CITY COUNCIL.

Rushes Through Its Business to Get at the Bevington Trial, but Has to Postpone It.

City council met in regular session last evening, with President Mast in the chair and the following members present: Messrs. Tehan, Funk, Johnson, Kidder, Korn, Russell, Ackerson, Conklin, Nelson, Prince, Netts and Grube. After the reading and approval of the minutes the regular business of the session proceeded.

By the Clerk—Communication from Drs. J. H. Rodgers, Isaac Kay and R. L. Bell, a committee from the Clark County Medical Society. The paper stated that the diseases of scarlet fever and diphtheria had not been by any means epidemic, nor half so widely spread as popularly imagined. In support of this statement they gave statistics of interment, showing that from November 16, 1885, to February 16, 1886, there had been 9 cases of scarlet fever resulting in death and 7 cases of diphtheria. The paper asked that the language of the "ordinance for the suppression of infectious diseases" be limited to small-pox. On motion of Mr. Tehan it was placed on file.

By the clerk—Report of chief of police that he had granted a couple of beer-selling privileges, one to the Schwabin Society for March 8, and one for Wildason's hall February 11.

By the same—Mayor's report for January, showing collections from fines $249, licenses $12. Referred.

Various bills were presented and referred.

By Mr. Tehan, from street committee—ordinance for payment of street hands, $95.05. Adopted.

By Mr. Ackerson, from the sewer committee—Pay ordinance to D. F. Minahan, balance on Limestone street sewer, $201.76. Adopted.

By Mr. Prince, from police committee—Pay ordinance for sundry bills amounting to $60.90. Adopted.

By Mr. McKenna—Resolution to lay water mains on Kenton street, west from East street to Catholic parsonage. Referred to water works trustees.

The lobby was well crowded by this time to listen to the Bevington trial, which came up at this time according to the ruling at the last meeting. Fifteen of the twenty-four witnesses subpœnaed were present. Mr. Mowet, as Bevington's attorney, stated that the accused copper could not be present on account of ill health. He said, however, that he had a motion to quash the proceedings, and asked that it be heard. The solicitor read a section of the ordinance in reference to the case, showing that council would have to postpone the trial for one meeting, and a motion to postpone was made by Mr. Netts. Mr. Mower again asked that his motion to quash be heard, and Mr. Netts, as soon as he understood the matter, withdrew his motion. Thereupon Mr. Tehan made a motion to adjourn, which, after a quibble, was declared lost. He called for the ayes and nays, and it was carried by a vote of 9 to 6.

THE DAUGHTER OF THE REGIMENT.

Little Mary McDowell Shellenberger the Favorite of the 94th O. V. I. Boys.

The old war veterans at their annual regimental reunions have of late years fallen into the very pleasant custom of selecting some young girl, a daughter of a prominent member of the regiment, and christening her "the daughter of the regiment," and she immediately becomes the heroine of all their gatherings.

At a recent reunion the 94th O. V. I. boys voted Mary McDowell Shellenberger, the little seven-year-old daughter of Dr. Shellenberger, of Piqua, lieutenant colonel of the 3d regiment, Ohio militia, to this complimentary place. The gallant 94th boys did not stop here, but they have had made for their little favorite a beautiful pin, which, for originality in design and beauty in execution, can scarcely be surpassed. The pin is in three parts, these connected by tiny gold link chains. The top section represents an "Army of the Cumberland" pin about an inch and a quarter long and half an inch wide, and on this plate is engraved "The Daughter of the 94th O. V. I. Regiment." Below this, attached by the little gold chains, is a knapsack with blanket rolled on top and two muskets crossed and attached by links at the bottom. Below this as a pendant is an acorn, the 14th Army Corps badge. The entire pin is of gold and enamel, with a "red, white and blue" ribbon background.

The pin is certainly unique and a beauty, and undoubtedly will be prized by the little lady who is to have the honor of wearing it. The GLOBE-REPUBLIC is under obligations to Col. David King for an examination of the badge.

