A smile costs no more than a frown—and looks much better.

Look out for counterfeits! See that you get the genuine Salvation Oil! Do not let the dealer sell you something "just as good," but insist upon getting the genuine with the Bull's Head trade-mark on the wrapper.

Every man is a hypocrite who prays one way and lives another.

It is because persons who once try Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, always buy it again, that its sales have become so enormous. The success of this great remedy in curing cold, cough, croup and sore throat is simply marvelous.

There are two ways of telling a goose—by its gabble and its walk.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 50c and $1 bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

Invitations to the White House Receptions. The "Pusher" In Washington Society. How He Succeeds by the Aid of Adamantine Cheek.—A Nice Souvenir.

[Special Correspondence.]

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—The White House is now the center of attraction in the social world. It is the sun of the social system of the capital. All eyes are turned toward the executive mansion, and unhappy the persons of social pretensions who have no invitations to the president's receptions. It is at these receptions that one meets everybody worth meeting. It is in the east room and the corridor of the old house that one may touch elbows with the hundreds of men of fame and women of distinction who compose the official circle of the American capital. As may be easily supposed, there is great anxiety to secure these invitations. One of the most difficult tasks which the president's grand chamberlain has to perform is the making out of this list of guests at the annual receptions.

I suppose you knew the president had a grand chamberlain? At any rate that is the most important part of his official duties. In any country but this he would be called a chamberlain, too, but in our simple republic, where we must make a pretense of simplicity and avoidance of all appearance of imitation of foreign customs, we call him a commissioner of public buildings and grounds. Nominally he has charge of the big structures in which Uncle Sam houses his great executive machine at the capitol, the grounds round about them and the Washington monument. These things take little of his time. It is as functionary in chief to the president of the United States that he finds his most exacting and important employment.

The Wily Pusher.

The present grand chamberlain is Colonel Wilson of the army. He knows his business. Washington society is an open book to him. He is familiar with every face of importance, masculine or feminine. He knows the "pushers" as well as any man in town, and by long experience has learned how to deal with them gently, but effectually. The "pusher," you should know, is distinctively a Washington institution. It is a term conveniently used for designation of the man or woman—generally a woman—who has no official or other claim to social recognition and yet insists upon getting it. He or she is a person who deliberately and persistently "pushes" in where Desire leads, but Right does not open the door.

The "pusher" has an easy time of it at the public receptions given by the ladies of the cabinet and the wives of senators. There the "pusher" needs no card of invitation and may walk in with head high and partake of the best that is offered. By a little manipulation of a diplomatic sort he or she—if I did not desire to avoid ungallantry I would drop the "he" altogether—may even have the pleasure of seeing his or her name in the newspapers in the list of guests.

Where the Most Fun Lies.

The wife of the chief of a division, or of a mere clerk, or of a tradesman, for that matter, finds the "afternoons" of the cabinet and social circles easy to conquer. But the card receptions at the White House are not so speedily mastered. There is a way of doing it which has been employed, but it is not a satisfactory method. It is more or less hazardous and likely to lead to annoyance. This is by going without an invitation. Of course it is not necessary to show cards of invitation at the White House door. A rule requiring an exhibition of tickets, just like a theater, would be awfully awful bad form. And yet there have at various times been serious discussions as to the advisability of adopting such a rule.

At every card reception in the executive mansion there are hundreds of people who come without cards. They simply walk in at the front door and make themselves at home. They do not know many people there, but this makes little difference. Without acquaintance they can have almost as good a time as with it. After all, the most fun at a White House reception consists of watching the diplomats in their uniforms and court outfits, of having near views of great men and women, of close inspection of the gowns and persons of distinguished and decollete ladies from all parts of the world, and in these innocent amusements "the pusher" who has pushed in may participate as freely as the most important of the invited guests.

THE PRESIDENT'S RECEPTION.

The Coveted Card.

But if possible even the "pushers" like to go to the White House by invitation, and hence Colonel Wilson, the president's chamberlain, is for some weeks in the very center of their fire. They bring all sorts of pressure to bear upon him and play all the little games known to social intrigue; they cajole, bluff, scheme, beg, entreat; they invite the colonel to dinner; they call on his wife; they make friends with his servants—anything or everything to obtain possession of one of the coveted cards, 4½ by 6 inches square, with the arms of the United States embossed in gilt at the top and below that this engraved invitation:

The President and Mrs. Cleveland request the pleasure of the company of Mr. Robert Graves and Ladies on Thursday evenings, Jan. 11 and 25, Saturday evening,
Feb. 3, and Tuesday evening, Feb. 6,
from 9 to 11 o'clock,
1894.

