Thinng Fruit.

It seems to require a good deal of nerve to thin fruit as it should be. And yet it pays well to do it. The Farmer's Guide says:

The timely and proper thinning of the fruit on the orchard trees is a matter which should receive far more attention than it does. The peach men in Michigan, Delaware and Georgia and the orange and prune men of the western coast are well posted on the important of this matter, but the majority of fruit raisers other than these named pay little or no attention to it. In any case when the apple or plum tree sets too full of fruit and the same is not thinned out by frost or insect or by natural means then the tree should be attended to. Such crops of fruit allowed to mature are always of inferior quality and undersized and often unsalable, while the bearing of such a crop is a most fearful drain upon the vitality of the tree. Man never interferes with the operation of natural law with more benefit to himself and his orchard trees than when he thins out two-thirds of such crop of fruit. It must not be understood, however, that this principle can properly be applied to large families of children.

Big Cotton Gin at Eunice.

The New Iberia Milling and Development company have completed arrangements for the erection of a four gin cotton plant to be put up at Eunice immediately. The plant will be equipped with the "round-top bale system" and will be one of the most complete in the state. A number of local capitalists are interested in this new enterprise and are confident of its success as a business venture.

Kinshu Rice a Failure.

About three years ago the government distributed a lot of Kinshu rice among the farmers of the Atlantic coast to be used as seed and a number of the farmers of North Carolina experimented with the new variety to the extent of planting an acre or two on their land with the grain. The results of these first small plantings were gratifying in the extreme. The new seed yielded much more per acre than the famous Carolina seed and also exceeded it in weight. Again, the Kinshu had the advantage in milling, breaking not more than from two to four per cent., yielding practically a head rice.

It was noticed from these experiments that the Kinshu was about two weeks later in maturing than the Carolina, planted at the same time, about March or April. It was evident that the temperature was much higher than disappointing, however, The following year, as the different plantings landed from the plant, this year, the farmers, probably by the heavier, sufficient test. Somewhat March and April when the June. Then a strange of the rice meantime. The result was more than disappointing, however, the middle of the rice bird season the June planting came into the two weeks before the Carolina planted at the same time. simply feasted upon it and rapid fire guns displayed at exposition, if in position, usual supply of ten penny are used in place of shot rice bird, could not protect field of Kinshu rice little pests.

This is another new long time before the this coast try any further rices. They will justly celebrated which by intuition, its part, knows exactly the migratory rice in due time to by millions of a result of its superior this heathen rice, as common sense enough to its fine large some few trials about July 1st.

Aids

Lemon a Manicure Aid.

"Of all the aids to amateur manicuring," said a woman, "none is more valuable than a bit of lemon. I always keep a morsel on my toilet table and find it indispensable. Unlike any other acid, it bleaches without hurting the skin, as it brings out any native rosiness in the nails without hardening or coarsening them. Scrubbing and soap and hot water and final polish are all very well; for truly dainty finger tips apply your lemon. I know a number of estimable women who candidly confess that they find it hard to keep their hands clean—particularly in cold weather. Let them try the magic that lies in a bit of lemon and they'll have no further trouble."

Recipe For a Bolero.

The woman with sartorial aspirations and slender means should set about making light and dainty boleros for herself. They will carry her over many a tight place during the summer months, and are quite easy to make. One in Irish lace or guipure, for instance, should be cut to reach just below the figure, not quite meeting in front, and hollowed out at the neck; the pattern of the lace may be beautified by being traced in gold or silver thread. Another might be made in white silk, over which a light tracery of flowers could be worked in delicate tones of silk. These boleros are costly to buy, but clever fingers can turn out very attractive ones at home.

Harmony in Dress.

Bovdoir Chat.

The little Queen of Holland's favorite color is green.

Princess Louise is at the head of a league of Rainy Daisies in Bavaria. This royal favor should give the short skirt a long swing.

Letters written by Queen Victoria are already increasing in value in London, and the other day a brief three-line note of hers, written in her own hand, sold for $1000.

There are hints from Paris of the return of the once fashionable fervonière—a jewel to be worn on the forehead, and held in place either by a velvet band or a fillet of gold.

Mme. La Marechale, who recently died in Paris at seventy-nine years of age, was the widow of Marechal Neil, one of Napoleon III.'s ministers of New York Press.