Tribute to Pastor Tate.

SPRINGFIELD, O., Feb. 16, 1886.

We, the committee appointed by the quarterly conference of Wiley M. E. church in behalf of our congregation, herein express our regrets that the time of our pastor, the Rev. Henry W. Tate's pastoral duties are at a terminus. He has occupied the pulpit of our chapel for three consecutive years. When Rev. Tate assumed his pastoral charge at our chapel it was in an ill condition. Since then he has labored with consummate consideration, and brought the church from the dead level of discontinuance to the living perpendicular of spiritual heritage and Christianity.

The congregation can now compete with any congregation, irrespective of size. It is in a better condition now than ever before. The Rev. Tate in his genial, affable and christian-like bearing, has labored incessantly and most effectually; consequently the Wiley Chapel stands as a beacon light through his success. The Sunday school is in a prosperous condition. Never was such a school entertained as now is. Rev. Tate has won the hearts, the affections of the commonwealth of Clark county, irrespective of color or social condition. Hence in expressing the regrets of our congregation we voice the regrets of the community at large. There is none but looks upon Rev. Tate but in the highest estimation. His record as pastor is at the acme of consideration. Signed,

HENRY HARVEY,
JOHN WILSON,
J. W. HAYNES.

Before the Mayor.

The following were brought up before Mayor Goodwin yesterday and fined the amounts set opposite their names: Frank Phillips, Charles Clark, Cornelius Slyer and Mrs. L. E. Cole were dismissed on the charge of disorderly conduct.

"BOHEMIAN CORN."

W. F. Rust States the Case and Asks for a Fair Show.

To the Editor of the Globe Republic:

Dear brother farmers and readers of the GLOBE REPUBLIC: I have no Bohemian oats nor have I any of the Bohemian corn which our Kansas friend would probably like to advertise; but I have exactly what I represent in the card, a very superior field corn, and have taken considerable pains to get it to its present high quality. I say it will mature in from eighty to ninety days, etc. I know this by my own experiments, and have just what I represent. What does it matter if I raise the corn on my father's farm, on somebody else's father's farm, or on my own farm. Any one who is in doubt about this new seed corn is at liberty to try a package and know for himself, and if proper cultivation is given and care taken I will refund ten times the amount they may pay for the package if it does not do exactly as I say. It my friend of the Burlington, Kansas, Chronicle will call around I will take pleasure in showing this corn. I cannot show him the small, tiny stock coming up from the ground; I cannot show him or give him any roasting-ears, but can show him the corn that matures in from 80 to 90 days; will sell him a package for 25c and send him on his way, rejoicing to tell his beloved brethren that he has been to Egypt and found the actual corn as is represented. I have the corn. I fill all orders promptly, pay my advertising, and sell it at 25c a package. No man, even the editor of the Burlington, Kansas, Chronicle, can obtain a package for one cent less.

In Inquiry.

Abner Smith, of Mt. Crawford, Virginia, writes Postmaster Stone inquiring for information about his family. His father moved from Mt. Crawford in 1837, and lived in Springfield, Ohio. Here the family remained for a few years, and there his mother died. His father married again, and his brothers and sisters went west, one went to Texas, one to Kansas, one to Missouri, and three of them are in Ohio somewhere. His sister Sarah is about 77 years old; he doesn't know whether she was ever married, and he would like to hear from or of her.—Urbana Citizen.

VICE VERSA.

Young Podkin's First Victory—How Podkins Senior is Caught by His Son—A Strapping Averted in Consequence.

There was a very interesting time at Podkins' family mansion this morning. Old man Podkins had just come down stairs for breakfast, and he was a little late. Mrs. Podkins, young Samuel Podkins, and the four Podkin girls were at the table, and as it was a standing rule with the old man, who was a deacon in the church, that no meal should be eaten in his house without grace having been said, and as young Podkins wouldn't say it, the breakfast was rapidly getting cold while waiting the appearance of the head of the family. "Seems to me you are in a hurry this morning," remarked Mrs. Podkins, snappingly, as the old man drew up to the table.

