J. W. COLBERT.

He May Be a Millionaire.

J. W. Colbert, of Portsmouth, Va., formerly a merchant of this city, is an heir to the $120,000,000 estate of the Bradfords in England. He says in an interview that, after 200 years of litigation, the 24 legatees had agreed to compromise. His share will be $1,000,000 if the final settlement is effected, as he expected it will be. Governor Bradford, of Massachusetts, who came over in the Mayflower, is the progenitor through whom Mr. Colbert gets his money. The late Capt. John Morgan, of Fauquier county, is the nearest kinsman. His share of $8,000,000 will be divided equally between eight heirs, Mr. Colbert being one. Mrs. S. S. Cadot, of this city, is one of Mr. Colbert's children.

An Excellent Entertainment.

The Opera House was crowded on Friday night last with the friends of the little folks of the Baptist Church, who gave, in splendid style, the Lilliputian Wedding and recitations and songs. Every character was admirably represented and there was not a balk in the entire program, so well had the children been trained. Dr. J. S. Dill was master of ceremonies. Before the wedding Miss Helen Rollman, of Baltimore, pleased the audience with several recitations and Miss Ruth Downing rendered a sweet solo. The Lilliputian bridal party was composed of more than fifty children. Master Thomas Burruss and Miss Ida Burruss were the wedded pair and Master Willie B. Quinn made an excellent Parson Petite. Ice cream and cake were served at the conclusion of the program. A large sum was realized for the benefit of the church.

F. & P. train at Acquia Creek, but this Scarcey stoutly denied, and says that he only came to see his old attorney, Hon. T. Weldon Berrey, before going to Texas to visit his mother.
