FIND ADVANTAGE IN COURSES OF Y. M. C. A. SCHOOL

Class of 72 Is Half Composed of Ex-Service Men—All Students Employed.

In the two months since K. S. Mitchel and A. H. Drymon were attached to the staff of the Y. M. C. A. as representatives of the United "Y" correspondence schools, they have enrolled 72 students in addition to the large classes at the Studebaker plant and the Mishawaka Woolen Co., according to a statement made Friday by William Danner, Jr., secretary of the association.

These students are taking courses in 34 subjects which are part of the 300 lines of study offered by correspondence method in the United Y. M. C. A. schools. Of those listed half are ex-service men to whom $1,296 worth of scholarships were awarded by the "Y" over and above the $5,000 worth previously assigned to St. Joseph county ex-service men.

Many Enrolled.

The Studebaker company has a class of 99 men who are studying foremanship, part of the expenses of the course being paid by the company. The success of this class has been so great that the Detroit plant has now a class of 119.

Other courses which have an enrollment of a large number of men are those in accounting, business arithmetic, salesmanship, architectural construction, English, arithmetic, electrical equipment of automobiles, and radio. There are a few others in banking, penmanship, transportation, surveying, plumbing, drawing and poultry raising.

The students who are carrying this work are all engaged in occupations, which take up their time during the day. Several of the men who have taken correspondence courses in other schools have expressed their appreciation of the instruction offered by the "Y" schools, Mr. Danner said.

Replacing "Y" Night School.

"The material is prepared by the best available professors and leaders in education over the country," he said. "The large teaching staff in New York gives personal attention to every student with individual correction and replies to all lesson material."

Mr. Mitchel and Mr. Drymon have been making the Y. M. C. A. their headquarters while they are in South Bend, and are engaged in speaking on education before factories and stores.

"The courses are sold on a non-profit making basis giving men and women the opportunity to go on with their studies no matter what their employment. We recommend the service to both the employers and the employees, to take the place of the night school which the Y. M. C. A. had before, and which was elementary at best."

Service Bureaus Find Queries of Numerous Types

"Please, Miss, will you tell me how I shall do up my egg plants so that they'll keep all winter?"

This is but one of the questions which Mrs. Grace Kulp, assistant manager of the Chamber of Commerce is called upon to answer every day.

To this question, Mrs. Kulp confessed that she had never done up any egg plants for the winter and referred the inquirer to Miss Hillier at the High school, who has charge of the Household Science department.

Not Surprised.

Not that she was at all surprised at the question. "If someone called up and wanted to know where to buy a paper of pins, I'd go right ahead and tell them as a matter of course," she said. "I wouldn't be surprised at anything they'd ask me."

You might say that the telephone is her boss to a great degree. It rings, and she assures it that the Chamber of Commerce will find a window washer immediately. Or it might be a nurse maid or a lawn cutter or a furnished room for light housekeeping that is wanted.

Postmaster John Hunter is another official who is called upon often for strange advice.

Hunter Busy, Too.

"I want you to look at this letter and tell me what you think of it," a man asked him Friday in his office. "It's an answer I got to an answer of mine to an 'ad' in a Chicago newspaper. I was looking for a job, but this is altogether too promising for me. Do you think there's anything connected with bootlegging or Bolshevism in it?"

Mr. Hunter didn't think it was anything as bad as all that, but advised him against spending carfare to Chicago to investigate it.

"The reason I have so many queries to answer," he said, "is because there is no federal court in this part of the state. When people are in doubt they come to me to find out what to do next. It's all a part of the days work."

Son of Firefighter Wins in "Essay" Contest

George Kasa, the chauffeur of one of the engines of No. 1 company of the city fire department, is the proud father of one of the winners of the Fire Prevention essay contest. His son, Louis, is ten years old and a pupil at the Franklin school.

"This isn't the first prize he has won for his writing ability," his father said. "He's always first in his class with it comes to wielding the pen."

Another one of the winners, Bob Stretch, is a junior high school boy and a boy scout. Part of the training of the Boy Scouts is in Fire Prevention, and Stretch showed that he had paid a great deal of attention to the pages devoted to that study in the Boy Scout manual.

Country Still Needs 'Good Five Cent Cigar,' Sage of The Wabash Declares

Former Vice-President Sighs at 'High Life' Tendency of Americans.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—(By I. N. S.)—Thomas Riley Marshall, former vice-president of the United States, now back in governmental harness as a member of the coal fact-finding commission after a vacation since March 4, 1921, is still looking for that "good five cent" cigar.

"I never have found it," sighed the sage of the Wabash today." I've traveled lots of miles, and probably had a million cigars sent me since I remarked that what this country needed was a good five cent cigar, but it is still elusive."

The former vice-president pulled thoughtfully on a cigar that cost fifteen cents.

"You know," he said, "that remark of mine has been wholly misinterpreted.

Cut Out 'High Living.'

"What I meant by saying what this country needed was a good five cent cigar was this: We, all of us, should quit living so high.

"Trouble is that for the last few years we have all been advocating industry and thrift for our neighbors, while we continued to live high. 'Work and save' is all right for the other fellow, but it loses some of its attraction when personally applied.

"The five cent cigar was what you reporting fellows call a figure of speech for getting down to earth, buckling down to thrift and work."

"Haven't circumstances pretty much caused people to do that?" he was asked.

"I haven't noticed it," was his dry rejoinder. "You'll notice that every American must have his flivver these days.

"This country still needs that same old five cent cigar."

Scalding Burns Prove Fatal To Robert Rush, 2

Robert Rush, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence C. Rush, died at the family home, 2216 Kemble av., at 8:30 o'clock Thursday night, succumbing to blood poisoning as the direct result of scalding burns received three weeks ago.

Robert was two years old Oct. 8, last. Funeral arrangements have not yet been completed.

The infant was burned when he fell into a pan of scalding hot water, placed upon the front porch of the home by the mother, incident to scrubbing the porch. The baby fell backwards into the pan and remained in the scalding water until the mother, a short distance away, could recover him.

Blood poisoning set in and four of the worst burns failed to heal. After a three weeks' despairing fight, during which time the infant suffered excruciating pains, the end came suddenly and relieved his sufferings. The poison had spread through the system.

Surviving the deceased infant are the parents and a baby sister, Betty Jane, a year younger than Robert.
