From the Address of Democratic Congressmen

Let there be no dissensions about minor matters; no time lost in discussion of dead events; no manifestation of narrow or proscriptive feeling; no sacrifice of the cause to gratify personal ambition or resentment.

FOR CORONER,

IN Perry county, where the Radical majority usual reaches six or seven hundred votes, it is not expected, even by Republicans that Dan Munn's majority will exceed three hundred.

THE Democratic majority in Indiana by Congressional districts is 5,944; yet Radicalism has so Jerrymandered the State as to secure six of the eleven Congressmen. On the State ticket the average majority is nearly three thousand.

THE Democratic vote in Ohio, last year, was 228,841. The Democratic vote on the 11th instant was 204,979. Thus it will be seen that if all the Democrats who voted one year ago had voted on the 11th instant, the state would have gone Democratic by a majority of over 6,000 votes.

VOORHEES, of Indiana, is elected to Congress by over 1,300 this time. When he had over 700, the Radicals turned him out for the reason that Thad. Stephens snapped his fingers and said, "the time has come when one less vote here is important to the existence of the Republican party." Will they dismiss him again—or rather dismiss the decision of the people—as they did on that occasion? Voorhees is a powerful debater.

To compare Grant's administration with Johnson's, is to compare one era of Republican rule with another. To say that Grant spends less money than Johnson, is only another way of saying that Johnson spent more money than Grant, and as both Johnson and Grant spent only the appropriations of a Republican Congress, the comparison is nothing more nor less than a condemnation of Republican extravagance under Johnson.

THE PROSPECT FOR 1872.

According to our latest information the Democratic majority in Pennsylvania on the popular vote will not fall short of 5,000. "Thus," remarks the Cincinnati Enquirer, "of the four great States which voted on the 11th instant, Indiana and Pennsylvania went Democratic, and Ohio and Iowa Republican. Pennsylvania has twenty-six electoral votes and Indiana thirteen: total, thirty-nine. Ohio has twenty-one and Iowa eight; total, twenty-nine. If there had been a President elected, a majority of ten votes for the Democracy in the four states would have been recorded. Thus far this year the Democracy have succeeded in the following States: Connecticut, Oregon, Indiana and Pennsylvania. There is little doubt that we shall add to the list in November, New York and New Jersey. California is reliably Democratic. Of the border States we have carried Kentucky, and shall carry Missouri, Delaware and Maryland. North Carolina and Tennesse, in the South, we have swept by an immense majority. In 1870 the whole South, with possible exceptions of Florida and South Carolina, where the negro votes are two to one to the white, will be Democratic. This Southern electoral vote, added to our Democratic States at the North, will elect a Democratic President."

BUCHANAN AND GRANT.

The expenses of the government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1860 under Buchanan, amounted to $63,025,789,34, while the administration of Mr. Grant for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1870, amounted to but $65,651,783,45.

We take the above paragraph from the Golcanda Herald. If the editor is not guilty of willful misrepresentation in stating the expenditures of Grant's administration, his ignorance in the premises is scarcely excusable.

Four years after the termination of the war, in the first fiscal year of our model President's administration, there were expended $441,225,477, an amount greater by $51,344,201 than was expended during the whole of President Buchanan's and the last year of President Pierce's term. In one single fiscal year the administration of this retrenchment party has ingeniously managed to relieve the treasury of upwards of $51,000,000 more than was expended for all purposes during five years of Democratic administration, notwithstanding there occurred in that time a military expedition of force against the Mormons which cost several millions of dollars.

Again:

"The annual cost, to each individual, of running the government during the Democratic administration of Jackson, Van Buren, Polk, Pierce and Buchanan, including the expense of the Mexican war, was $1 75. What cost each individual $1 75 under Polk, cost $4 76 under Grant. Without the public debt, the cost of running the government is twice as great to each individual under Grant as it was under Buchanan."

Another exhibit of facts shows that, in 1869, foreign vessels carried 60 per cent. of imports, and 65 per cent. of the exports of the country; and in 1867 they carried 67 per cent of the imports and 62 per cent of the exports. In 1869 these vessels did about 15 per cent of the business, and the rest was carried in American bottoms.