Podkins said nothing but cleared his throat and went through with his customary invocation. But there was a deep scowl on his face, and the four Podkins girls, who stood in mortal fear of the old gentleman, felt premonitions of a coming storm. And it came.

"Samuel," and the old man turned to young Podkins, "I want to know why it is that for the last week you have never been at home an evening. I have grave reason to suspect that you have been down at the wicked, wicked opera," and the look of sternness that spread over the deacon's face was alarming to see.

An accusation like that, coming from his father, would have some weeks ago filled the youth with terror. For if there was one commandment which he was required to keep it was that one laid down by his father, forbidding under the severest penalties known to parental authority, the frequenting of places of amusement. Young Podkins had been at the theater the night before. But instead of trembling with fear at the stern inquiry of his parent, he only laughed, at which the four girls fairly went into hysterics over the direful consequences that would surely come from it.

"You laugh! Ah! Samuel, you are defying me. Immediately after breakfast I want to see you in the library," and then a great quiet fell around the table. Young Podkins had visited the library on former occasions, and he did not like to dwell upon the results that usually had accompanied these visits. The old man was yet vigorous, and the strap he kept in his desk was a very heavy one. Though young Podkins was now in his fifteenth year and had his hair cut pompadour, and wore high collars, and all that, he had somehow or other never grown away from that strap in the old man's desk. But it wasn't the former trembling at the knees that he felt as he followed his father into the library this morning. He had a very peculiar smile on his face as he went in.

"Now, Samuel, take off your coat," said the old man as he closed the door and then drew out the strap from its place in the desk. When the old man turned around, he could scarcely believe it, but young Podkins was standing there as if he hadn't heard his order.

"Father," and the son stuck his fingers in his vest pocket in a very easy way, "I guess you don't care very much to know that I've found you out," and a mysterious grin spread over his face.

"Why what do you mean?" exclaimed the old man suddenly becoming very mild in his manner. "This is strange talk!"

"It just means this," replied his son, boldly; "you have been slipping into variety shows, beer gardens, and all such places yourself, and I can prove it if you want to know it. I am very sorry for you, but you have been shamming for a long time, and if there is any more of it I'll report you to our minister. Now, what are you going to do about it?"

The old man walked over to his desk, slowly deposited the old strap in a drawer, and then mildly, very mildly, replied to his son's interrogation:

"You needn't say anything about this to mother or the girls, or the minister of anybody else. Here's a couple of dollars for spending money, Sammy, and now you can go."

When Sammy emerged from the room, the four Podkins girls, who had breathlessly awaited his appearance, could not understand why it was that in place of tear-stained cheeks and ruffled hair, Sammy shot out among them with a very large smile at the corner of his mouth, and a very mysterious I've-fixed-him look in his eyes. They didn't understand, but Sammy and the senior Podkins did.

It might be added here that when an hour later, Podkins went down to his office, he took the strap with him and threw it down over the bank while on his way to the station.

Muscles Have Memories.

Pianists, whose fingers do seemingly wind it every occur to you," said a well known local pianist, who spent considerable time in thought, "that human muscles have a memory of their own, and that they perform many functions without special orders from the mind at times?"

"Well, yes," replied the writer, as he sat down at the piano and unconsciously overcrossed his fingers on the keys. "I don't suppose a Hungarian working 'in the little coke' has any special orders how to manipulate a spade, when he rolls out a heaped barrowfull."

