McCLELLAN ON THE SITUATION.

Prussians Repulsed With Great Loss.

Three Corps of the French Army Certain to Form a Junction.

A View of Matters from a Prussian Standpoint.

Prussians Going Home.

WASHINGTON, August 18.—A large number of applications for passports at the department of state are for Germans proposing to return to Prussia to enter the army.

Opinion of a Great General.

NEW YORK, August 18.—The tide has turned in favor of France, and the steady successes of the Prussian army have ended. After a careful study of the telegrams, public and private, General McClellan to-night expressed his decided opinion that the situation was very favorable for the French. He considered it certain that Bazine has succeeded not only in connecting his lines with McMahon, but also in so manoeuvring his forces that he threatens the Prussian army in flank and rear. The Prussians must now fight a superior force. In their retreat, a strong force can be thrown in the rear to hold the passages of the Vosges, and if defeated in the coming battle, they will be little less than annihilated. It is not expected that the decisive battle will be fought for a week or ten days. That time is to be spent in manoeuvring. Now that the Prussians have been so badly outgeneraled, they may retire beyond the Moselle without battle.

The Downfall of Bonaparte.

LONDON, August 18—Midnight.—We have it on high authority fresh from Paris that it is the universal conviction, there that the Napoleonic dynasty is ended. The empress having packed up and dispatched all her valuables, including pictures of inestimable price has left for England via Belgium.

It is believed that the emperor is also on his way to the same track. He does not return to Paris.

Prince Napoleon has fled to Italy with his family.

Prussian Official Report.

BERLIN, Thursday August 18.—The following official news has been made public in this city this morning:

PONT-A-MOUSSON, Wednesday evening—Gen. Alvensleben advanced yesterday with the Third corps toward the West side of Metz, on the line of the enemy's retreat toward Verdun. He encountered very severe fighting with the corps of Gen. de Cassaignac and L'Admirault and Frossard and Marshal Canrobert, and the Imperial guard. Gen. Alvensleben was sustained successfully by the Tenth army corps and by detachments of the Eighth and Ninth army corps commanded by Prince Frederick Charles. The enemy was driven in upon Metz in spite of his great superiority of forces after a severe combat of twelve hours.

The losses on both sides were very heavy, and the Prussian Generals Doding and Weith were killed, and Generals Pausch and Gruscher were severley wounded.

King William to-day sainted the troops on the field of battle, which has been gloriously maintained by the Prussian arms.

The Press already sees the forces of the French are gaining constantly, and the Prussians decreasing. The hour of complete victory for France is near at hand.

There is great activity on the fortifications of Paris. Thousands of men are at work putting the defences in better condition than they ever were.

No definite news can now be expected, for the armies are manoeuvring off the lines of railways and telegraphs, and where they are not cut they are absolutely controlled by the military.

An official dispatch from Marshal Bazine, just received, claims a great victory over Crown Prince Frederick Charles and Gen. Steinmetz, between Toulancourt and Vionville.

The information received from Verdun this (Thursday morning) reports a great battle in progress near Malatvie a point about one third of the way on the road from Metz to Verdun. Large numbers are reported wounded on both sides, but no particulars of the battle have as yet been received.

Generals Frossard and Battville are reported wounded.

Information of a reliable character has also been received in this city to the effect that a large body of Prussian troops have entered the town of Briey, in the department of the Moselle.

About fifteen French troops were engaged in the battles. The Prussian loss was very great, and is computed at 20,000 men. The French loss was comparatively small, owing to the aid afforded by the cannons of the adjacent fortresses.

The investment of Strasburg is so close that the French troops have entered that city and reinforced the garrison. Provisions have also been carried there without any attempt of their capture by the Prussians.

A postmaster of the French army has left there with a large amount of treasure, without any hindrance whatever.

It would seem that the Prussians have no siege guns there. They have given up the regular siege, having attacked Pfalzburg unsuccessfully.

The Prussians have retreated six kilometres to the valley of Derscumelin, to assure their communication with German.

It is pretty certain that the prince royal of Prussia was wounded in one of the battles around Metz.

The Prussian Plan.

HEADQRS., SECOND PRUSSIAN ARMY CORPS, FRIDAY AUG. 12.

Should the French not accept battle outside of Metz, two corps will be left to mask the fortress until the main body continue their march to Paris.

The Prussians have at least one million men advancing on French soil, and as many more in reserve. Among Germans, all talk of peace before the occupation of Paris, is laughed at.

HEADQUARTERS, Crown Prince, Friday, August 12.—We are daily advancing from village to village.

The Alsatian sympathies are altogether French; but the inhabitants are treated by the Germans kindly, except where the peasants commit hostilities. No compulsory military service is enforced; only their wagons for the wounded and are required and sales of provisions are compelled. Nothing is exacted but strict necessaries, and everything is paid for.

McMahon's corps is almost destroyed. No remnant has been found as the Crown Prince pushes steadily forward against the French right flank.