So much for the economical, matchless and glorious administration of President Grant.

Alas, France!

Surrender of Metz.

[New York Herald's special.]

LONDON, Oct. 27.—Your special correspondent at Ostend telegraphs that the statement received from Metz Le Haute to the effect that upon receiving a formal declaration signed by the Empress that she was unwilling to sign a treaty involving a cession of the French territory or to be a party to any scheme involving a probable outbreak of a civil war in France, Bazaine exclaimed that he would take all necessary responsibility himself. This was Wednesday night. Bazaine immediately sent a parliamentaire through his lines to Prince Frederick Charles, at Pont-a-Mousson. The Prince came up during the night to the Chateau de Frescoty, where early this morning, stipulations were signed for the surrender of the army of Bazaine and the fortress of Metz.

The report adds that Gen. De Coffinieres, Commandant of the garrison of Metz, entered a written protest against the surrender, declaring he was abundantly able to protract the defense into the winter. That the recent defeats of the Germans had made it practically impossible to imperil the possession of the place, and that provisions were in abundance, both for the army and populace. Since the 15th of October the inhabitants had received daily rations of 4,000 grammes bread for adults, 200 grammes bread for children, and 100 grammes for infants.

German Losses in the Siege.

A correspondent at Ostend says the total loss of the army of Prince Frederick Charles from the beginning of the siege is estimated at 45,000 men by battle and disease. The army of Frederick Charles consisted on the 20th of October of the First, Second, Third, Seventh, Eighth, Ninth, and Tenth army corps, with two divisions of Landwehr attached to the Ninth army corps, making a total of 140,000, artillery and cavalry included.

The surrender of Bazine is stated to have been made upon a full understanding with the Prussian government that the occupation of Metz and Strasbourg shall be accepted as an adequate basis for withdrawing the German armies from France and concluding peace.

The Marshal a Traitor.

The Republicans in London loudly declare that the Marshal is a traitor, and that he concerted his action with Prince Napoleon, the Empress and King William and that the Government at Paris at Tours will repudiate any peace proposed or signed by him.

In spite of the rumors about the surrender of Metz the French loan has advanced in price all day. M. Lourier is arranging for the expenditure of a large amount of the loan for the purchase of arms at Birmingham.

Particulars of the Surrender.

[Tribune Special.]

The special correspondent of the Tribune, before Metz, telegraphs on the 20th: Five days ago General Coffinierre, commandant of the City and Fortress of Metz, informed Marshal Bazaine, commanding encamped outside, that he could supply no more provisions, and that they must shift for themselves, whereupon Bazaine ordered his pickets in, and tacitly allowed his men to desert in groups of a dozen or two, who were accepted by the Prussian outposts as prisoners. Larger bodies were refused. On the afternoon of the 24th trustworthy information came from Metz by a civilian spy that an outbreak en masse would be made during the night towards Gravelotte, as Bazaine's offer to capitulate with his army alone had been repeatedly peremptorily refused. The outbreak was to be made without hope of saving any portion of the organized troops, but simply to enable those surplus mouths to get behind the German lines and force the Germans to take them prisoners, whereby the fortress might hold out a little longer with a small garrison. But at 7 o'clock in the evening Bazaine had succeeded in convincing General Coffinerre that the inevitable bloodshed consequent on such an attempt would be too dear a price to be paid for a few days prolongation of resistance. A messenger was sent to Prince Frederick Charles intimating the intention in the fortress to capitulate. This was the first proposition ever made including the fortress and outside army. Accordingly, the Prussian troops which had been massed silently toward Gravelotte received orders to retire to their camps.

