A WIERD YARN.

"I had been up the Rio de la Plata in a British brig," said Charles Williamson, "and as we came back to Montevideo to finish our loading we had to make considerable repairs above the water line. There were ten or twelve of us all told when we hauled out and were about ready to trip anchor for home, and of all the hard cases I ever saw put aboard a ship this crew capped the climax. The captain and myself were the only two left of the crew which had come out from Liverpool. Some of the men had died, some skipped out, and we had picked up negroes, Lascars, Americans, Englishmen and Swedes, just as we happened to find them, until we had a sprinkling of everything under the sun. We had hauled out into the harbor to sober up the crew and finish the repairs, when the captain was taken suddenly ill. This was directly after dinner, and he was rowed off to the town to consult a doctor. The proper thing, as it seemed to me, would have been to send and bring a medical man aboard, but things took place as I told you.

"The old man was no sooner clear of the brig than the half-sobered men broke loose from all restraint. The mate was seized and secured in his state-room, and the mutineers, for such they had now become, carried things with a high hand. They rummaged the cabin and the stores, drank themselves into a frenzy, and, as night came on, they hoisted out the long boat, filled her with the plunder, and all deserted the brig together. I had not joined with them, and, but for my having found a safe hiding-place, they would have either done for me, or forced me to go along in the boat. As soon as they were all away we took the dingy, which had returned after leaving the captain on shore, and rowed in to inform the old man of what had happened. As the cook went with the mutineers, not a soul was left aboard of the Clarence. It seemed that the captain was taken much worse after getting ashore, and when we found him, which was only after a couple of hours, he had a high fever and was out of his head. The doctor said he was in for it for half a month at least, and so Mr. Carpenter—that was the name of the mate—and myself started back to the brig. We had not yet reached our boat, when a sudden and violent storm arose, and it continued during the entire night with such fury that it was idle to think of leaving the wharf. During that storm a ship in the harbor was dismasted, a schooner dragged her anchor and crashed into a brig, and thousands of dollars' damage done to shipping. We were out at daylight to look for the Clarence, but she was nowhere to be seen. The crew of the dismasted ship reported having seen the brig drive out to sea with the gale, and there could be no doubt of her loss.

"In a day or two we heard from the mutineers, or at least the long boat was picked up at sea, bottom side up, with every chance that not a man had escaped. Inside of a week the captain was dead, and the mate shipped one way and I the other. I made a voyage to Rio Janeiro and back, and then shipped for a run around the Horn and up the Chili coast. Sixty-five days after the Clarence drove out to sea I was in the American ship Henry Jordan, with the Falkland Island bearing due west and thirty or forty miles away. It was mid-afternoon, with a fair sailing breeze, when I heard a man from aloft hail the deck with:

"Dismasted hulk dead ahead and about five miles away, sir."

"There was a general stir among officers and men, and every one of us had the wreck under his eye long enough before we came up to it. She was driving broadside on, masts and jibboom gone, and a tangle of wreck stuff alongside, but the hull appeared perfectly sound. When we had approached her within a quarter of a mile the ship lay to, and a boat was lowered. It was my luck to be sent along, and to be allowed on board with the mate. I had no sooner passed over the rail than I recognized the hulk as that of the lost brig Clarence. The bulwarks were stoven in places, but not $50 damage had been done to the hull. She was dismasted, as I have said, but she hadn't a quart of water in her hold, and her cargo had not been disturbed or damaged. That was strange enough, considering how far she had drifted and the storms she had encountered, but there was something stranger still. In the cabin we found a man in hiding—a white man and a sailor, about 40 years of age. We had to drag him out by main force, but we could not get a word out of him. He shrank from us as if terrified, frightened, and we had to drop him into the boat neck and heels.

"The weather being pleasant, with a prospect of its holding so, our captain decided to pick up the derelict and take her to the islands. Her steering gear was in good order, and inside of thirty hours we had her securely anchored in a sheltered bay in the Falklands, and two of us were left aboard as shipkeepers. The stranger we had found aboard was taken along with the ship, but on the third day, not having yet spoken nor made a sign in answer to a question, he flung himself overboard and was drowned. I am just as certain he was not aboard of the brig when the mate and I left her as I am that I live. We had no such man among the crew, nor could he come off to the brig after we left without being seen. It is a solemn fact he must have boarded her in mid-ocean. How? From what? How long before we found him? Was it the loneliness of his solitary existence that drove him mad or idiotic? The land may have its mysteries, but those of the sea overshadow them."—New York Sun.