Jan. 11—To meet the diplomatic corps.
Jan. 25—Reception to the congress and the judiciary.
Feb. 3—To meet the officers of the army and navy and marine corps.
Feb. 6—The public reception.

This card makes a nice souvenir for the socially ambitious to display in their parlors. But not many of the "pushers" are able to get hold of it. Colonel Wilson knows where to draw the line. Appeals from his decision are often made to the president himself, to Private Secretary Thurber, and even members of the cabinet are besieged to lend their influence, as if a cabinet adviser had some right to exert pressure upon the president concerning the persons whom he is to invite to his house. These pleas always meet with the response "Colonel Wilson has entire charge of that matter. You will have to see him."

A Tremendous Crush.

It is well that Grand Chamberlain Wilson knows how to say no. Every one in town who is anybody wants to go to one or more of these great receptions at the White House. The first one on the programme—that in honor of the diplomatic corps—is most popular. The curiosity to see the diplomats never abates in Washington. They are by long odds the most picturesque show in this town. At the levee in their honor last Thursday night there was a tremendous crush. It is estimated that 3,000 people entered the White House doors that night. In the corridors, and especially in the east room, the crowding was terrific. It was almost impossible to move. The people were packed as tight almost as the traditional Smyrna figs in their little box. Despite the opening of windows at the top—the White House has no other means of ventilation—the air was like that in an oven where there is baking meat.

THE ARMY OFFICERS' WALK.

Who are the people who make up these 3,000? Who are the fortunate ones who do not have to "push" for invitations, but get them as a matter of official right? First, the diplomatic corps. Of these, counting embassadors, ministers, secretaries, attaches and their wives and daughters, there are about 400 persons. Nearly all of them were on hand Thursday night. They were resplendent in their court uniforms and their gayest gowns. Then came congress. As you know, there are more than 400 senators and representatives. Probably two thirds of them were present. Nearly every one was accompanied by one or more ladies. A thousand persons altogether were added to the throng from the congressional circle.

The Press Gets There, as Usual.

The judiciary is not so very extensive, but still made quite a showing. The justices of the supreme court, the court of claims and the local courts, with their families, added nearly a hundred persons to the throng. The army, navy and marine corps are a host in themselves. To see our army on the plains or our navy in a roadstead, you would not think it very extensive, but see the gallant officers walking to the White House in squads and battalions, and in the famous old mansion note the profusion of gold braid, of jaunty epaulets, the forest of dangling swords, and you will perhaps for the first time in your life appreciate the magnitude of these three separate corps of our national defenders. When you see the many handsome wives of these officers, gay, apropos, up to date, you will perceive why the army and navy social circle is so much sought after in Washington.

Nor will it do to overlook the newspaper contingent. There are 175 newspaper correspondents at this capital besides the representatives of the local press. All these are invited, and nearly all of them, with their wives, daughters and sisters, were in attendance on the diplomatic reception. The remainder of the 3,000 guests were heads of bureaus and of minor departments of the government, members of scientific institutions, society people who have no official rank and a contingent of uninvited "pushers" rather larger than usual.

Facts About Hypnotism.

[Special Correspondence.]

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—According to all the modern authorities, hypnotism is the science of the sleeplike state which is produced by some special influence upon the nervous system. This state may be induced in not only human beings, but in a vast number of animals, high and low. Professor Czermak has hypnotized pigeons, Dr. Beard chickens and ducks, Professor Buckland cats and Dr. Bayliss lobsters, so that they lost not only the power of locomotion, but of all the voluntary muscles. Besides these similar experiments have been successfully performed upon monkeys, dogs, horses, cows, sheep, serpents and alligators. Professor Bernheim of the School of Nancy, France, asserts that any and all animals possessing a moderately developed nervous system can be hypnotized, and that the only difficulty is to ascertain the conditions under which a particular nervous system is to be influenced in a special manner.

An interesting fact to be drawn from these experiments upon the lower animals is that they strongly confirm the popular beliefs that serpents charm birds, weasels mesmerize rats, the larger carnivora fascinate many of their prey, and that the dreaded rattlesnake exercises a similar influence upon many women and children if not upon men.

To produce this sleeplike state in human beings any number of methods are employed. Every subject seems a law unto himself in this regard, no two cases ever being exactly alike. All methods agree upon one point—viz, having the subject rivet his attention upon some particular object and relinquish all thought as far as can be done.

In general it may be stated that the patient either sits, kneels, reclines or lies down. His eyes are fixed upon an object, preferably bright, just above the normal plane of vision. His mind is directed exclusively to the wish to fall asleep.

