

A man's true self shows in his work. It is a hundred times surer test of his ability and ambition than anything he may say about himself. There's no bluff about honest effort.

Look on your work, whatever it is, as the only way to give expression to your highest ambitions. Devotion to your duty will annihilate the distance that seems to lie between what you are doing and what you long to accomplish.

Believing in your work is the first step in gaining faith in yourself. Hopes grow real when we take them to work with us.