LANGUAGE OF THE EYES.—Long, almond-shaped eyes, with thick-skinned eyelids that cover half the pupil, are indicative of genius when they are found in conjunction with a brow which is full over the eyebrows, and which has one deep perpendicular line between the eyebrows. I have frequently noticed this combination in faces of distinguished literary men and artists. The almond-shaped eye, however, even without this peculiar form of forehead, always means a susceptible, impressionable nature. Eyes which are large, open and very transparent, and which sparkle with a rapid motion under well-defined eyelids, denote elegance in taste, a somewhat susceptible temper and great interest in the opposite sex. Eyes with weakly marked eyebrows above them, and with thinning growing eyelashes which are completely without any upward curve, denote a feeble constitution and a melancholy disposition. Deep, sunken and small blue eyes, under a bony, almost perpendicular forehead, are indicative of selfish and cold-hearted natures. Eyes which show not only the whole of the iris, but also some of the white both above and below it, denote a restless, uncertain nature, incapable of repose or of concentrated thought of any subject. The eyes of a voluptuary move slowly under heavy lids. Round shaped eyes are never seen in the face of a highly intellectual person, but they denote a kindly, truthful and innocent nature. Eyes which (when seen in profile) are so protuberant as to run almost parallel with the profile of the nose, show a weak organization of body and mind. Eyes rather close together show penetration, but eyes close together denote cunning and an untruthful disposition. Eyes rather far apart are indicative of frankness and simplicity of purpose—an honest and guileless nature. When, however, the eyes are very far apart they denote stupidity. Eyes with sharply defined angles, sinking at the corners, show subtlety of mind; the sharper the angle and the more it sinks, the greater the delicacy of perception it denotes; but when very much developed it shows also craftiness amounting to deceit. Well-opened eyes, with smooth eyelids and a steady and somewhat fixed glance, denote sincerity. Lines running along the eyelids from side to side, and passing out upon the temples, denote habitual laughter—a cheerful temperament, or, at any rate, one in which the sense of fun is strong.—Boston Sunday Times.

A PURPOSE IN LIFE.—Carlyle once asked an Edinburgh student what he was studying for. The youth replied that he had not quite made up his mind. There was a sudden lightning flash of the Scotchman's eye a sudden pulling down of the shaggy eyebrows, and the stern face grew sterner as he said: "The man without a purpose is like a ship without a rudder, a waif, a nothing, a no man. Have a purpose in life, if it is only to kill and divide and sell oxen well, but have a purpose; and having it, throw such strength of mind and body into your work as God has given you."

The Merchant Traveller tells of a small boy whose nose had been put out of joint by the advent of a baby brother with tremendous lung power. "Did little brother come from heaven, ma?" he asked. "Yes, dear." He listened to little brother's yells, and said: "I don't blame the angels for bouncing him. Do you ma?"

It is well to remember that the oldest cases of rheumatism and neuralgia have been cured by Salvation Oil. Price 25 cents a bottle.

How to Keep the Complexion.—The best aids to a good complexion are cold water, a pure soap, healthful food, good digestion and reasonable outdoor exercise.

A soothing application for sunburn, says "Clara Belle," is water to which vinegar has been added at the rate of one spoonful to a wineglass of water and a little starch. Vaseline is good; so is glycerine and rose-water, in the proportion of one part glycerine to three parts of rose-water.

Wrinkles are often caused by anxiety, bad health or study. The cause of their formation having been removed, and the general health restored by means of suitable food, occupation, exercise and cheerful surroundings, the wrinkles will generally disappear. Use warm water, not hot, to wash your face, and a soap that does not contain a surplus of soda. White castile is the best that can be had. At night sponge the face with rose-water and white glycerine in equal parts, to which have been added a few drops of spirits of turpentine. Rub well into the pores and let the mixture dry on the face.

The use of cosmetics is detrimental. They clog the pores of the skin. If the skin be dry, milk or buttermilk can be applied. It is well to mix some flour or sulphur with the milk and let it stand for about two hours or over night, and then use without disturbing the sulphur, which will have settled at the bottom. This should be used before washing, and a small quantity should be prepared as required, as it is not a commodity adapted for keeping.

If the skin presents a greasy appearance, due to an excess of oily secretions, milk should not be used, but a lotion composed of equal parts of rose-water and elderflower-water, or a little eau de cologne, may be added to the water before washing.

