He Likes Oklahoma.

Mr. Hal G. Eagleton, who has been spending two or three months at Oklahoma City, in Oklahoma territory, has returned, and is very much impressed with the possibilities of that country. Oklahoma City already has a population of 18,000 and is rapidly growing. Money is flush and real estate values are increasing at bewildering figures.

While there Mr. Eagleton saw a great deal of Messrs. Frank Clark and J. H. Curry. These gentlemen are already making their impress and personality felt at both the civil and criminal bar of their new home. They are now engaged on two important murder trials and a real estate case involving upwards of two hundred thousand dollars. If they win this civil suit, which is one of great importance, as it affects the interests of many parties, they will not only receive a fee ranging somewhere in the neighborhood of $50,000, but will firmly establish their reputation. They feel exceedingly sanguine of winning the suit. Their practice is growing rapidly and the firm of Clark and Curry is fast becoming the leading one in the territory.

Of course this is pleasant news to the friends of those gentlemen in this state whose name is legion.

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.

Almost everybody who reads the newspapers is sure to know of the wonderful cures made by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy.