"That's a very primitive illustration," resumed the other, at the same time closing the piano lockout and putting the key in his pocket, "and if you had trained your mind to pick out examples supporting arguments in a discussion, you would have dropped upon a much better one. For I assume that you are capable of understanding that when you follow your calling you would make a dismal failure if you had to interrupt the working of your mind each moment to tell your fingers how to make a letter. You must be aware of the fact that all you have to do in writing an article is to allow your thoughts full scope, and your fingers will put down the words, spelling and all correct, without instructions from the brain. But even writing is not an illustration of the highest order in application to this subject. Not only myself, but every musician, can tell that in memorizing pieces the fingers do it all. It would be a very difficult feat to remember all the notes in a piece of music, and some musical people rely so certainly on their fingers for the mechanical part of their playing that when they happen to think of the music in the midst of a performance they become nervous and the chances are break down. I will go still further than that. I learned a difficult piece of music eight years ago, lost the music, and did not see a piece for two years. I then resumed playing, but had forgotten all about the piece, when one evening while I was amusing myself at the piano in the dark, my fingers happened to strike the chord of that piece. They then started in, and while I was thinking of the scenes surrounding the spot where I had learned the piece they played it, expression and all. I can not pull down the curtains of this room, blindfold my eyes, carry on a conversation with you on any subject, and guarantee that my fingers will play that piece with all the expression implied in its tones. This seems a remarkable fact, but there are few good musicians who will not agree to do the same."

COUNOD'S YOUTHFUL GENIUS.

He Disappoints His Mother, but Reaches His Goal.

Once I heard him relate the story of his early difficulties. His mother was poor, but tried to educate her sons. He, Charles, suffered to see her working day and night in order to give him an education, and did not like to disappoint her.

The mother wished him to enter the normal school, but he knew he must be a musician. He told her his plans and she replied, "Are you serious?"

"Certainly."

"You will not go to the normal school?"

"Never."

"And you intend to go where?"

"To the Conservatory of Music."

"It is my turn to say never."

The poor woman was beside herself because of the gesture of decision made by her son, and continued: "We shall see. Your studies will be doubled. If in drawing lots you are unlucky and become a soldier I shall not pay for a substitute. Rather a thousand times that my son shoulder a gun than become a Bohemian."

"Mother," replied the obdurate genius, "I shall double my lessons because you wish it; but I shall not become a soldier because I do not wish it."

"What will you do?"

"I shall be exempted because I shall have gained the Grand Prix de Rome."

The mother called to her aid the dean of the college. He sent for young Gounod, and said to him: "Do you wish to be a musician?"

"Yes, sir," drily responded the culprit.

"Pooh! music is not a profession."

"What! Is it not a profession to be a Mozart, Weber, Rossini?"

"To wish is not to be Mozart. At your age, Mozart was celebrated. Show me what you can do. We shall see. There I will give you some words, and you will set them to music."

Two hours after Gounod returned with the music.

"Now sing it," said the dean.

"Sing? And the piano?"

"Piano! And for what purpose?"

"To accompany myself. Without the piano you cannot appreciate the harmony."

"I do not care for the harmony. It is the musical sentiment I want."

Gounod sang, and when he had finished turned his head timidly toward the judge. The dean was conquered; tears ran down his cheeks as he took Gounod in his arms and said: "He a musician, my son; we cannot fight against genius."

The mother was obliged to submit, but in taking her son to his first teacher she said: "Make his life hard; show him all the difficulties."

At the end of the year the teacher said: "Resign yourself, madame, he is gifted; I can teach him no more."

Gounod kept his vow and won the Prix de Rome just in time to be exempt from conscription.—Paris correspondence New York Mail and Express.

Monster and Master.

Grim old disease. He comes without invitation, takes a seat and invites himself to stay. He takes possession and remains until he is driven out. Whether in the form of neuralgia, dyspepsia, liver trouble or vitiated blood, disease is a monster as long as he has the mastery. "I have been a great sufferer from dyspepsia," writes H. H. Williams, of Linden, Mass., "and Brown's Iron Bitters cured me after other remedies failed." Therefore buy Brown's Iron Bitters of your druggist, and cast the monster, dyspepsia, out.

An exquisite and pine odor may be given to a room with pine needle extract through an atomizer. It is also very grateful to any one afflicted with any difficulty of the throat.

LOCAL NOTICES.