OLE BULL AND ERICSSON.—In conversation a few evenings ago a distinguished chemist and physician, who is also an enthusiastic and critical lover of music, told an interesting story about Ole Bull and John Ericsson, the great inventor.

It seems that they were friends in early life, but drifted apart and did not meet again until each had become famous. Bull had earned the ears of admiring thousands all over the civilized world, while the part the great mechanic played in naval warfare during the rebellion won the North to enthusiasm and startled the world.

Bull, happening to be in New York on a concert tour, determined to look up his old friend and renew the acquaintance. He found him in his workshop, surrounded by tools, machinery, designs, models, and materials used in mechanical constructions, directing the labors of a corps of assistants.

When taking his leave Bull invited Ericsson to attend his concert that night. Ericsson, however, declined, saying he had no time to waste. Their acquaintance being thus renewed, Bull continued to call on his old friend when visiting New York, and usually when taking his leave would ask Ericsson to attend his concert, but Ericsson always declined the invitation.

Upon one occasion Bull pressed him urgently, and said: "If you do not come, I shall bring my violin here and play in your shop." "If you bring the thing here I shall smash it to pieces."

Here were two men the very opposites of each other. Bull an impulsive, romantic dreamer; Ericsson stern, thoughtful, practical, proving every movement with mathematical precision.

Bull's curiosity was aroused to know what effect music would have upon the grim, matter-of-fact man of squares and circles. So, taking his violin with him, he went to Ericsson's shop, and had removed the strings, screws and apron, so that the violin would seem to be in bad condition. As he entered the shop, noticing a displeased expression on Ericsson's face, Bull called his attention to certain defects in the instrument, and, speaking of its construction, asked Ericsson about the scientific and acoustic properties involved in the grain of certain woods. From this he passed on to a discussion of sound-waves, tones, semi tones, etc.

To illustrate his meaning, he replaced the strings, and, improvising a few chords, drifted into a rich melody. The workmen, charmed, dropped their tools, and stood in silent wonder. He played on, and on, and when finally he ceased, Ericsson raised his bowed head, and with moist eyes, said: "Do not stop. Go on! Go on! I never knew until now what there was lacking in my life."

The Boston Journal of Commerce asks: "What will be the fuel of the future?" Such of us as are living Christian lives have been taught to believe it will be brimstone.—Life.

FOR CONGRESS.

MORONGZA, July 24, 1886. Messrs. Editors—Please announce the Hon. FRANK N. HORTON as a candidate for Congress from the 5th Congressional district at the ensuing election, subject to the republican nominating convention. Mr. Horton is a gentleman of sterling worth, strict integrity and of great capacity as a speaker or thinker. He is just, energetic and enterprising, such a one as would meet Mr. Compton in fitness and fearlessly discuss the living issues of the day with advantage to the republican party, to which he has always stood steadfast and faithful. Besides, he is unobjectional to the democracy of this district. His election would redound to the interest of the laboring people of this Congressional district. AMICUS. July 29—top.

Before purchasing your Fertilizers for what the coming season, it will be to your interest to give us a call. All the above brands are strictly reliable, besides we keep in stock all kinds of the best grade material from which we can make you any grade Fertilizer you may need. This being an old-established name, and every thing they sell you is as represented. As an evidence of the superiority of our goods, my sales have increased from 21 tons per annum, the first year, to 1,085 tons, this being my sales in Charles and St. Mary's counties the past year. I shall not be satisfied until I sell every responsible farmer in Southern Maryland, as it is not only for my own interest I wish to do so. My greatest desire is to induce planters of Southern Maryland to use strictly first class goods and they can only do so by dealing with a first-class house. Mr. W. I. Birch, of Bryantown, or Mr. C. B. Lloyd, our Collector and Salesman, will be glad to receive your orders, and I will devote as much time as I can to the two counties the coming season in order to induce the farmers of Southern Maryland to buy the best Fertilizers offered to the people of any State in the Union. All responsible orders sent direct to the Company will receive prompt attention. Yours very truly, JOHN M. LLOYD. N. B.—What Mr. James F. Mattingly, a large and practical farmer of Charles County, St. Mary's county, says of our Tobacco Compound—He says that he can grow as good as to quality, it weighs from 1 to 4 more than any other Fertilizer that he has used. I will here add that Mr. Mattingly is not only a very good and prosperous farmer but strictly reliable. Mr. Mattingly has used our goods for several years and says he will use no others for both Wheat and Tobacco. JOHN M. LLOYD.
