"NO, NOT BY ANY MEANS"

"But I Say, Senator You Must!"

"WELL, I WON'T, SO NOW!"

The Two Gentlemen Dispute and There Is Trouble Over Appointments.

TACOMA, July 15.—Senator Foster and Congressman Cushman are not agreeing on all matters of federal appointments. There is a hitch between them over the division of offices, which, while it is not serious, has become interesting.

The selection of a west side census supervisor is the last point of difference. Cushman is understood to favor the appointment of John Rea, of Olympia, while Foster has indicated a desire to see a Snohomish or Whatcom county man in the position. Either might withdraw his support to a third man who would be a compromise, but this appears unlikely.

The difference over the supervisor has existed for some time. Both were reluctant to discuss the matter at the last meeting of the congressional delegation, and it was decided to hold another meeting next week. In the meantime the senator and congressman may come together.

It is probable if no agreement is reached before next week, both Senator Foster and Congressman Cushman will make recommendations.

Congressman Jones is allowed to name the man from Eastern Washington without interference of either Senator Foster or Congressman Cushman. He is ready to announce his selection at any time.

Senator Foster has yielded all right to make any recommendations regarding postoffice appointments, to the two congressmen, and it has been accepted that they should name the appointees. There are over 400 of these to be selected, and Senator Foster has felt that if he yielded that much he should be allowed to name most of the other appointees. In addition the two congressman select the cadets for West Point and Annapolis.

An audience will be granted by Senator Foster and Congressman Cushman to a party of King county politicians who have been urging the appointment of Major Clark as supervisor. The feeling heretofore has been that neither Tacoma nor Seattle would be recognized in the appointment, though at one time Congressman Cushman was favorable to Major Clark's appointment.

If the two representatives could be induced to name Major Clark, it would settle the question and be somewhat in the nature of a compromise. Both refuse to say Major Clark will not be named, but both are still favorable to the idea of naming a man outside of both King and Pierce counties.

A SUIT OVER A GRUBSTAKE

Court Asked to Decide Ownership of $20,000.

A suit was filed in the superior court by Joseph Albert and Markus Mayer, against L. Garfinkle and his mother. The complain alleges that they had grubstaked Garfinkle for a trip to Alaska. After he reached there he sold the goods and used the money for his own benefit, and accumulated gold dust worth $20,000. Mayers wants a receiver appointed for this until the court can decide who is the proper owner.

WORK ON THE BIG TUNNEL

Lining of the Big Hole to Begin Next Month.

The Great Northern will put a new force of men to work on its two mile Cascade tunnel next month. The work of lining the tunnel will be commenced and will be pushed rapidly to follow the crew which is digging through the mountains. H. R. De Laplain, of Tacoma, will be in charge of the work.

The Great Northern tunnel, which is to be cut through the Cascades, will be 13,221 feet, or exactly 21 feet more than two miles in length. Six thousand feet of the tunnel has been cut, and it is probable the work of completing the tunnel will occupy a year or more.

Two hundred and fifty men will be put to work lining the tunnel at the first of next month, and will follow up the other crew as rapidly as possible.

OFFICERS PROMOTED

In the First Washington Regiment.

OLYMPIA, July 15.—Gov. Rogers has announced the promotion of Lieut. J. B. McCoy, of Company C, as regimental adjutant in the First Washington, succeeding Adjutant Luhn, appointed major in a newly organized regiment. He ranks as first lieutenant. Lieutenant McCoy has been acting as regimental adjutant since Adjutant Luhn was taken by Colonel Wholley as acting brigade adjutant. He was second lieutenant in Company C, enlisted at Tacoma.

There has been no appointment in Company C since the retirement of Lieutenant Bothwell, though Lieutenant McCoy was presumed to be first lieutenant. The governor promoted all the officers of Company C a step to fill the two vacancies.

The names of the officers promoted are unknown here, save as they appear on the records in the adjutant-general's office. The muster roll would indicate Louis Stejer has become, by promotion, first lieutenant. He enlisted at Tacoma as first sergeant. Second Sergeant Charles A. Lunan will come back a second lieutenant. Changes may have been made in the Philippines which may change this order of promotion, but it is believed here these are the men who are advanced.

According to the same rolls, Wm. L. Gray and Henry D. Carter, corporals, are made sergeants.

The appointment of Lieutenant Lamping of Company D as a captain in one of the new volunteer regiments, has resulted in promotons in his company. The same step-ladder process of promotion is sanctioned by Gov. Rogers in Company D.

The records of the adjutant-general's office would indicate Z. B. Rawson, at present first sergeant, becomes second lieutenant by the change.

Russell Back in Jail.

TACOMA, July 15.—Russell, the prisoner who made a break for liberty and got away while wheeling in wood at the county jail last week, was caught in Seattle yesterday and brought to Tacoma on the 11 o'clock train last night.

THE PIGEONS WERE WISE

Fooled Officer Spangle Very Nicely.