One of the greatest of Pennsylvania's products is petroleum. Millions have been made in the greasy fluid. Benjamin Crump, living at Oil City, right in the heart of the petroleum country, was prostrated by sick headache and general exhaustion by working continuously in the sun. By the doctor's advice he used Mishler's Herb Bitters as a preventive, and thereafter did not suffer.

EXCITEMENT OVER A MARVELOUS CURE IN ENGLAND.—The newspapers of Great Britain are filled with accounts of the wonderful recovery of a young man who had been so ill with asthma and rheumatism that he was not able to lie down in bed for nine long years. This cure was due to the Shakers of Mount Lebanon, N. Y. They say that this, like nearly all others, was the result of indigestion, and that the Shaker Extract of Roots (Siegel's Syrup) effected this wonderful cure by restoring the digestive organs to a healthy condition, obviating entirely those disagreeable turns of sick headache, biliousness, etc. The Shakers say they have spent fifty years in perfecting this remedy for Dyspepsia, and that its effects upon the digestive organs is something wonderful.

"Blood-food" is the suggestive name often given to Ayers' Sarsaparilla, because of its blood-enriching qualities.

As an article for the toilet, Ayer's Hair Vigor stands unrivalled. It cleanses the scalp and preserves it from scurf and dandruff, cures itching and humors, restores faded or gray hair to its original dark color, and promotes its growth.

There is no one article in the line of medicines that gives so large a return for the money as a good potous strengthening plaster, such as Carter's Smart Weed and Beaudonna Backache Plasters. 74e

SCOTT'S EMULSION OF PURE

Cod Liver Oil, With Hypophosphites—Its Use in Lung Troubles.

Dr. Hiram Cadoretto, of Jacksonville, Fla., says: "I have for the last ten months prescribed your Emulsion, to patients suffering from lung troubles, and they seem to be greatly benefitted by its use."

JOHN H. YATES, of Batavia, N. Y., says:

"I cheerfully commend
Your AROMATIC WINE.
It did new life and vigor send
Through this weak frame of mine.
It did for all my stomach ills
More than the doctor and his pills,

Father of Diseases.

Constipation has been called the father of diseases, therefore it should not be regarded as a trifling ailment. It is quite as necessary to remove impure accumulations from the bowels as it is to eat or sleep, and no health can be expected where a costive habit of body prevails. Take a half-tablespoonful of Simmons Liver Regulator after each meal; the bowels will be gently moved without griping or nausea as naturally as if no medicine had been taken. Regularity in taking the medicine daily will soon effect a permanent cure.

The best on earth, can truly be said of Griggs' Glycerine Salve, which is sure, safe and speedy cure for cuts, bruises, scalds, burns, wounds and all other sores. Try this wonder healer. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. Only 25 cents.

Throat-all seldom gets well of itself, but deepens until it undermines the constitution, wasts away health, strength and flesh, and finally fastens itself on the lungs, completing the wreck and ruin of the whole man. Dr. Bigelow's Positive Cure is the only safe, sure and speedy remedy for coughs, colds, and all throat and lung diseases. Sold at fifty cents and one dollar. Pleasant to take and safe for children.

GILMORE'S NEURALGIA CURE is a positive cure for Neuralgia in the face, side and stomach. For sale by Theo. Troupe, druggist.

You will notice how quickly a thoroughly successful article is imitated, and also that the imitations are without merit, as they are gotten up by unscrupulous parties. Beware of imitations of Dr. Jones' Red Clover Tonic. The genuine promptly cures dyspepsia, costiveness, bad breath, piles, pimples, ague and malarial diseases, poor appetite, low spirits, headache, or diseases of the kidneys, stomach and liver. Price 50 cents.

Horses, Cattle and Chickens.

For colic and grubs, for lung fever, cough or hide-bound, I give Simmons Liver Regulator (liquid) in ounce doses, or, one teaspoonful of the powder in a mash twice a day. You can recommend it to everyone having stock as the best medicine known for the above complaints. In using it with chickens, for cholera and gapes, I mix it with the dough and feed it to them once a day. By this treatment I have lost none where the Regulator was given prompt and regularly. E. T.