At one o'clock yesterday afternoon General Changarnier arrived and spent an hour with the Prince and departed much disturbed, excusing some absent-mindedness of his own, saying, "no wonder the Prince was so severe." By the arrangement of this meeting General Stichle, Colonel Von Herzanig, Chief-of-Staff, and the Quartermaster-General of the Prince's army, rode to Fescoy Chateau, three miles south of Metz, and just within the Prussian lines, whither the two French commanders, with Arombest, the second in command in the fortress, had been brought by a Prussian field postchaise. The meeting lasted from 5 to 7 o'clock in the evening, and resulted only at parting in an agreement that the disputed points would be discussed again at noon to-day. Matters, however, were so advanced that the second corps received orders to march for Paris yesterday noon, and started early in the evening. Other troops were concentrated at the nearest attainable points to Metz last night to prevent a disorganization en masse. Bazaine has lost the means of prolonging negotiations. All the way from Mars la Tours to Courcelles, and from Ivay to Mezieres all the village quarters were lit up, and all the bivouac fires burning at 2 o'clock, a.m. Moving masses covered the roads and fields. No disturbance occurred. None of the troops suspected the truth.

State Lodge of Instruction, and General Grand Convention.

The Good Templars of Southern Illinois are to hold a Grand State Lodge of Instruction, and General Grand Convention, at Vandalia, commencing Thursday evening November 10, 1870, and closing the evening of the 12th. A splendid demonstration is being arranged for. The unwritten work of the Order will be gone through with, and such other business transacted as will redound to the best interests of the Order of Good Templars, and the cause of Temperance. Able speakers, excellent music, free hospitality for delegates, and reduced fares on the Illinois Central, and the St. Louis Vandalia and Terre Haute railroads, all have been arranged for. Every Lodge will elect 4 delegates. Ancient Good Templars are invited, and all members in good standing. All are requested to bring Regalia, officers specially.

All who travel by the St. Louis, Vandalia and Terre Haute railway, must purchase tickets for the round trip when leaving home. Ask for ticket to Grand Convention at Vandalia, and you will receive one at one and one-fifth fare for the round trip.

The same reduction is made on the Illinois Central Railroad. Parties pay full fare to Convention; obtain certificate of attendance from Convention Secretary, which will secure ticket for one-fifth fare from the R. R. Agent at Vandalia or Effingham.

Good Templars, turn out in full force. The Lodge and its friends at Vandalia will stand nobly by the Order in this grand demonstration.

FRED. D. DALTON,
State Organizer of Conventions.

FEVER AND AGUE
and all diseases arising from malarious causes

St. Louis, Mo. July 18th, 1870.
Messrs. JAMES A. JACKSON & CO.—Gentlemen: The undersigned, having recently had the opportunity to test the value of the various compounds known under the name of "Stomach Bitters," wishes to compliment you upon the happy combinations of remedial agents which constitute your "Home Bitters." Upon being first made acquainted with the receipt of your preparation, I was at once convinced that its use would prove highly beneficial to all those who stand in need of a similar article, and since I have observed its effects in my private practice, I can only recommend it as the best tonic now offered to the public, one whose invigorating properties will be of equal advantage to the invalid, the convalescent and the well. C. GERICKE, M. D.,
213 Franklin Avenue.

Memphis, Tenn., Sept. 12, 1870.
It gives me pleasure to add mine to the many testimonials shown me in regard to the worth of the "Home Stomach Bitters." I have used them and examined the formula of which they are composed, and pronounce them the most agreeable bitters and best stomachic I have ever tried and would recommend them more especially in miasmatic regions as an anti-periodic.
JOS. E. LYNCH, M. D

Dr. DRAKE McDOWELL, late President of the Missouri Medical College, under date of July 15th, 1870, authorizes us to say, he has examined the formula for the preparation of the "Home Bitters," and finds it composed of the most valuable vegetable tonic known to the Pharmacopoeia. The combination he regards as excellent, and the process of manufacture such as to derive from the ingredients the full strength of their valuable properties. He further says: "You may refer to me as indorsing the 'Home Bitters' as a mild anti-periodic stimulant, of great value in miasmatic regions."

St. Louis, July 7th, 1870.
Messrs. J. A. JACKSON & CO.,—Sir: Having used your "Home Bitters" on the effects on others, examined the ingredients used in their composition, I am satisfied that, aside from their containing nothing injurious, they are the best I have ever tried. It is with pleasure that I recommend them to all persons desirous of taking bitters. JOHN T. TEMPLE, M. D.,