HE TRIED TO GET THEM DRUNK

Story of a Novel Attempt Last Night By One of the Finest, and a Dismal Failure.

Police Officer Spangle has had a unique experience with the righteous pigeons which roost in the belfry of the First Methodist church at the corner of Third avenue and Marion street.

The officer last evening deliberately tempted them to fall from their high estate of incorruptibility to the level of police court drunks, and was completely worsted in the attempt. The pigeons still preserve their unblemished characters, and incidentally their lives, upon which the policeman admits that he had frying-pan designs.

Spangle wanted pigeons for supper, and, scorning to try the old-time method adopted by Jack the Giant Killer, of putting salt on their tails, he proceeded to try a scheme of his own in which cheap ten-rod whisky played a prominent part. Purchasing twenty-five cents worth of the fiery fluid and ten cents worth of corn, he started for the church to carry out his designs. The corn was in a little bucket, floating around in the whisky, and greedily imbibing the same. By the time the sacred edifice was reached the whisky had all disappeared, and naught remained in the pail except a thousand grains of sadly bloated corn.

Spangle scattered the kernels near the belfry, and stepped off a short distance to await developments. He figured that the pigeons would eat of the corn, and, becoming beastly drunk, would fall an easy prey.

Within a few moments the birds caught on to the tempting feast spread out before them on the ground, and, describing graceful curves as they swooped down from the belfry, settled to the job of eating the corn.

The officer watched with an approving smile. Every moment he expected to see those pigeons begin to reel and stagger, and then topple over with their feet stuck up into the atmosphere.

But that was not to be. The pigeons ate calmly of the corn, but without any boisterous manifestations of hilarity such as usually accompany a first-class drunk, and when the last kernel was consumed, they looked solemnly at each other, and then at Spangle, and, unfolding their pinions, soared away for the belfry in a perfectly straight line, omitting the curves and flourishes which had marked their descent. As for Officer Spangle, he stood rooted to the spot for several minutes, lost in wonder. Finally he roused himself, and, muttering a few forcible words in Arabic, moved off down the street, but not unobserved, as he thought. The story was told about police headquarters today, and Spangle will probably have to spend many more quarters before he can finally drown the tale of his adventures.

THE MINERS' STATEMENT

Received Today by The Star.

REGARDING CAPE NOME REPORTS

Purser Shaw of the Alliance Says Gold Exists—Herald Correspondent Doubtful.

The following communication, signed by 28 miners who came down from St. Michaels and Cape Nome on the steamer Alliance yesterday, was sent to the Star office this afternoon, and is published by request of the signers. They declare that gross misrepresentations are being made concerning the gold deposits at Cape Nome.

Seattle, Wash., July 15.

To the Public.—We, the undersigned, who came down from St. Michael as passengers upon the steamer Alliance, wish to voice our emphatic protest against the mendacious stories published yesterday by certain Seattle newspapers regarding the alleged richness of the gold discoveries at Cape Nome. The reports are exaggerated in every particular. The so-called Associated Press reports sent down and published, are untruthful. No such remarkable gold discoveries as are reported, were made prior to our departure from St. Michaels. If such had been made we would not have come down here. The reports have evidently been started by newspaper correspondents and others who have secured titles to claims at Cape Nome, and are endeavoring to create a demand for the same.

The Seattle Star is the only newspaper in Seattle that has given an accurate and unbiased account of the Cape Nome diggings. Its statements yesterday were fair and correct in every particular.

A Roast for Newspapers.

There are thousands of starving men in the Yukon country today who are cursing sensational newspapers published in Seattle and elsewhere, for having induced them to leave their homes and good jobs and go up into the frozen north to waste their money and lose their health.

Again, we protest with all of our power, against such mendacity of statement as has been revealed in recent publications concerning Cape Nome. If there is enough gold there to pay for mining ultimately, the present conditions make effective work impossible. There is no fuel in the region, and thousands of tons of coal and thousands of cords of wood must be transported there in ships in order to make the place habitable through the winter time for any considerable body of miners.

Believes There Is Plenty of Gold.

Purser Shaw, of the steamer Alliance, which arrived in port from St. Michael yesterday morning, believes that there is gold in paying quantities in the Cape Nome district.

He has traveled extensively along the Alaskan coast for five years, and has become quite conversant with the conditions up there.

On the last trip north of the Alliance he was in St. Michael for several weeks, and as a result of his observations and investigations, he thinks that the reported gold strikes are no fakes.

To a Star reporter this morning, he said: "I believe the Roanoke's passengers will bring down a more favorable report of the new goldfields than that of the people on our boat. There is gold in the Cape Nome district—lots of it; but getting it out is another matter. I can't say I would advise anyone to go in at present, as the good ground is pretty well staked, and the lack of fuel will make the conditions there very bad indeed.

"D. S. Lane, who speaks so favorably of Cape Nome, is, I believe, a square man.

