Gets $8,140.00 In Big Drive

The final count on Tuesday night totaled $8,140.00, which has been subscribed towards the Vermilion Chamber of Commerce. Towns, wards and rural communities throughout the Parish were splendidly represented in the final counting.

Kaplan made a special showing in the campaign for funds.

The expanding of the organization, which has been under the direction of Secretary J. Boatner Carter, of the Louisiana Commercial Secretaries Association, will continue throughout the New Year until Vermilion is permanently financed and well organized.

At this writing the Chamber of Commerce has 331 members, and should have many more. There are, of course, many coming in in every days mail, and soon the membership will be very much larger.

Secretary Carter Much Pleased

"It is mighty pleasing to me," said J. Boatner Carter, Secretary-Treasurer of the Louisiana Commercial Secretaries Association, Wednesday before leaving for his home for the holidays at Ruston, "to have been in Vermilion. I have never yet been in a community where such comradship has been displayed."

"Yes, the business men deserve congratulations for the way they have put forward an effort to alleviate business conditions, and the folks who have responded to the appeal of the business men are true Vermilionites. The ladies, too, deserve their share of praise, especially for the art and talent displayed in producing the Automobile Parade of December 7th. This parade, in my opinion, would do credit to any city anywhere—my only regret is that we did not have a float depicting rice and orange blossoms.

"I don't believe a word about this talk about Vermilion being backward—there is a future and it will be what we make it, and I believe Vermilion Parish folks will band themselves together for their own salvation and prosperity—to say nothing of the happiness that will follow."

Mr. Carter left Wednesday and hopes to be able to return at an early date to aid in the good work begun by the Vermilion Parish folks. Other appointments will possibly retard his active attention at Abbeville.

TO THE CITIZENS OF ABBEVILLE

Greeting:

As we are ending the year of Our Lord 1921, and about to enter a New Year, I feel it a duty to extend to one and all my sincere expressions of good wishes.

It is true we have all felt the general depression, which was discouraging, but the manhood and fortitude so characteristic to the Abbevillians, brought about the adjustment of all things and unquestionably established the confidence necessary to begin a New Year with a spirit, which will, with the help of God, overcome all obstacles and carry all our affairs to a successful issue.

Let us forget all things tending to becloud our minds, spirit and everything else.

Let us all unite in common fellowship, and as a [illegible] sincerely pray Divine [illegible] us during 1922 as the extent of forgetting all troubles and tribulations by living in a sunshine of sincere neighborly love and friendship—all striving as one man to bring success and happiness in our midst and make our little city greater and even better.

As your Chief Executive, my prayer is that you apply the "ties that bind", and wish each and every one of you God's choicest blessing, a most Merry Christmas, and the Happy and Prosperous 1922, which without exception you are deserving.

Very sincerely,
ROM. P. LEBLANC,
Mayor.

American Legion Holds Banquet

At last Thursday night's banquet the American Legion Post No. 29, held at the Palms Hotel, good cheer, oratory, committee reports, election of officers and plans for an even stronger organization were completed. Retiring Post Commander Rene Trahan, after conducting the election of officers, retired in favor of the newly elected Post Commander, W. E. Montague.

Mr. Trahan retired with proper words of thanks and appreciation to his co-workers for their co-operation in the past year. Mr. Montague most eloquently expressed his gratitude at being elected as head of the Legion and immediately came down to business in hand—that of doubling the membership.

J. Boatner Carter, Secretary of the Louisiana Commercial Secretaries Association, of Ruston, was introduced as first speaker. The theme being citizenship, pointing out to the members of the Legion the weighty responsibilities as Americans and future directors and leaders in community and business affairs in Vermilion.

Mayor Rom P. LeBlanc, of this city, was the next speaker and in his eloquent and inimitable manner aroused even greater spirit of Americanism in the breast of his hearers.

There were other speakers who delved into history and entertained in jovial manner. Songs, a happy get-together and business made a most complete affair.

Farm Bureau Organization

BY HARRY P. KAPP,
Representative of the American Farm Bureau Federation for Louisiana, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Mississippi.

The origin of the Farm Bureau is unique. It started by accident rather than purpose. Ten years ago last March, a chamber of commerce in central New York appointed a committee to carry on agricultural activities with the farmers surrounding the town. This committee was termed the Farm Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce. The members happened to be hustling, progressive men. They began to do collective work among the farmers and built up a live, effective organization that produced results and attracted attention from other sections of the state. In this manner the Farm Bureau was born and named.

SPREADS RAPIDLY

From the beginning the Farm Bureau profited by the experiences obtained in other farm organizations. It avoided the mistakes of the past. It based its endeavors on broad educational lines. The farmers were urged to build a constructive, educational, business organization that would strengthen agricultural effort and care for agricultural needs. It developed slowly for the first few years. It had no paid organizers, no general plan. The Farm Bureau is dependant wholly on the progressive conservative business-like farmer for its advancement.

But as the ability of the Farm Bureau to get results become more and more apparent, it gained momentum, and within the last four years it has spread from Canada to the Gulf. There is now a Farm Bureau organization in every state of the United States except two. It has more than one and a half million members. For the first time in the history of American agriculture there is a nation-wide organization of farmers with a common cause and working along common lines through a central organization.

HOW ORGANIZED

The basic strength of the Farm Bureau is the community organization. Farmers are brought together and are urged to take care of the home problems first. Each community, or school district begins to study its own needs. The important fact is stressed that no individual or community can hope to succeed alone. There must be collective effort. Hence communities are brought together and parish farm bureaus formed. This gives cohesive and correlated strength.

But in the field of wider activities it becomes necessary to bring the Parish Farm Bureau under a general organization. Hence the Louisiana Farm Bureau Federation, composed of parish farm bureaus, comes into existence as the functioning body for the whole state. The State Farm Bureau Federation becomes a member of the American Farm Bureau Federation, the national organization, and the chain is complete. The farmer in the remote community, through the community, parish and state organization is at once in touch with and has voice in promoting agricultural welfare from any and all standpoints.

WHO MAY BECOME MEMBERS.

The Farm Bureau is purely a farmers' organization. Only those who are actual, bonafide farmers may become members. Others who are interested in promoting agricultural welfare and progress may become honorary members. They may engage in discussions but shall not hold office or be permitted to vote. The Farm Bureau is organized, financed and controlled by the farmers themselves.