Beyond these three conditions it is found that the hypnotizing process is hindered or favored by external circumstances. Twilight or low burning lamps, the presence of flowers, fruits and perfumes, silence or else soft or distant music, comfortable furniture and upholstery and agreeable company are very favorable.

As to who can be treated in this manner the answer is, Almost everybody. The easiest are hysterics, the hardest are men with well trained intellects, or else, strange to say, idiots. Children and youths are much easier than adults; women a trifle easier than men. Blonds are more difficult than brunettes; people from cold than those from warm climates. There is no difference between strong and weak people unless the weakness comes from hysteria or hysterical proclivities.

Wash Out Your Mouth.

A leading New York paper calls attention to an antiseptic treatment of the mouth as a preventive of disease. Inquisitive physicians have found secreted in the folds of the mucous membrane of the mouth the microbes of pneumonia, measles, scarlet fever and diphtheria, and say that more pathogenic germs can be found there than in any other part of the body, and to prevent their entering the system a germ-destroying dentrifice should be constantly employed, especially after eating. M. Funa of Hamburg recommends finely powdered chlorate of potash as a more effective germicide than the many tooth powders and mouth washes sold by the druggists, but still other medical correspondents think that chlorate of soda is much better, as it has all the therapeutical properties of chlorate of potash, is much more soluble and a great deal less poisonous. Few people know, what is nevertheless a fact, that the chlorate of potash, especially with children, is liable to cause serious gastric trouble.

You can't tell by the blossoms which of the apples will be wormy.

An Unseen Enemy

Is more to be dreaded than an open and visible one. That subtile and lurking foe, which under the generic name of malaria manifests itself, when it clutches us in its tenacious grasp, in the various forms of chills and fever, bilious remittent, dumb ague or ague cake, can only be effectually guarded against by fortifying the system against its insidious attacks with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a thorough antidote to the poison of miasma in the system, and a safeguard against it thoroughly to be relied upon. In the event of a malarious attack, avoid poisoning your system with quinine, and use instead this wholesome remedy, unobjectionable in taste and far more efficacious than any drug. Use the Bitters for dyspepsia, biliousness, constipation, kidney complaints and rheumatism.

Scrubbing a pig with soap will not take the love of mud out of his heart.

MILLIONS OF DOLLARS

Are annually lost because poor seed is planted. Now, when you sow you want to reap. For instance, A. M. Lamb, Penn., made $5,800 on ten acres of vegetables; R. Bey, Cal., cropped 1,213 bushels Salzer's onions per acre; Frank Close, Minn., 100 bushels of spring wheat from two acres; A. Hahn, Wis., 1,410 bushels potatoes per acre; Frank Winter, Montana, 216 bushels 8 pounds oats from one bushel planted. This is what Salzer calls reaping.

Do you want fine vegetables just twenty days ahead of your neighbors? If so, send $1 for Salzer's 35 packages earliest vegetable novelties (sufficient for a family).

If You Will Cut This Out and Send It With 6c postage to the John A. Salzer Seed Co., La Crosse, Wis., you will receive their mammoth catalogue and a trial package of "Get There, Eli," the sixteen-day radish. W.

R. V. PIERCE, M. D., Buffalo, N. Y.:
Dear Sir—Two years ago I was pale and emaciated, food fermented in my stomach. A physician pronounced my case "Catarrh of the Stomach," but he could not help me. I lived a month without solid food and when I tried to eat I would vomit. At this time I began taking Doctor Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, and in two weeks I was decidedly better. I am now in good health, and never felt better in my life. I have a better color, eat more, and have no distress after eating—having gained thirteen pounds since I began taking them.

Among the crown jewels of England in the Tower of London is kept the "coronation spoon." It dates from the time of Edward the Confessor, 1066. It is of pure gold, richly set with gems and is used to receive the consecrated oil used at the coronation. It is sometimes called the "anointing spoon."

Henry's Cruelty.

During the reign of Henry VIII 71,400 persons were legally executed in England, the larger portion of whom were guilty of no offense worse than misdemeanor. In one year 300 starving beggars were hanged for asking alms.

MEDICAL writers claim that the successful remedy for nasal catarrh must be non-irritating, easy of application, and one that will reach the remote cores and ulcerated surfaces. The history of the efforts to treat catarrh is proof positive that only one remedy has completely met these conditions, and that is Ely's Cream Balm. This safe and pleasant remedy has mastered catarrh as nothing else has ever done, and both physicians and patients freely concede this fact.