"I don't think he exaggerated his story of the new diggings at all. The Roanoke, according to my reckoning, should reach Seattle this evening or early tomorrow morning."

An Opposite Opinion Expressed.

C. H. Rogers, a correspondent of the New York Herald in Dawson, who came down on the Alliance, does not look with favor on the new gold fields. He says he spent two weeks at St. Michael, and after careful inquiry arrived at the conclusion that Cape Nome gold reports had been grossly exaggerated. For this reason, he says, he abandoned an intended trip to the district, and induced many of his companions also to give the new discovery a wide berth.

HAS TROUBLES OF HIS OWN

Another Charge Against Attorney J. W. Corson.

J. W. Corson, of jury bribery notoriety, is again in trouble. While his disbarment on the charge of jury bribing is still pending, Calvin H. Hagan, comes into the superior court and asks that he be disbarred on still another charge. This time he is accused of appropriating money secured for a client.

The affidavit of Hagan, filed yesterday, alleges that on April 4 Corson secured a judgment against King county in favor of Charles E. Niblock, who is represented by Hagan & Hagan, in a suit now pending. The amount of the judgment was for $39.60. The next day Corson secured a certified transcript of the docket in the case, for which he paid 35 cents. This transcript he presented to the county auditor and received a warrant for the whole amount, $39.95. This warrant was sold to some person unknown to the applicant, and the whole, or a large part of its face value secured. This was appropriated to his own use by Corson, and when Wm. E. Hagan, the other member of the firm of Hagan & Hagan, suggested that he would go up and secure the money on the judgment, Corson put him off, saying it would be necessary for him, Corson, to sign the docket, and that he would attend to the matter. Finally, on June 28, he admitted having secured the money and spent it for his own use, but promised to repay the money soon.

On the strength of this affidavit, Calvin H. Hagan asks, through his attorney, L. T. Turner, that Corson be disbarred from practice.

Judge Riddle was seen today in regard to whether this charge would come under the jury bribery commission, and he gave it as his opinion that it would not. The duties assigned to them were to investigate certain specific charges, and this being an entirely new case, would not be taken up by them unless specifically referred.

CLEVELAND IS NOT YET A PROFESSOR

PRINCETON, N. J., July 15.—The report that President Cleveland has accepted a professorship of Princeton was pronounced untrue today. One of Princeton's leading professors said to a correspondent last night. "It is true that a chair of politics will be established next fall but the selection of the first incumbent has not yet been decided on. The report that Mr. Cleveland has been decided on is untrue, as no selection will be made until the meeting of the trustees in September."

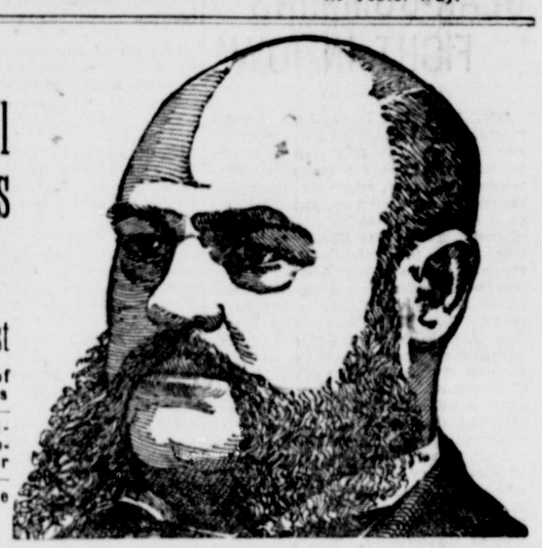
The Glory of Man Is His Strength—The Ambition of Woman Is Her Beauty—Both Can Be Acquired.



"He Cured Me Of Deafness."

"My deafness came on about six years ago, with bad ringing noises in the head, which troubled me greatly in conversation. I had to ask people to raise their voices when speaking to me, and around the table I could only hear the sound of voices, but could not catch a word. My hearing rapidly improved under Dr. Reeves' treatment. I now hear good and the ringing noises have entirely stopped."

"He Saved My Eyes."

"My eyes were so bad I had to stop reading entirely. The dizziness, the blurring and pain around the eyes made me fear total blindness. Dr. Reeves' mastery over diseases of the eyes is certainly wonderful. I can now see good, and, best of all, can read with comfort. I was cured in a short time, while other doctors tampered with my eyes for the past six years."

"He Cured My Stomach."

"Before I consulted Dr. Reeves my stomach was very bad. The severe pains, belching, bloating and sour risings were awful. I lost 40 pounds in less than a year. I thank God it was my fortune to go to this great doctor, who cured me."

"He Cured Me Of Catarrh."

"I had catarrh for a long time. It affected my head and throat and there were growths in my nose. Dr. Reeves' new treatment is just splendid. I never tried anything that did me so much good. I am recommending it to all my friends."
